George L. Berry

President

GEORGE L. BERRY

Labor Leader, Farmer, Business Man and Statesman

To us the story of George L. Berry's life reads like pages from some of the books written by Horatio Alger, but the difference is that one is fiction while the other is a true story. From the life of Senator George L. Berry, President of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, Mr. Alger could have obtained sufficient material to write a masterpiece of this sort of narrative, which would contain all the thrills, would recount all the examples of perseverence and steadfast purpose of any recent heroes, and in addition would be intrinsically true, because the story of Major Berry's life is, to express it mildly, exceptional and extraordinary.

He was born in a one-room log cabin in the mountains of East Tennessee, and was left an orphan at the tender age of seven. From his Home State he was shipped to an aunt in Des Moines, Iowa, and from there to an institution in Illinois for the distribution of orphan children. He was sent to live with a family in Mississippi for adoption.

But by this time he was close to nine years old and he began to plan immediately to take things into his own hands. He planned a life of unusual activity and self-support. All through his life we find him exerting his unusual energy and ability to do worth while things and so when he was young the desire to go places and to do things, to use the vernacular, was too strong within him to permit his staying in one place unless unusual opportunities were afforded him.

So when he was nine years old he went out into the world on his own and Jackson, Mississippi was the first town he came to. The chatter of a lawn mower suggested a solution to the problem of his hunger, so he selected a promising looking house, applied for and got the job of cutting grass. This was in the yard of the mother of Mr. Frank Ballinger, publisher of the Jackson Evening News. Attracting the attention of this publisher the boy was taken into the office to sweep up the floor, run errands, and do other such work as befalls a printer's devil. He thus became identified with the printing industry at an early age and has maintained that contact ever since.

Soon he was able to feed sheets into the old newspaper press, and one of his jobs was carrying the papers.

At that time feeding sheets into a printing press was almost a trade. He found that it would allow him to travel, to see and learn things, by his own efforts, so he took advantage of the opportunity. Going to St. Louis he followed the partially learned trade of printing press feeder and joined the union as an assistant member there. He felt the urge and followed the advice of that great journalist, Horace Greeley, to go West.

He started with San Francisco as his goal. When he couldn't get a job in the pressroom he worked as section hand and brakeman on the railroad. Once he tried gold mining in Nevada. Frequently he practiced the "manly art" of self defense and participated in boxing exhibitions in order to occupy his mind and pick up additional money. It kept him fit and gave him an excellent opportunity of using up some of the surplus energy which nine hours of hard work did not use.

Finally he reached San Francisco and immediately got a job at his trade. He later held positions in a printing shop from job press feeder, press assistant, journeyman pressman, up to foreman and superintendent. He had had some experience in the labor movement as a member of the executive board, but he really began his union activities in San Francisco where he was first Chairman of the Executive Board, then President and Business Representative. These offices he held when elected as delegate from San Francisco to the New York Convention of the International Union.

To this convention came young George Berry as a delegate from San Francisco Pressmen's Union, little known as far as the general membership was concerned, and little dreaming that he was embarking upon an interesting and outstanding career in the labor movement of this country. This organization, however, at that particular time, faced certain momentous problems which seemed to call for stronger, more progressive leadership than usual. It faced the grave task of lowering hours of labor of its members from nine to eight per day. While this was the most pressing proposition before the convention there were other grave problems.

When the voting for a president was over, it was found that this responsibility of meeting these issues was on the shoulders of young George Berry, the newly elected twenty-four year old president. After taking office he soon found that there was great opposition to the eight-hour day from many employers and that the union had not sufficient funds to carry on unless the affairs of the organization were very carefully handled and some means employed to further its growth and strength. But, by his leadership the battle was won, and the young president, beginning with the ownership of a typewriter, desk, and a little cash, started to lay plans for a greater organization.

In 1909, however, the idea of establishing a home had taken hold and because of the persistent and enthusiastic support of this project by its, president, the organization, through convention action, went on record as favoring the move. A committee was appointed headed by President George L. Berry, which located and finally bought the present site of the properties of this organization at Pressmen's Home. So, from an organization owning practically nothing, the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, under the able leadership of Major George L. Berry, has grown in membership, in financial strength, and in prestige, and its properties at Pressmen's Home are worth millions. There is the Home for Superannuated Members, where those in the evening of their lives may come or they may remain at home and receive a pension, which is a system now being used; The Sanatorium, where members afflicted with tuberculosis may come and receive free of charge all medical attention, board, room, and clothes, and in fact, all the necessities of life; and then this organization operates the largest school of presswork in the world. The work turned out and the craftsmen turned out by that School has never been equalled in the history of the printing industry in America. Here its official organ, The American Pressman, is printed. No outside work is taken except an occasional job for some of the local unions, but all the work of the International Union is produced in the School.

Major George L. Berry, President of this organization, has stood for peace and progress in industry through negotiation and arbitration and this organization has arbitration agreements with all newspapers belonging to the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and contractual relations with about ninety-eight per cent of the daily newspapers published in the United States and Canada. It has recently signed many large national magazine publishing companies and is rapidly gaining in membership. Its president, Major George L. Berry, is well known in the labor movement in America and he has been called upon for important consignments by the United States government as a representative of labor. He has now been the president of this organization continuously for the past thirty years, and under his leadership the printing pressmen have progressed continually.

"The self-sacrifice of many men in promoting good citizenship and in the work of the general uplift of the human family is one of the most admirable and statesmanlike qualities of leadership and service that can be recorded and rendered.

"When one's mind is attune to this phase of our national life we are compelled to engage in personalities; and because of my interest not only in the newspaper business but in those with whom I am associated a personality occurs to me and that man is the president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America, Major George L. Berry."

The Editor of the Birmingham News, in an editorial March 5, 1938, stated:

"The News wishes to speak a word about George L. Berry. Besides being a senator from Tennessee, he is, and for many years has been, president of the International Printing Pressmen's Union. As such he is naturally well known to the newspaper publishers of this country. From its own experience and from its knowledge of the experience of publishers in general with Mr. Berry, this paper can say that he is regarded by newspaper management with admiration and respect as head of a great labor union identified with the publishing industry.

"As a union official, George L. Berry is known to publishers as 'a square shooter' and as an honorable, conscientious man in his dealings. He has always been highly scrupulous about living up to contracts and agreements. His influence has kept the relations of the International Printing Pressmen's Union with publishers on a very satisfactory basis from the standpoint of both the newspapers and the union. He has done a first-rate job as a union leader, and he has invariably conducted his affairs in that capacity with the highest integrity."

These are but two of thousands of voluntary commendations from newspaper publishers, presidents of the United States, and leading industrial and labor leaders which could easily be gathered together to show the high esteem which this labor leader, industrialist, and statesman is held by men in the most important positions.

He has had intimate personal contacts with President Woodrow Wilson, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Lord Northcliff, Lloyd George. He holds membership in the French Legion of Honor, the American Society of Military Engineers. He is an Honorary Member of the National Society of Operative Printers and Assistants of England, of the Printing Machine Managers Society of Great Britain, Honorary Member of St. Brides Masonic Lodge of England, as past National Vice Commander of the American Legion. He is a member of the Elks, Moose, Eagles and Odd Fellows.

He has held the office of President of an international union longer than any other person in the labor movement of this country now holding a similar position.

Major George L. Berry has been referred to recently as the executive type by some who disagreed with him politically. He is that and more! If the occasion demands it he can be high-powered and unswerving, but he always considers the rights and respects the opinions of others. If those who refer to him as an executive type mean that he is not a politician (and that was the inference) then they are right. He is not a politician in one sense of the word. He seeks to serve humanity and to contribute his share toward the happiness, prosperity and advancement of the masses of peoples of this country. If by chance the pursuit of this endeavor lies along the road to political activity, if it requires the holding of a high public office and the people insist that his duty to human progress calls for that particular work, he will answer that call as quickly as he has the challenge of industry with its perplexing economic troubles and he will go as far in one direction as he has gone in the other. He is not a politician but has demonstrated that he possesses the qualifications of a statesman.

The reader will observe that in the foregoing sketch of Major Berry, no mention has been made of schooling. Proof that schooling and education are not synonymous is furnished by this stalwart, 185-pound, six-foot, keen-minded man. George L. Berry admits that he never attended an established school of any kind a day in his life. He never took correspondence courses of any sort. He couldn't read or write until he was sixteen years of age. But who shall deny that this brilliant, powerful man is educated?

At an early age he became a buck private in the Spanish-American War in the 3rd Mississippi Infantry, and was a major in the A. E. F. during the World War. After the Armistice was signed he was transferred to Paris and acted as Labor Advisor on the American Commission to negotiate peace.

Prior to going into military service, he was a member of the American Industrial Commission which visited Europe by direction of the President of the United States in January 1918.

He has taken several important trips to Europe. For instance, he was delegate representing the American Federation of Labor to the British Trades Union Congress at Newport, Wales in 1912; delegate to the International Economic Congress at Zurich, Switzerland in 1912; and delegate to International Printers' Congress at Stuttgart, Germany in 1912.

Get under the skin of this apparently abstruse, austere disciplinarian and you'll find a warm, amiable man, ready and eager to welcome your friendship. Win his friendship and you have a staunch, steadfast, trustworthy ally who will stand shoulder to shoulder with you and make your interests his interests, one who will overlook your peccadillos and temper justice with clemency.

George L. Berry is truly a progressive and constructive labor leader. He fought and worked his way up through the ranks to become one of the greatest industrial leaders of our time. At the present time he is one of the United States Senators from Tennessee. To him the greatest pleasure comes from serving his fellowmen. All of his endeavors, all of his training, all of his interests have been along that line.

Humanitarian And Educational Work Meets With Success

Printing Pressmen are Successfully Developing Craftsmanship and Caring For Their Sick and Aged Members at Pressmen's Home

To appreciate the activities carried on at Pressmen's Home in East Tennessee, we must place these among the functions performed by unique institutions maintained for humanitarian and educational work such as one encounters now and then in various parts of our country, otherwise, we fail to get the true significance of the undertaking. There is a story back of these accomplishments for it is recorded that the organization launching this project has, since its inception, advanced from one having a typewriter and little office furniture to an influential organization possessing assets totaling a few million dollars, and yet, none of these institutions are operated for profit nor is there great wealth backing them. They are maintained from per capita tax paid by forty to fifty thousand men who are striving to contribute their full share to the advancement of their craft and to society in general.

From the ownership of one typewriter to the owner of a small modern city in a comparatively few years is a success that is worthy of note and of which any organization of this kind may justly feel proud. Certainly it savors of industrial romance and the story is of interest to all those who participate or are interested in any way in the operation of our industries. But this story is not to point out a great financial success, but rather, the accomplishments of an educational and humanitarian nature that are constructive in every sense of the word.

These institutions are operated by the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, an organization formed October 18, 1889, and composed of men who do the actual printing of practically all of the daily newspapers throughout the United States and Canada, and those who are engaged in the magazine and commercial end of the printing industry who operate all types of printing presses. Through this constructive work the organization has demonstrated that it is one of those modern American labor unions which realizes its responsibility to industry and to society, and that it has splendid leadership fully capable of meeting its full responsibilities.

The three main institutions at Pressmen's Home are a Sanatorium for the treatment of members afflicted with tuberculosis, a Home for Superannuated Members, and a Trade School specializing in the development of high-class craftsmen.

The Sanatorium: Through this institution those who have contracted this dread disease, tuberculosis, are cared for in every way, are furnished free of charge medical attention, clothes, food, and private rooms; in fact, all of the necessities of life. These are furnished free of charge and from the treatments received here many have been able to return to their homes and to industry as arrested cases which enable them to take up again their life's work where they left off without being a burden on the industry or society in general.

Home for Superannuated Members: This institution is also operated for humanitarian purposes. It is known as the Home for Superannuated Members where those who have served their time and are no longer able to carry on because of old age, may come and rest in peace and security in the evening of their lives. Operated jointly with this Home is the Old Age Pension system which is paid to those entitled to it who do not desire to come to the Home, and through which the aged are taken care of in that period of life's economic stoppage.

Service to Men, Employers, and Manufacturers: In the Technical Trade School research and experiments are continually being made in the interest of the pressmen, the pressroom superintendents, and the employing printer so as to find out better means of producing printing and better tools with which to accomplish this. Manufacturers of printing presses, supplies, and all pressroom equipment have generously cooperated with the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union in the conduct of the educational system because they realize that it is a distinct advantage to them as well as to the industry as a whole and so new machines and accessories are sent to the School for trial and demonstration purposes.

The School maintains a department for giving individual service to pressmen or to printing establishments that are experiencing any difficulty in producing certain jobs or who want and need information about new methods which will permit them to turn out a certain kind of work more economically or better. Pressmen experiencing any kind of difficulty in their work may write for advice and information and thousands have taken advantage of this opportunity. Employers confront-

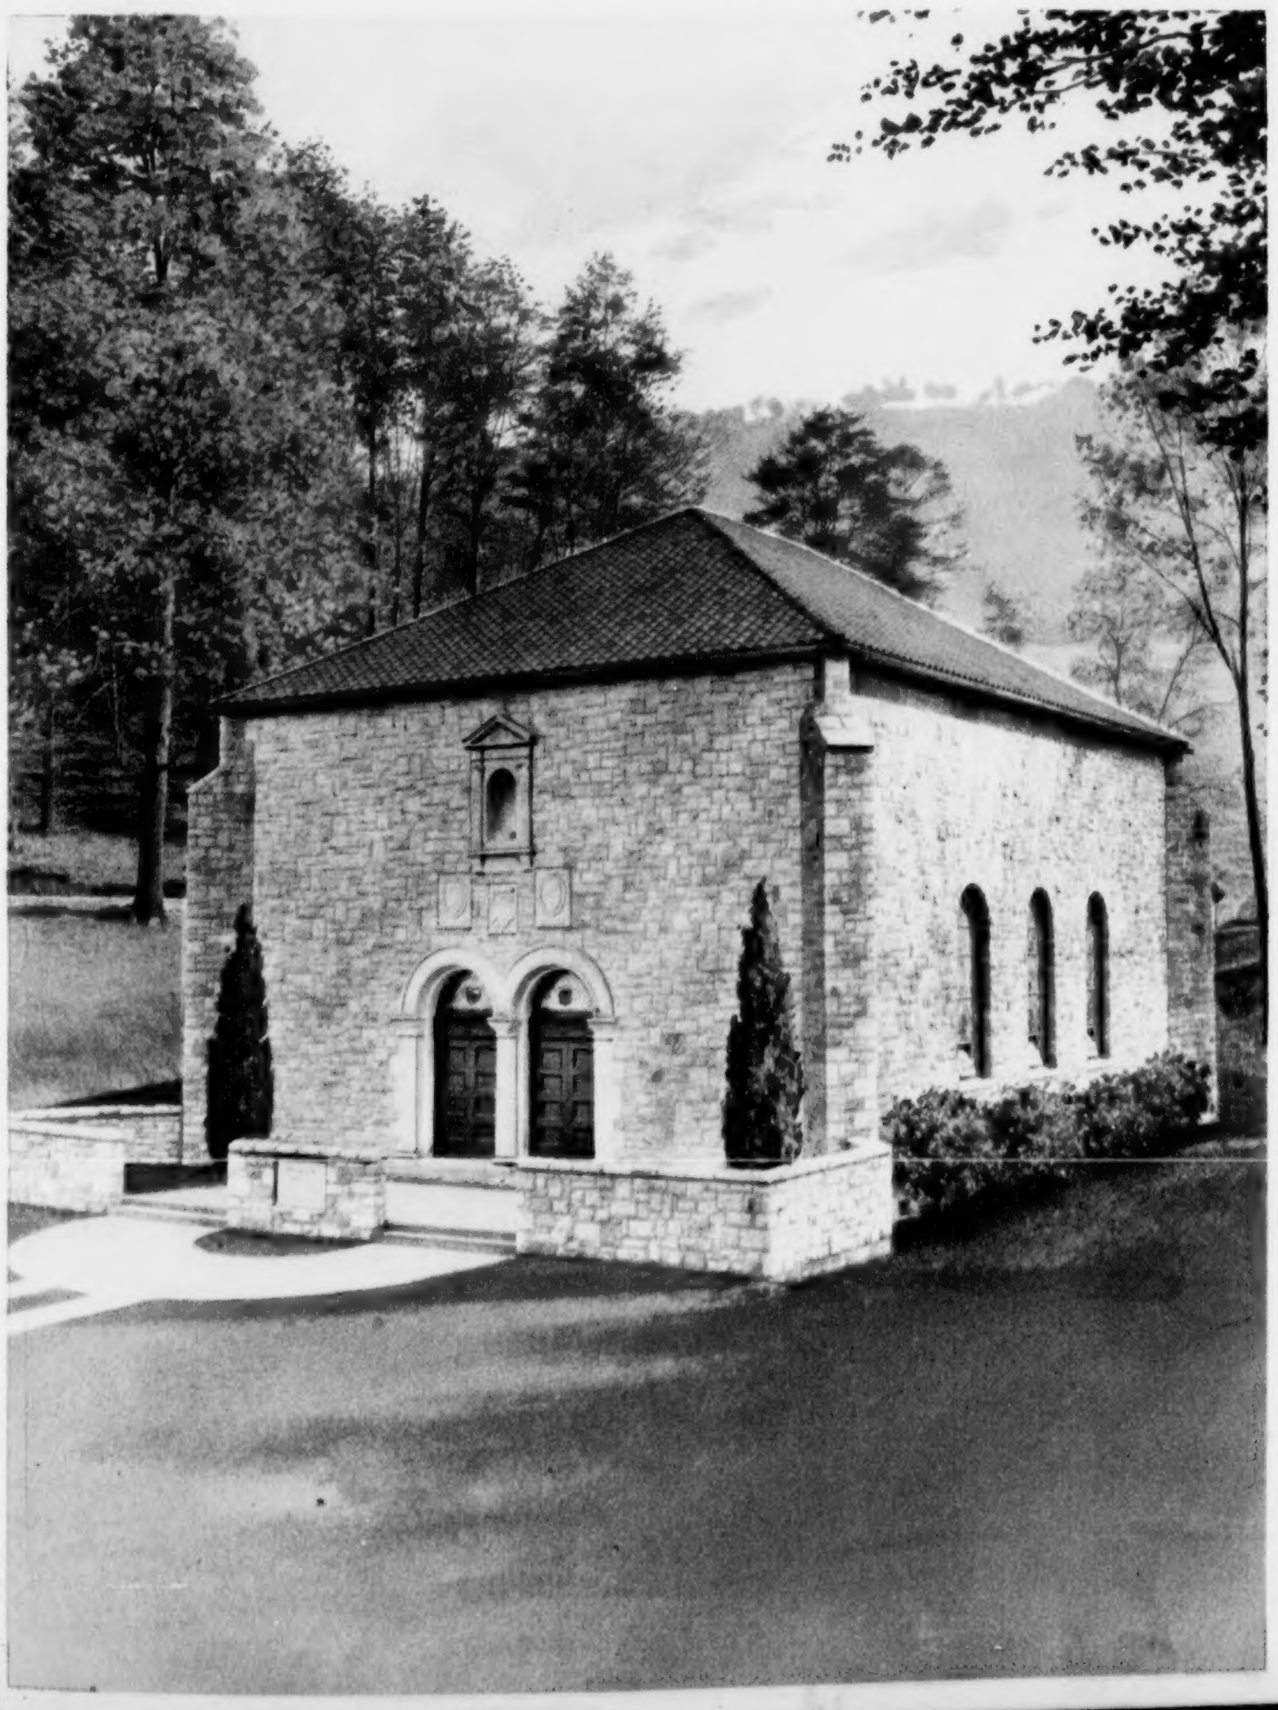
The American Pressman: The official organ of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union is a monthly labor technical magazine which occupies a high position in the printing industry because it is recognized as the leading technical pressroom magazine of the world. It is devoted to constructive trade unionism and to technical knowledge of printing. It has a large circulation in the United States and Canada and is sent to every member of the organization. In it are discussed technical problems so it fits in and is an integral part of the vast educational program of this organization. It brings to each member the newest innovations in machines, methods, and processes each month and discusses technical problems that have been submitted either to the Technical Trade School or direct to The American Pressman. Through it pressmen in all parts of the country doing various kinds of work on all different kinds and types of printing presses share their knowledge with others and receive the benefit of knowledge gained by manufacturers and leading technicians in this country. Its editorial policy is sound and through the editorial pages and particularly the President's Letter, written each month by Senator George L. Berry, constructive progressive views are presented to encourage individual initiative and development to preserve American ideals and democratic institutions and to further, of course, the interest of this truly American labor union embracing all pressmen, pressroom foremen and superintendents in the commercial and newspaper plants in the United States and Canada.

Headquarters of Organization: It will be seen by now that Pressmen's Home is not an institution, but rather a town located in East Tennessee having its own post office, filling stations, general store, as well as outstanding institutions. Here are located too the headquarters of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, an organization extending throughout the United States and Canada. All business of the organization is conducted through the headquarters located in the Administration Building at Pressmen's Home. Here are the offices of the President, the Secretary-Treasurer of the organization as well as those of all the departments.



Pressmen Maintain High Standards of Competency

The success and progress of industries such as printing and publishing depends to a great extent upon the competency of the skilled workers employed therein. One of the outstanding examples of this fact is the vocation of the printing pressman because the success of the machines which he is operating and the finished product depend upon his individual skill. His is an ever-changing vocation because new methods, processes and machines are constantly coming out which he must master or fall behind in the onward march of progress.

It has oftentimes been charged by the enemies of organized labor that the unions paid no attention to the competency of a man and that they demanded the same wages for all regardless of how competent one might be or how incompetent another. This, of course, has been proved to be mere propaganda. Trade unions do not hold back anyone competent of earning more than the scale. In fact, they encourage individual initiative and the payment of higher salaries than the scale calls for to those men competent to demand such salaries. The scale being recognized as the minimum to be paid for men who cannot command this premium or who are employed on jobs calling for the minimum wage determined by what is known as the basic minimum scale.

The best answer that we know of to the false accusation that labor unions are unconcerned about the competency of the individual members is found in the educational work carried on by certain unions in the printing industry. Because of the diversified work and the various types of machines involved the educational system of the printing pressmen is necessarily the most complicated and the most thorough of any in the printing industry and possibly in any other industry in this country.

This educational system starts with the Apprentice Pressman—the man who is gaining experience and is training for the job of journeyman pressman. Realizing that certain opportunities beyond those that could be given in the average shop were necessary for apprentice pressmen to enable them to master the intricacies of a diversified and ever-changing trade, the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union adopted a rule making it compulsory that every man who received a journeyman's card must first go through a period of training that would supplement the experience that he obtained in his daily work. Under this system these apprentice pressmen are given free of charge a correspondence course which embraces the things that they encounter in their everyday work and goes beyond this so as to enable them to become technically trained for their future work. The course is free, but it is compulsory because this labor organization requires every apprentice pressman throughout the United States and Canada to be examined quarterly by a local educational committee and right there we see a new type of training through correspondence heretofore practically unknown.

In nearly every city and town where there is a local union established, and there are about five hundred of them maintained by this organization, an educational committee or examining board has been set up by the International and the local unions. Men are selected for these boards according to their ability as craftsmen or executives and according to their willingness and desire to share their knowledge with their apprentice pressmen members. This board makes regular reports to International headquarters on every apprentice pressman in the country and finally the apprentice is required to stand an examination conducted through the educational department of the International Union, the Technical Trade School at Pressmen's Home.

So we find this modern American trade union vitally interested in giving its apprentice pressman members an opportunity of becoming competent skilled workmen before or by the time they are eligible for journeyman membership. Several thousand men have enrolled for this course. Five different courses are conducted to meet the demands of the apprentice pressman educational system of the organization. But this, as important as it is, is merely the beginning of the educational system of this organization. It is recognized that labor unions made up of highly skilled men have something tangible to sell the employer and industry. Their shrewd leaders realize the fact that the more highly the skill of the individual member can be raised the easier it is to sell one's labor for more, and the easier good shop conditions can be maintained. It is obvious, too, that under a set-up of this kind better relations between employer and employee can be maintained and the peace and prosperity of the industry promulgated. So, the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union has established a higher system of technical training for its members which reaches from the time the member becomes a journeyman on through his activity in the trade, whether that be as a journeyman or as an executive.

In such a diversified, ever-changing trade such as this an extensive educational program is a necessity. This organization maintains it because it is interested in keeping its members informed on all advances and in the progress of the entire industry.

The Technical Trade School: All educational work of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union goes through its Technical Trade School, owned and operated by that organization at Pressmen's Home, Tennessee, where its general headquarters are located. This includes the apprentice pressman educational courses which have been explained. In addition to this work five different correspondence courses are conducted in advanced pressmanship for journeymen and foremen. These courses embrace all kinds of printing from job printing on small presses, up to the largest and speediest magazine and newspaper work. These courses are conducted in the orthodox manner of having those taking the course write out answers to questions of each lesson and send these answers direct to the Technical Trade School for corrections and suggestions.

The Technical Trade School has the most extensive and modern equipment of any school of its kind in the world, and no school in the history of the industry has turned out better work or better craftsmen because, as far as the educational work that can be taken at the School is concerned, all courses are advanced ones. Pressmen and pressroom foremen come to the School from all parts of the United States and Canada in order to receive a highly intensive course which might be general in its scope or confined to

Chattanooga Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union

Many years ago a local union of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union was established in Chattanooga when a few forward-looking pressroom workers met and formed what is known as Local No. 165. This local union has been in existence ever since. The Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union has jurisdiction over all presses that print and its members do the actual printing or presswork on all the daily papers in Chattanooga and practically all of the commercial shops. It is affiliated with the Chattanooga Central Labor Union and the Allied Printing Trades Council of Chattanooga. It has members in pressrooms in Chattanooga and vicinity. Several of its present members are employed in Dalton, Georgia.

Chattanooga Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union has had its good and bad years—years in which progress was made and years in which it fought for its existence.

The members of Chattanooga Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union are substantial citizens of Chattanooga and vicinity. They are reliable, skilled workmen who earn comparatively good wages and spend them at home.

Today this organization is making splendid progress under the direction of progressive officers who are constantly working to advance the interest of pressroom workers in this vicinity. Its present officers are:

O. F. BURKHART, Executive Board

ALBERT CAIN, Sergeant-at-Arms

PAUL REYNOLDS, President

ARTHUR GREGORY, Executive Board

ERNEST ROSS, Charter Member

WHITE ABEL, Secretary-Treasurer

ROY C. REYNOLDS, Business Agent and Recording Secretary

certain phases of the trade and industry in which these men are particularly interested. Most of those who come have had considerable experience in the industry. Some are foremen of shops sent here by their employers. Others come on their own initiative and at their own expense in order to pick up new ideas or master new machines or processes.

One of the features of this particular type of training and the one which, above all else, permits the School to maintain its reputation for producing the best work and the highest class craftsmen, is that courses are laid out to suit the requirements of the individuals who come to the School. One man, for instance, might be very capable in producing a certain line of printing but knows nothing of high-class process work, and his course must be laid out differently from the man who comes to the School mainly to catch on to new machines. Another may come in order to learn an entirely different or new process and it is highly important that he receives intensive training in those things so he may return to his plant and immediately get better production or a higher quality of work in order that his plant may meet competition brought on by these new machines or new processes.

Sometimes technological advance, while never radical in this industry but constant nevertheless, throws a group of men out of work, or else lowers their efficiency because of their lack of knowledge of the machines or processes which may be gradually taking the place of those with which these men are familiar. These men may have spent fifteen or twenty years at a highly skilled trade which has challenged their ability, and may have been successful, but are suddenly confronted with the problem of change and style of learning new machines and of mastering new processes. It costs thousands of dollars for industry to bring these men up to where they are. It costs only a few hundred dollars to keep them there, but if some effort were not made to change the man's ability and add to his knowledge then such men would not be as valuable to the industry nor would they be capable of maintaining their living standards, and so the educational department of the organization strives to overcome any bad effect that technological advance may otherwise have on the men and on the industry.

Engineering Department. Some years ago when newspapers began to use more illustrations, put in new machinery and to speed up the process of manufacturing newspapers, the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union felt obligated because of the pressure exerted upon it to establish a newspaper engineering department through which a service, the like of which had never been available, could be given to newspaper publishers throughout the United States and Canada or to any of the mechanical departments thereof. Around five hundred of the largest newspapers in the country have taken advantage of this service. That many papers come to the Engineering Department from all over North America each day. Suggestions are sent to the heads of every department and to the publisher calculated to help in the maintenance of a high quality with tremendously high speeds. Engineers have been sent into several hundred of the largest newspaper plants in the country to cooperate with the superintendents of the various departments and the publishers in an effort to speed up production and maintain a high quality of work or to assist in any problem that might arise so that the newspaper plants throughout the country may progress and operate smoothly and give to their subscribers a better printed, cleaner, more readable daily newspaper.

Service Bureau: There are few if any organizations either among the employers or among trade unions that have a more modern and efficient department for the identification and the dissemination of facts respecting our economic standards than has this union. This department is known as the Service Bureau. This statistical and fact-finding department issues, among other things, a monthly bulletin conveying changing circumstances as they relate to wage increases and reduction in hours in the newspaper and commercial printing fields, new contracts, new local unions chartered, local unions in arbitration and a synopsis of arbitration awards that occurred during the month. It supplies facts concerning general conditions and conditions in specific locals to be used in negotiation and arbitration contact with the employers and places in the hands of all representatives and local unions true facts which enable them not only to present their arguments to the employer, but it also helps in arriving at a fair conclusion as to the ability of the industry to advance.

Of interest to those who come to Pressmen's Home are other institutions and other activities which go to make this a well-rounded community. For instance, there is the magnificent Memorial Chapel, erected in memory of the members of this organization who served and who were killed in the World War. This is a beautiful sandstone building made from stone quarried in the mountains on the three-thousand acres of land owned by this organization. It is non-denominational.

A modern hotel is operated on the grounds for the benefit of those who come to the School, those who are employed in the offices and for the general public. A large natatorium is operated during the summer months and the athletic field, mountain hiking, etc., add healthful pleasure to those living here.

The first work in erecting the institutions at Pressmen's Home was started in 1910, after Major George L. Berry, then and now President of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union had returned to his childhood home, having been away since his seventh birthday. During this trip he saw the beauties of East Tennessee and was impressed with the possibilities here. He returned to the headquarters which were then in Cincinnati, Ohio, and sold the idea of bringing the work of the organization to this section of the country. He has been President of this organization since 1907.

All in all the accomplishments of this modern American labor union have been continuous and this organization has enjoyed a steady growth. The operation of the institutions at Pressmen's Home has undoubtedly awakened members of this organization to their responsibilities as American citizens and these institutions stand as a monument to constructive trade unionism of this country.

RADIO STATION WAPO TELLS UNION IT WILL NEVER SIGN CONTRACT FOR UNION SHOP

From Start of Organization of Radio Workers Manager Patterson Has Tried To Kill Off Union, Is Charged

Radio Station WAPO, through Manager Raymond Patterson, told Local 662, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, that it would never sign a union shop agreement with the union.

As a result, pickets are telling the world that the station is unfair to radio workers. At the regular meeting of Central Body next Monday evening permission will be asked to declare the station "unfair to organized labor."

It will be recalled that last month two of the original members of the new local were fired for something or other, according to Mr. Patterson. After a bit of talk, two weeks later Mr. Patterson re-instated the two employes and paid them for time lost, and also agreed to negotiate an agreement.

When subsequent conferences were held Mr. Patterson said that he would not sign a union shop agreement.

Station WDOD is solidly organized, and its management is now negotiating an agreement which union officials believe will be consummated in the near future.

Co-operation from merchants who advertise over non-union WAPO have shown a fine spirit toward members of labor. The Bill Penney Auto Accessory company on Dodson avenue, it is reported, immediately told Mr. Patterson that until things were satisfactorily settled with Local 662, that he could not broadcast.

Other merchants, such as Brener Dept. store, Seven-Up, Family Clothing company, Loveman's and the Modern Electric company are insisting that their programs in the future must not be antagonistic to organized labor.

Employes of a radio station must necessarily have quite a bit of technical training, and WAPO works these people seven days per week, averaging nine to ten hours per day. No pay is given for overtime.

"Mr. Patterson's apparent attitude toward organized labor is certainly not fair to the advertisers who use that station's services," said President Jean Paul Jones, of Local 662. "These advertisers pay the station to present their names before the public in a favorable manner. Yet the station is taking their money and broadcasting their names in face of pickets caused by policies antagonistic toward Labor. Labor in Chattanooga has tried to be fair and just, and as a result we believe that we merit the support of business people. We believe that business people will support us in our attempt to secure better conditions of work and living wages that are commensurate with the knowledge and skill required of us."

Colored Teachers To Meet Thursday

Mountain City Teachers, Local 428, will meet Thursday afternoon, May 12, at 4:30 o'clock in the K. of P. Hall at 425½ E. 9th St.

There will be the annual election of officers and all members are urged to be present.

Local Barbers Have Fine Session With Long as Guest

State Barber Examiners Also Meet Monday to Examine Applicants.

Barbers' Local 415 met in regular session Monday night, with a good crowd and a lot of interest.

Brother D. C. Long, chairman of the Barber Board for the State, addressed the meeting.

Erskine Mabee, secretary of the Central Labor Union, also addressed the meeting, urging the co-operation of the barbers with all organized labor.

Committees were appointed to visit the other local unions in the Central Body to discuss mutual problems with them.

The State Board of Barber Examiners held the regular examinations in Chattanooga Monday night in Cochran's Barber shop on Market street. B. C. Hughes, of Jackson, is chairman of the board; L. B. Crick, of Winchester, secretary, and D. C. Long, of Johnson City, is the East Tennessee member.

Brother Long came to Chattanooga Friday night and spent Saturday and Sunday investigating violations of barbering without license and Sunday barbering.

Charlie Johnson (colored) and Robert Hixon (colored) were convicted of violating the law.

The board goes to Knoxville for examinations on Wednesday. This will complete the circuit of the examinations for the State.

The teachers' union, an A. F. of L. affiliate, is reported as already having local chapters in 50 leading universities, and the Federation motto, "Education for Democracy and Democracy for Education," is well known to all.

NOTICE

Chattanooga Central Labor Union will meet Monday night in regular session, Central Labor Hall, West Seventh Street, at 7:30 p.m. All delegates are requested and expected to be present.

Meatcutters Win Brief Tilt With Langston Markets

Mack Ball, business agent for Meatcutters, Local 600, announces that all difficulties with George Langston's Meat markets, located at 20 West Main street and 3921 St. Elmo avenue, have been ironed out and Brother Langston is operating a 100 per cent. union meat market.

The Meatcutters' Local wishes to thank their many friends in the labor movement who have helped them bring about this settlement and urge the customers of this market to go back to see Mr. Langston now.

50,000 MORE LOSE JOBS IN MARCH

Washington.—Fifty thousand additional workers in industry were laid off in March, Secretary of Labor Perkins said in her monthly report on employment.

Miss Perkins said that usually March employment showed a seasonal increase of from 200,000 to 300,000. She estimated that employment in March of this year was 2,450,000 less than in March, 1937.

The "only optimistic note" in the monthly employment report, she said, was the fact that weekly factory payrolls showed a gain of $200,000. She attributed this to factories working longer schedules as employment in manufacturing industries decreased contra-seasonally.

In March, she said, about 40,000 factory workers were laid off.

The secretary said that 32 states and the District of Columbia reported employment declines but that "gains were substantial in Washington and Oregon as the furniture and lumber industries became more active, and in some of the southern states."

She said that factory employment declined 6. of 1 per cent. and now stood at 81.7 of the 1923-'25 average. Payrolls declined only .1 of 1 per cent. and the index now stands at 73.3 per cent.

Agricultural employment showed a seasonal increase, but Miss Perkins would not estimate extent of the advance.

To be trusted is a greater compliment than to be loved.—McDonald.

PROMINENT NEGRO EDUCATOR TO VISIT MOUNTAIN CITY TEACHERS' UNION THURSDAY

Howard University Professor Will Arrive to Spend Three Days With Unionist Teachers of His Race. Will Be Entertained.

Vice-President Doxey A. Wilkerson, of the American Federation of Teachers, will spend three days next week visiting Local 426, composed of colored teachers in the Chattanooga and Hamilton county schools.

Mr. Wilkerson is professor of education at Howard university, of Washington, D. C., and prominent in negro educational circles.

He has done considerable work on the report of the president's advisory committee on education which has recently been sent to congress. His analysis of the problems of federal aid to education was published last year in pamphlet form by the American Federation of Teachers and was widely heralded as one of the most able analyses of the question.

Mr. Wilkerson will meet with Local 426 on Thursday afternoon and with the executive committee Thursday night. Full plans of entertainment and meetings with other groups of teachers will be announced later by the officers of the local.

Tracy City Firm Locks Out Bakers, To Break Contract

Once more Tennessee workers are forced to fight for their right to organize and enforce signed agreements by management. The Bagenstoss bakery in Tracy City for a year had a signed contract with Bakery and Confectionery Workers.

Last week the company, in face of their signed agreement, cut wages and lengthened hours, according to Curtis Sims, business agent for the bakery workers of the Chattanooga local. The Tracy City boys are in the Chattanooga local.

As a result of refusal of the union to tear up their agreement, every employe is locked out and the fight is on.

Once more it is borne out that the plea for incorporation of unions in order to insure responsibility is not well founded. Rather, it is in nearly all cases where the employer does not live up to his signed agreements.

New electric lamps, known as "Fluorescent lumiline lamps," produce a relatively cool light with many times the illumination per watt of a standard filament electric light with little current. The lamps light ceilings with high efficiency and low cost and are particularly well adapted to locations where heat is objectionable. The light produced is a near approach to natural daylight.

We do not count a man's years until he has nothing else to count. —Emerson.

First Round Won By Bakers From Benn-Hubb Firm

Labor Board Examiner Recommends That All Strikers Be Re-employed Within Ten Days.

First round was won in the national labor relations board by the Bakery and Confectionery union in their case against the Bennett-Hubbard Candy company, according to report received this week.

The Bennett-Hubbard company had caused its employes to strike in defense of their union nearly two years ago, and had successfully employed scabs to take the strikers' jobs in the candy plant.

Complaint was made before the labor board, hearing of which was held in Chattanooga last month.

Officials of the union have received recommendations of the trial examiner that the company must re-employ all strikers within ten days of their application for their jobs back. In event the strikers are not put back to work the company must pay them wages if they were working.

The company is also ordered to deal with the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' union as the sole bargaining agency.

The trial examiner's decision must be approved by the labor board in Washington. Only in rare instances does the Washington office overturn the trial examiner.

Retail Clerks Sign Up Two Kansas City Firms

Kansas City, Mo.—Recent signing of a contract by Retail Clerks' Union No. 1254 with the Union Clothing company, now 100 per cent. organized, brought also a promise to stock up on merchandise bearing the union label.

Retail Grocery Clerks' Local No. 1282 has been making similar progress, recently getting a good agreement with the Royal Food Stores after several months of negotiation. The union contract provides for standard union wages and working conditions, including the 48-hour workweek, with time and a half for overtime.

Highway Death and Manners

(From "Father Meets Son," by J. P. McEvoy.)

It doesn't matter so much if you are walking down the street and you are rude enough to push someone aside; but if you are rude enough to push him aside with a 3-ton motor going 60 miles an hour, you'll kill him.

You can elbow your way through a crowd, if you are impolite, and do no damage at all. But when you elbow your way through traffic with your bad manners stepped up a hundred horsepower, you're bound to do a lot of damage to a lot of innocent people.

For every accident caused by high speeding, there are a thousand caused by low breeding. Is it coincidence that the nation which leads in fatalities lags in formalities? The American may not be the most uncivil citizen on two feet, but he is certainly the prize terror on four wheels.

New York Investigates Hours and Wages in Candy Industry

New York City.—A detailed survey of wages, hours and other working conditions in the candy factories of New York state has just been completed by the division of women in industry and minimum wage of the state department of labor, and the statistical analysis of the findings is now under way.

As soon as possible after the analysis is completed a report of the investigation will be submitted to a minimum wage board for the candy industry, which is soon to be appointed. If the report shows that any considerable number of workers in the industry are being paid substandard wages, the minimum wage act, now in force in the laundries of the state, may be applied to the candy industry as well.

APPRECIATION

This is Number One of the twenty-third volume of The Labor World. We start off on a new volume with an issue which we believe most people will agree is about as interesting in material and as an exposition of the printing art as other spring editions.

Gotten up primarily as an introduction to the annual convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, The Labor World this year says "how do you do" to the forty-first convention which will meet this June in Johnson City. Merchants have been most kind to our paper. Possibly the merchants believe that readers of The Labor World have been very kind to them in return. Notwithstanding various up and downs in the weekly newspaper world, labor papers in particular, we pledge the new volume to follow our past history of presenting a sane and honest picture of organized labor in our community.

The Labor World is an asset to this community, we believe. While we never hesitate in entering into a controversy where our cause and the community's welfare is concerned, even though the scrap becomes long and drawn out, The Labor World is never found in the camp of scaremongers or harebrained projects.

Our business policy has been to approach merchants on the basis of selling an advertising investment. They are never asked to "contribute" an advertisement because "the boys" would be pleased. When it seems to us that a merchant has that idea in mind, he is told that his advertisement is not desired. Unless he believes that he gets good returns from his Labor World investment, we lose interest in soliciting the business. We believe that this policy has paid us in increased respect.

Sometimes the editor of a labor paper leads a precarious life. Especially when the paper is not his personal property, but is owned by an active and progressive labor movement does he find that he must be on his toes at all times. Being human, we have made errors many times, but all in all, the movement and the public has been kind. Without a large measure of kindness and charity, instead of taking a short vacation immediately following an issue of this size, the editor would be carted off to an insane asylum.

We hope that the same degree of cooperation and forgiveness received in the past will be continued, in return for which we pledge to work harder and more attentively.

The job of compiling advertising and written stories in such an issue as this one is too much for one man. We owe a particular debt of gratitude to Mr. George F. Brimlow, an employe of the Chattanooga Times composing room, a member of the Typographical union. Mr. Brimlow, through his unusual and already recognized ability as an author, is responsible for three of the special articles in this issue, which we believe will be read with interest by all classes of citizens who will receive the paper.

The typographical union is proud of Mr. Brimlow's book which has just been placed on sale at T. H. Payne's bookstore, entitled "The Bannock Indian War of 1878." He is already preparing another work which will deal with the Civil War, with particular reference to the deep south and the Army of the West.

Comment On World Events

Hitler has made it clear that Czechoslovakia is the next country marked for Nazi conquest; and this is a matter of the widest world interest. Czechoslovakia is the one island of liberalism in Central Europe. It has a liberal form of government, universal suffrage—women included, never even has squinted toward dictatorship, and critics of a dozen nations have declared Thomas G. Masaryk, Czechoslavkia's first president, the wisest statesman of the last half century.

Yet this country, much in the news and sure to be more so, is little in the textbooks. It seems well to put together a summary of facts about country and people.

Czechoslovakia is a country of not quite 55,000 square miles—almost exactly the size of the state of Iowa. On the map, it looks like a wedge which a boy has whittled out of wood, thick end to the west. It is entirely inland; its commerce reaches the outer world chiefly by three rivers which touch its territory: the Danube, flowing to the Black sea; the Elbe, to the North sea, and the Oder, to the Baltic. All these streams have been internationalized so far as commerce is concerned; and Czechoslovakia, one of the most highly industrialized countries in Europe, has plenty of commerce.

The population is about 15,000,000 and belongs to three groups. The Czechs and Slovaks outnumber all others, and are practically a unit in the present crisis. The Ruthenians, in the thin eastern end of the wedge, asked to be put in the new republic at the Versailles conference; and seem satisfied with their choice. Then there are about 3,000,000 German-speaking people, some of the descendants of German immigrants, some the result of a Germanizing campaign of centuries.

Bohemia, the largest single part of the present republic, was crushed by the Imperialists in the 30-years war, in November, 1620—a few weeks before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock. The land was confiscated for foreign adventurers, and the people largely reduced to serfdom. They began the revival of their national spirit during the Napoleonic wars, but Masaryk was the son of a serf, and missed being born to serfdom himself only by a year or so.

The Czechs and Slovaks were bitterly opposed to the attack by Austria-Hungary on Serbia, which opened the World war; and though forced to the battlefield, wherever possible they refused to fight. One regiment from Prague went bodily over to the Russians, even to the band. No Czech or Slovak soldier was allowed to have a white handkerchief, lest he should make signals with it to the enemy; but they went over the lines by tens of thousands. The Czechoslovak legion was the flower of the Russian army; and when Russia quit the war, between 60,000 and 80,000 Czechs and Slovaks marched across Russia and Siberia to Vladivostock in the most astounding trek in all history. Some of them got back to Europe through the Suez and Panama canals; quite a number went through Canada, and one batch stopped at Norfolk on their way.

Resolution, Death of Gordon Russell

Typographical Union No. 89 at its meeting Sunday expressed its sorrow over the death of Gordon Russell, of Miami, who was formerly an active Chattanooga trades unionist.

Whereas, on Sunday, April 24, Gordon H. Russell passed from this life, and, whereas, he was for many years a militant member of Chattanooga Typographical Union, we deem it proper that our union take note of his passing.

"Gordon Russell joined No. 89 in 1889 and served as president a number of times and as delegate to International Typographical Convention, 1892, as well as serving on executive committee and in other official positions. In 1896, he was named by President William B. Prescott as one of a committee of five on the nine-hour day. This committee held meetings in Indianapolis and planned the fight for the nine-hour day in all jurisdictions.

"Some years later, Gordon H. Russell, then president of No. 89, negotiated the first eight-hour contract for this union. A man of strong convictions, he was fearless in defending principles and a strong supporter of his friends. Mr. Russell in the 90s established the Labor Leader in Chattanooga, furnishing a needed mouthpiece for organized labor. He served as president of the Tennessee State Federation of Labor and as president of the Chattanooga Cenral Labor Union, of which he was an active member for many years.

"Mr. Russell located in Miami in 1911 and some time later became publisher of the Miami News, which became one of the strongest and ablest Labor papers in the South. Mr. Russell served Miami union in many capacities, being named delegate to the International Convention a number of times. He was one of the last of "the old school" of militant and sacrificing unionists.

"He was a devoted husband and father and we desire to express to his children our sympathy and our own sense of loss in his death.

"Be it resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our dead brother, a copy furnished the Labor World and Miami Citizen, and a copy spread on our minutes.

LABEL LEADERS

By BROWNIE HOPPER

A little incident happened in the office this week that is particularly appropriate to tell about, since Mother's day is only a few days away.

The telephone rang and a lady asked me if I could give her the address of a certain person. She said she knew he was a member of some union because he got The Labor World every week while he was at home.

It was her son she was trying to find. He had not been home since January and she had been in the hospital most of that time because of injuries received in a fall. But she was worried about him and wanted us to try to locate him and ask him to come by to see her. Fortunately we found him and gave him her message.

Keep in touch with the folks at home!

A personal thought . . . Yesterday my dad started back to work again, exactly seven months from the day he and my mother were injured in an automobile accident. Their recovery is an example of the never-say-die spirit they have always shown—I have never known my father to "give up."

For the doctors who attended them, I have the greatest admiration for the almost miraculous things they can do with shattered bones. And to our friends in Chattanooga who took care of our children and helped in so many ways, we are grateful.

Thanks to these things, I still have a mother and father to "keep in touch with."

Last week Commissioner of Institutions George H. Cate was discussing the problem that Tennessee faces in its welfare work. One of the cases he told about was of particular interest because it is right here in our own Hamilton county.

Probably you have seen the little shack made out of pieces of old boxes that is located on the city dump. There lived, in this hovel, a family of five—the grandmother, mother, father and two children, aged 3 and 1½ years, respectively. This case was brought to the attention of the state.

The grandfather had died of insanity, the grandmother has spent several years at various times in institutions for the insane, as has the daughter. The husband is feeble-minded and both of the little children are feeble-minded. The grandmother and the parents have been put back in those institutions, but there is no place for the little children because they are under the seven-year age limit for admission.

To convention we will go!!!!!

Most of this column will be devoted to the forthcoming State Federation of Labor convention to be held in Johnson City the 6th of June. Of course, I do not need to tell you when it is going to be, because I do believe that Chattanooga ladies are going, en masse.

* * *

As Paula Hallmark (Mrs. Vic) said—we don't know whether the Chattanooga men are just nicer or are more hen-pecked, but whatever the reason, Chattanooga delegates to the state labor convention always have more of their "womenfolks" along than any other delegation.

* * *

In fact, it has just about reached the point where the ladies are ready to organize an "AUXILIARY TO THE TENNESSEE FEDERATION OF LABOR CONVENTION."

* * *

I imagine Mrs. Bob Cooke would be elected permanent chief of that proposed organization because she has been attending these conventions for so many years.

* * *

This year there will be the bunch of "regulars" in Johnson City—Mrs. Cooke, Kamin, Cuthbert, Hallmark and Etter. Of course those last two were "first-termers" last year, as were Margaret Mabee and Regina Davies. But they are all confirmed "Conventionites" now and will be back again. As a matter of fact, Margaret will be a delegate this year.

* * *

And what a lot of new "recruits" there will be this year for our auxiliary! There's Mrs. Curtis Sims, Fred Kuster, Stanton Smith, Charles Curle, Arch Underwood and Mrs. Floyd Smith.

* * *

Louise Petty will represent the Culinary Workers—that makes two women delegates. Louise Tinker says she will be there, too.

* * *

Yessir, I believe we will have a lot of material for any strictly feminine organization we may want to. form And, lest somebody beats me to it, maybe I had better tell you one of those jokes that we women have to put up with at conventions. This one came out in the Railway Trainmen's magazine last month.

Son: "Say, dad, what does it mean when the paper says some man went to a convention as a delegate-at-large?"

HARCOURT A. MORGAN

Harcourt A. Morgan, vice-chairman of the TVA, is an imported citizen. He was born and schooled in Canada; but has worked, married and developed in the United States. He is in the news now, like everyone else in the TVA, but his services to agriculture entitled him to be in the news many years ago.

He is one of the (perhaps) dozen top men in the research which has almost wiped out the cattle tick in the south. He has done equally good work in charting the migrations and proper ways of dealing with the cotton boll weevil. He was prominent in agricultural research almost from his arrival in this country, dean of the Tennessee College of Agriculture in 1913, food administrator of the state during the World war, president of the University of Tennessee from 1919 till called to the TVA.

It is Harcourt Morgan who has had charge of the work of the TVA in stopping the land waste of soil erosion; and he has started some new lines in agricultural experiment whose full value will not be known for years.

Rockdale.—Tennessee ranks second only to Florida in the production of phosphate rock in the Unitd States. Various grades are found in large quantities of blue, brown and white rock. Iron and phospphate rock are combined in a blast furnace at Rockdale, the only ferro-phosphorous blast furnace in the world.

Indignant Parent (6 a.m.)—Young man, what do you mean by bringing my daughter in at this hour?

Flaming Youth—Well, I gotta be at work by 7.

YOUR DOLLAR

YOUR DOLLAR will be a regular monthly feature. The facts and opinions given are based on the monthly reports of Consumers' Union, 55 Vandam Street, New York City, a non-profit membership organization whose object is to safeguard buyers by testing and reporting on consumer goods. Note especially the information on labor conditions under which products are manufactured.

It is estimated that about 50% of the retail mattress business is fraudulent. Consumers are regularly cheated by misrepresentation of the contents and by high prices based on the number of ventilators and other features that have nothing to do with durability and comfort. Mattress selling offers unusual opportunities for deception, since the buyer cannot look beneath the surface—and even when cut open samples are displayed, only the customer with special knowledge of mattress construction can benefit.

Only twelve states have laws that are to any extent effective in regulating the manufacture and sale of bedding. And of these, only two (New York and Pennsylvania) forbid the use of second-hand materials. The result is that some millions of Americans are sleeping on mattresses that were purchased as new, but were actually made from the junk dealer's collections.

Consumers' union rates Spring-Air ($24.50 to $45) as a best buy. Listed also acceptable are Honor-Bilt and Quali-Rest ($42.50), and mattresses made by the Stearns & Foster company. The Simmons Beautyrest ($39.50) is considered not acceptable; although comfortable when new, it has poor durability. Simmons Slumber King and Deepsleep, and the Imperial mattress ($39.50) are not acceptable because they contain poor spring units.

Chain Store Workers Organize.

Sales girls in the 5-and-10 stores and clerks in chain drug stores are making substantial headway in a fight against low wages, long hours and the activities of industrial spies, a survey by Consumers' union has revealed. During the past year thousands of workers have signed up in the Department Store Employes' union and in the United Retail Drug Store Employes' union. A number of successful strikes have been conducted against chains that have operated for many years under a policy of cut-rate wages and excessively long working hours.

Some employes of Whelan drug stores in New York City, for example, were working as much as 80 hours a week without overtime pay until a strike was won early in 1938. The agreement provided for a 54-hour week, overtime pay and paid vacations. On the other hand, the unorganized workers in the Walgreen and Ligget's chains work longer hours and receive less pay. Pharmacists are paid as little as $22 a week in these chains; top pay is $28. A company union has been formed in the Liggett's stores, and the Willmary spy system has been used to discover members of the legitimate union. Eighteen union members have been fired in New York City alone.

Another user of a spy system has been the F. W. Woolworth chain, which employed the Burns Detective Agency. After a sit-down strike in several Woolworth stores in New York, the employes obtained a contract providing for a $14.50 starting wage, which is raised to $15.60 at the end of six months. The work week is forty-eight hours, and time and one-half is paid for overtime.

Three subsidiaries of the H. L. Green chain (Grand, Green and Silvers) have been well organized in New York. Other cities where the 5-and-10 workers have formed strong unions are Providence, Detroit, Akron and San Francisco. In San Francisco a $20 minimum and a 44-hour week were the fruits of a strike last summer.

Electric Heating Pads.

The hot water bottle of the horse and buggy epoch is in some ways more desirable than the electric heating pad, Consumers' union technicians report after a test of ten different brands of these modern appliances. The users of several brands of pads run the risk of burns and shock, and there is also the chance of the mechanism's getting out of order.

Rated as acceptable are the Safety-Heet ($7.50), the Electro-Sheet ($7.50) and the Samson Wetproof Model 520 ($3.95); also sold as Macy's Wetproof). The Westinghouse WP 164 ($5.95) and the Ward's Fireproof ($3.75 plus postage)—both cloth type pads)—are also considered acceptable, but only when they are used at all times with a rubberized envelope. Even so, these pads are less safe than the first three listed. All cloth type pads were found to have excessive shock hazard when without rubber covers.

It is never safe to go to sleep with a pad turned on, or to leave a pad with a child or an invalid.

THE CONTINUITY OF HISTORY

By DR. J. WESLEY HOFFMAN
Professor of European History.

There are no sudden changes in history. Neither do movements or ideas which affect nations spring suddenly into being. When sudden changes seem to take place they are usually not as sudden as they seem nor do they change the trend of events as much as they appear to change them. As Prof. Cheyney, of the University of Pennsylvania put it, continuity is a law in history.

When the war "suddenly broke over Europe" in the summer of 1914 it was merely the climax of the rivalries of European nationalims which had been growing for over a century. National antagonisms were certainly as old as the French revolution. The struggle for colonial expansion was as old as the race for markets, raw products and the competition in armaments to defend this struggle. The entry of the United States merely climaxed the struggle for control of the sea, which in turn resulted from the effort to trade freely with all nations in peace and in war.

An Effort to End Wars.

The effort to establish an era of international peace and justice on the basis of collective security was the natural consequence of the failure to achieve the same objectives through armies, navies, alliances and a balance of power. Far from being new the idea of a league of all nations had been proposed repeatedly for centuries. Nor were the cynics in the United States senate and the European councils of the great introducing a new policy when they wrecked the dream of collective security.

Again, when the idealists insisted that the new governments of Europe must be based on the consent of the governed they discovered, to their sorrow, that political habits long established cannot be changed by the adopiton of a constitution. Millions of people in Germany, Italy and Russia who have had little or no experience in self-government are not able, immediately, to govern themselves wisely and well. People schooled in a century of racial conflict are not likely to be magnanimous to racial minorities put under their tender mercies by the fortunes of war. Ruling classes grown expert and self-confident by experience in ruling the masses do not accept subordination to the will of the majority without a struggle for power.

Trend Toward Democracy.

Finally, the future will probably vindicate the guess that dictators who try to block the trend of centuries toward government "of the people, by the people, and for the people" will have their day and be classed as meteors and not as fixed stars.

May to Speak At Convention For Carpenters

Busy Business Agent for Local 74 to Go as Delegate to Johnson City.

F. H. May, business agent and financial secretary for Local 74, Carpenters and Joiners, is the man selected to represent that group of the Chattanooga building trades in Johnson City's Tennessee Federation of Labor convention.

F. H. MAY

Brother May will be a good representative, having had the experience in other conventions, and also being known as a man who takes care of the job in hand before playtime comes.

Here at home he has his hands full in keeping account of the three hundred or more members of his local. According to reports from the local he is satisfying the membership, evidenced by his election to the convention.

Southern Railroad Maintenance Men Meet in Atlanta

Atlanta. — A joint protective board meeting, Southern system division of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes, was held in Atlanta this week, attended by representatives from 32 lodges in the division. T. C. Carroll, vice-president of the Grand Lodge, presided at the sessions. These board meetings are made up of local chairmen of lodges in the Southern Railway system. G. L. Lingle, chairman of Spartanburg Lodge No. 524, Charlotte, N. C., who has many friends in the Labor movement in Atlanta, was in attendance and took a leading part in the deliberations of the meeting.

Take It or Leave It

Points of View Picked Up From Various Sources
CY KOLOGY, EDITOR

How can union workers help in the fight against the depression? For it is a depression and may be here for a prolonged stay. All hope it won't, but reason says to prepare for the worst. What to do?

ILNS editorial 'way back in November told of some things an individual worker could do, to protect his own interests and those of his fellow workers.

First, of course, comes earnest, continuous support of one's union and of the labor movement as a whole. This means attending all meetings and supporting all union activities. This support, to be most effective, must include support of the labor press.

High in importance to labor, NOW AND ALWAYS, comes support of union label goods and services. Buying union label goods and services strengthens organized labor and enables it to weather depression with a minimum of weakening.

"Buying union label" helps to keep up purchasing power of organized workers and nation and to maintain good working standards. Union label buying is getting a big boost from the A. F. of L. Union Label and Industrial exhibition, at Cincinnati, May 16 to 21. This exhibition is focusing national attention on union products. In this connection, why not get together a party for a trip to the exhibition?

Cincinnati is easy to reach. It has fine railroad, bus, electric, airplane and highway transportation facilities. Eight big railroad lines, 21 divisions use its new railway station, one of the finest in the world, famous for beauty as well as utility. A trip to the exhibition will be a revelation to every label booster. It will equip visitors with potent ammunition to be used in label campaigning back home.

Visits by a union label delegation from every city in the land would be vastly helpful to unionism. Central bodies which encourage and help such visits will benefit in days to come.

Not so easy to get the money for a trip anywhere. But it can be done. Labor is used to sacrifice and can sacrifice for sending delegates to the Cincinnati exhibition, despite hard times.

Which brings us right back to the depression. Lots of things seem to head up to the depression. It can't be escaped. It can be faced, with courage and determination. Courage will help labor, business, every group in the nation. There are signs the nation is regaining its courage.

In the meantime, we have at least one thing to be thankful for. We are not called upon here to pay taxes such as the staggering load which Great Britain is imposing on its people to pay for armaments. That is a favoring circumstance to Uncle Sam in fighting and licking Old Man Depression.

STREET CAR MEN WIN WAGE RAISE

Columbus, O.—The eight-day bus and street car strike was settled by a compromise on wages which adds 3 cents per hour to the pay of the men, and recognition of the union by the company.

*

Mayor Gessaman refused to put police on cars run by strikebreakers, saying that he would take no chances on a recurrence of the riots of 1910. Taxicab drivers reaped a brief but luxuriant harvest; and more ancient bicycles, dilapidated "Lizzies" and even roller skates than anyone had believed existed were put in use.

Bricklayers Again Send Harry Davie As State Delegate

Business Agent for Local 6 Has Been Able Representative in Past Years.

Harry Davie, business agent for Local 6, Bricklayers, will be seen again at the Tennessee Federation convention this year. He was named as delegate by his local, no new honor for him.

HARRY DAVIE

Mr. Davie is one of the reasons for the success of the bricklayers in Chattanooga, due to his business sense and level-headed administration of union affairs for his local.

Mr. Davie will be accompanied by Mrs. Davie, who will make the large list of lady visitors from Chattanooga more impressive and charming.

New Unionists Given Cigarettes

Atlanta.—W. B. Harris, director of the Southern States Council Upholsters' International Union, has adopted a unique plan in organizing. Each new member joining the union is presented with a supply of Raleigh cigarettes. Mr. Harris said he did not like to see a worker coming into a union meeting smoking a non-union cigarette, so he took the matter up with the Brown-Williamson company, and made arrangements to present the union-made Raleigh cigarette to new members, thus stressing the importance of the union label.

Delegate Batey Will Go From Building Trades

L. C. Batey, business agent for for the Plasterers' union, was appointed as one of the three to represent the Chattanooga building Trades council in the Tennessee Federation of Labor convention to be held in Johnson City in June.

L. C. BATEY

Brother Batey is financial secretary for the council and is thoroughly familiar with the problems confronting the organizations which he will represent.

RAIL LABOR REJECTS WAGE CUT PROPOSAL

Washington.—Spokesmen for 20 railroad unions turned thumbs down on the plan of rail managements to cut wages at a "voluntary" gathering.

"I never heard of such a silly thing in my life," said George M. Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives' association, "as this attempt to reduce buying power at the same time that the president is pouring out $4,500,000,000 in an attempt to increase buying power. They are not going to get one single cent from us."

The carriers meet within a short time in Chicago, and the expectation is that they will set in motion a formal plea for a reduction of wages. This is a matter of months. The roads must give the men 30 days' notice of a wish to open wage conferences; the conferences usually last for weeks; if ineffective, the national mediation board comes in, and if this fails, there is arbitration.

Keeps One Busy.

"A fellow has to be a contortionist to get on these days," says a philosopher. "First he has to keep his back to the wall and his ear to the ground. Then he must put his shoulder to the wheel, his nose to the grindstone, keep a level head and have both feet on the ground."

* * *

Time is infinitely long, and each day is a vessel into which a great deal may be poured—if one will actually fill it up.—Goethe.

Witt Appointed Delegate From Building Trades

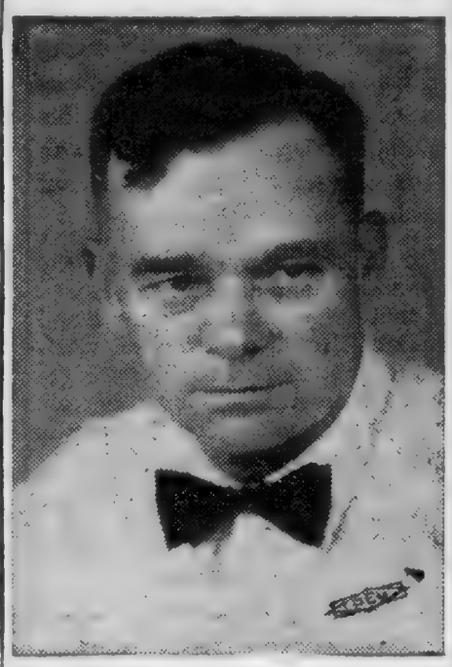
W. A. Witt, president of Chattanooga Building Trades council, was appointed one of the three delegates from the council to go to Johnson City in June. Brother Witt is also the American Federation of Labor organizer in this territory.



W. A. WITT

Mr. Witt recently organized the county school bus drivers under the Amalgamated Street Railway and has formed many nuclei for other local unions in Hamilton county.

Since he first joined the Painters' union years ago Mr. Witt has been quite active in the labor movement. Accompanying him from the building trades will be Mr. James R. Moss and Mr. L. C. Batey.

Pershing's Example to Business Men

(From Business Week.)

Doubtless when a man is in a coma, he makes no conscious resistance to death; but even then the spirit that has possessed him in his conscious moments is not altogether vanished. It affects him unconsciously. And if he has fought bravely for life all along, if his resolution has never flagged despite pain and weakness, then there is pretty good reason for believing that he is fighting on, even in his coma; he is fighting against death, he is fighting to live, he is fighting for more days and years in which to watch the world and see what it has to offer and in what ways he may still take an active part.

And thus General Perishing fought on, while the funeral train waited, and undertakers made ready, and radio voices rolled on in long narrations of the sick man's life, and newspaper obituaries and mournful editorials were set up in type. And suddenly there was Pershing, asking for a barber and eating lamb stew. There was Pershing, there was courage. Is there a lesson in that today for business men?

CENTRAL BODY EXECUTIVE BOARD BUSY

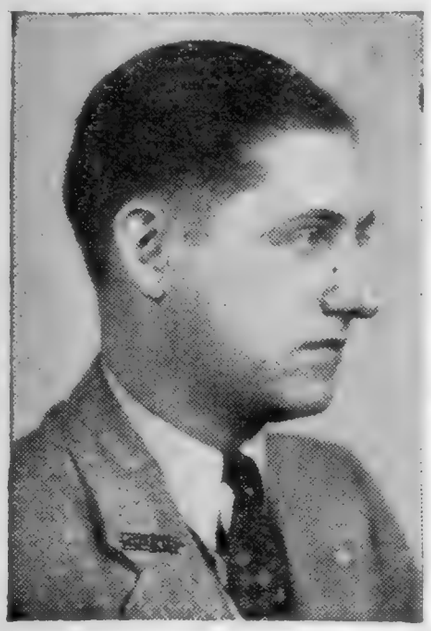
Past Year Has Seen Them Clicking Together Harmoniously and Efficiently Which Compares Favorably with Predecessors.

Chattanooga Central Labor union is most fortunate in its selection of officers. Directed between meetings by an executive board of five members, the American Federation of Labor movement in Chattanooga has truly kept up its prestige in Tennessee as being one of the potent factors in the state.

Young President.

Although young in years, President Curtis R. Sims has won his spurs through his wise leadership of his own local as well as chief executive of the Central Body.

GAVEL WIELDER



CURTIS R. SIMS
Baker

Brother Sims came into the labor movement about six years ago when the Bakery and Confectionery Workers in the Merita bakery organized. He received his first baptism of fire when his local was forced out on a successful strike. Since then, as president and later business agent of Local 25, he can boast of a local that is in as good shape, both financially as well as in numbers, as any trade in the city. Conditions in the bakery industry have been improved beyond original dreams, and the end is not yet reached. He has made a good president of Central Body, and was last month returned to another term. He will be delegate from the bakers at the convention.

Regularly Busy.

The financial secretary is a member of Local 226, Painters and Decorators. Brother Erskine Mabee never seems to wear out. One often wonders how he manages to cover the territory he does, because in addition to keeping the financial accounts of Central Body in good order, he has been instrumental in setting up and advising with at least eight local unions. Incidentally, he will be a delegate to the Tennessee Federation of Labor convention from Central Body.

Helps Sims.

The vice-president, Paul Reynolds, is a comparative youngster and hails from Local 165, Pressmen. While his duties have not been unduly heavy, he has always been on the job at board meetings and taking the chair to relieve President Sims.

SHE WRITES IT

MISS VIRGINIA MUNSEY
School Teacher

Now, the recording secretary, Miss Virginia Munsey, is somebody that does not come down the road every year in labor recording circles. An active and influential member of Local 246, School Teachers, she keeps minutes of the meeting as they have never been kept before. As recognition of her outstanding ability, she is now in her fifth term, and it is assumed that she will be there as long as she consents to hold down the post.

"Where's Elmer?"

Where's Elmer? You know, the wire-twister, E. E. Crosby. He, as sergeant-at-arms, is the fifth member of the executive board. The boy is "nuts" about the union label, and we wish there were more like him. He does not have to do much sergeant-at-arming, but he certainly keeps busy as chairman of the label committee, and the way he runs down non-union and unfair merchandise in our local stores, and the unceasing hunt he gives to unearthing something new in union labeled material is a caution. If every Central Body had a few Crosbys the immense purchasing power of organized labor in this country would cause manufacturers to beg for the union label.

The past year has been a busy one for the executive board. They have many headaches as well as pleasant achievements, but through it all they have kept their heads and have followed out true trades-union principles. Our labor movement is indeed fortunate in its leadership, and with better cooperation we are ready to really "go to town."

Houston, Tex.—Labor committees are busy at work making plans and preparations for the 58th annual convention of the American Federation of Labor to be held here next October, E. E. Stokes, general chairman, announces. Committees recently appointed are working out details for entertaining women visitors at the convention.

Plans for the convention are moving along normally, Chairman Stokes said, and will be stepped up as convention time nears. Chairman Lee Welch, of the rodeo committee, reported that he is lining up a number of top rodeo performers and predicts this feature of the convention entertainment will be equal to anything of its kind ever held here. During the recent fat stock show he talked to a number of top rodeo stars, who agreed to enter the contests at the A. F. of L. rodeo.

In a recent survey the Foreign Graphic Arts Industries has made public that American manufacturers lead the world in the production of printing machinery and these products are generally regarded abroad as the ultimate in both quality and efficiency.

Kamin Selected From Movie Ops To Convention

Little Arthur Will Be on Hand in Johnson City in June.

Get ready, folks, Kamin will be in Johnson City June 6, 7 and 8 when the Tennessee Federation convention is in full swing. Nothing unusual about "A. C." being at a convention, but just the same it is good news to learn that his local, Movie Operators, last month named him as a delegate without opposition.

Kamin has many friends in the labor movement all over the state, and there is not a better respected unionist. He is a bunch of vitality and pep, and when he gets going on something close to his heart he does not overlook a single opportunity to reach the goal.

The union label is the best "organizer" of labor unions.

A. C. KAMIN

Reassured.

"You will understand," said the elocution teacher, "that when I swing my hands in the air and move my lips without being heard, I am giving a picture of profound mental anguish."

"I am glad to know that," answered the pupil. "I thought you were giving an imitation of a traffic policeman."

The local is to be chartered by the Painters and Decorators International Union. Leo B. Carter, A. F. of L. organizer, assisted the new members in forming the new local.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., April 25.—A charter was set here last week for a local union of Hod Carriers, Common and Building Construction Laborers. The charter was installed and officers named. L. D. Engineer Explains Requisites of Air Conditioning Unit

Knoxville.—If the rise in temperature puts you in the mood to air condition the home, be sure the equipment you purchase really does a full job of "air conditioning," advised Prof. F. L. Wilkinson, Jr., head of the University of Tennessee's mechanical engineering department. There is a vast difference in the interpretation of the term by advertisers, he explained.

"Factors that most commonly affect human comfort are temperature, humidity and air movement. The simultaneous control of these three should constitute the minimum requirements which can be labeled 'air conditioning,'" he said. "Without a definite and accurate control of these three, the air within an occupied space is not recognized as being conditioned."

"In controlling the summer temperature by air conditioning, it is a safe rule never to let the difference between outside and indoor temperature be greater than 15 degrees. The indoor relative humidity should not be below 32 per cent nor greater than 57 per cent, the higher relative humidity accompanying the lower indoor temperature.

"For most cities in Tennessee, summer temperature for which body metabolism requires some assistance varies from 85 degrees to 100 degrees. For these conditions, the indoor temperature should vary from 74 degrees to about 86 degrees, with an average relative humidity of about 45 to 50 per cent. Wind motion should be controlled so that no drafts are felt by the room occupants."

Wage earners who have lost their social security account cards may now obtain duplicates from any field office of the Social Security Board located in 323 key cities in various parts of the country. Corrections as to the name, age and other data on your account cards may be made now on application to the proper authorities in any of these key cities.

The death of Col. E. M. House brings back the days of 1914, when the German massacre at Louvain was a world-shocking horror. Now, it would be counted merely a normal incident in the progress of Fascism and Nazism.

Floyd Smith Will Be Delegate from Central Body

Active Woodworker Has Done Fine Job With His Local Union.

Floyd Smith, member of Local 1882, Woodworkers, was given one of Central Body's credentials to represent them in the Tennessee Federation of Labor convention. Brother Smith is financial secretary of his local, which is an affiliate of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

FLOYD SMITH

He has been a delegate to Central Body since organization of the woodworkers, and has been faithful to the trusts imposed in him. In the years to come his mark in the state labor movement should grow brighter, due to application and merit.

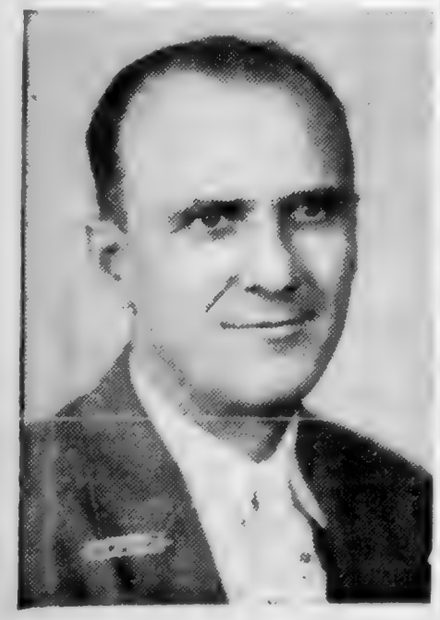
Elevator Constructors Will Be Represented in Johnson City.

V. W. Hallmark, torch singer, elevator constructor, Labor World director and business agent for his local, is getting his "trousseau" ready for the federation convention in Johnson City. "Vic" got elected early after the call was sent out. It was a tight race, but without opposition he managed to get by.



V. W. HALLMARK

Mrs. Hallmark will go with "Vic." Aside from obvious reasons why she should go with him to that convention, there is a more important factor than that. She went last year to Jackson, so this year when convention talk started, the Chattanooga "bunch" told Vic that without Mrs. Hallmark he had just as well stay home himself.

AMERICAN WORKERS NEED TRADES-UNIONISM, SAYS SECRETARY FRANK MORRISON

Labor Organizations Develop Along Natural Lines and Policies Are Formed to Fit Needs.

By FRANK MORRISON,

Trade unions are the medium through which working men and women unite in trade or occupational groups to protect and improve standards of wages and working conditions. Trade unions affiliated to the American Federation of Labor operate upon democratic principles. Each of the organizations now known as national and international unions having jurisdiction over the United States and its territorial possessions and in some instances extending to Canada and Mexico, were formed by the local unions through which organization in the particular trade or calling was inaugurated. When these local unions were able to assume the responsibilities of a national movement the members elected delegates to attend a convention for the purpose of inaugurating the national body, draft laws and elect officers. The laws of the national body are framed out of the experience of the rank and file membership with regulatory measures applied in their own locals, and out of this judgment is prescribed certain standard requirements with which the laws of all the local unions must conform. As time passes and the weakness or inadequacy of laws reveals itself these defects are overcome by amendments voted upon by the members through delegate representation in annual convention or direct vote by referendum. In all of the national organizations the court of last resort is either the national convention or a referendum vote of the membership. This is not governing from the top, but from the bottom, as the laws of the national in the original instance are drafted by the membership at large either by delegate representation or referendum vote and amendments as they may be adopted are enacted by the same authority.

Thus it rests with the membership of organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor to apply policies which fit their needs. The determination of organizational policies is not in any super-government of the American Federation of Labor, but in the rank and file of the membership of the affiliated organizations. Labor organizations develop along natural lines; they cannot be maintained by force or artificial means. They are subjected to stubborn and bitter opposition, and only the fittest survive. The policies applied by the organizations affiliated to the American Federation of Labor are the outgrowth of the experience of their members as to methods that have proved most practical and successful. The so-called CIO movement is not a new idea; that philosophy was tried out previously under the name of the Knights of Labor, American Railway Union, American Labor Union, One Big Union, I. W. W., etc., all of which are now nothing more than a memory. The leaders of these various movements endeavored to prove the futility of policies applied by organizations within the American Federation of Labor, but they failed, not solely because they were opposed by leaders of organizations loyal to the American Federation of Labor, but because the policies advocated did not meet the practical requirements.

Since the suspension on Sept. 5, 1936, of the ten international unions constituting the CIO, the paid membership of organizations affiliated to the American Federation of Labor has increased 1,099,804 as of March 22, 1938.

Organizations affiliated to the American Federation of Labor seek to establish a union shop contract.

FRANK MORRISON

A union shop contract enables the trade union to be the sole bargaining agent for the employes coming under the jurisdiction of the union. In this way the local union controls these employes not in the sense of exercising any arbitrary powers over their free will, but in the purpose of having the employes co-operate through the union in making the collective bargaining agreement a constructive instrument in labor relations between employer and employes. Where the union is not recognized as the sole bargaining agent for those coming under its jurisdiction it has not the opportunity to develop its value as a constructive agency in labor relations for the reason that those members not bound by the terms of the agreement may work in conflict with the provisions of the agreement. Where this condition operates it develops a source of irritation and dissension among the employes and the ability of a union to prove its usefulness and value in labor relations is restricted. Such a condition can not operate indefinitely and it will be worked out eventually either by the complete recognition of the union or its dissolution.

The first objective in establishing a wage agreement is to standardize conditions of employment in a plant and through the operation of such standards to overcome unfair labor practices. Trade unions endeavor to promote competence of workers through union agreements. These agreements are arrived at through negotiations between employer and employes which develop understanding of duties and obligations on both sides. A wage agreement is not a one-sided affair with obligations all on the employer's side. The union has the responsibility under a wage agreement to promote efficiency in work operations through conscientious co-operation of the union members. Officers and members of affiliated unions should obligate themselves to do all they can to make a union wage agreement a constructive instrument in labor relations between employes and employers in their mutual interests.

Readin' and Writin'.

A catalogue of farming implements sent out by the manufacturer finally found its way to a distant mountain village, where it was evidently welcomed with interest. The firm received a carefully written, if somewhat clumsily expressed, letter from a hillbilly asking further particulars about one of the listed articles.

To this, in the usual business way, was sent a typewritten answer. Almost by return mail came a reply.

"You fellows need not think you are so all-fired smart and you need not print your letters to me. I can read writing."

WAGES, HOURS, NOT ALL THAT ORGANIZED LABOR IS FIGHTING TO SECURE

Atlanta, Ga.—Dewey L. Johnson is an electrician by trade, a member of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, superintendent of electrical affairs for the city of Atlanta, and president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades. This organization is simply a central labor union, the only difference being that the central labor unions in Georgia cities are known as the Federation of Trades.

Mr. Johnson was re-elected in March to a second term as president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades. In his inaugural address the Atlanta leader told of the valuable services rendered by a city central labor union to the community in which it operates. What President Johnson said of the Atlanta Central Labor union will apply to any well organized central labor union in any city. His address has attracted the attention of many labor papers, and the Atlanta daily newspapers thought so well of it that his address has been the subject of editorials in the daily papers.

Because of its application to any city central labor union, Mr. Johnson's inaugural address is herewith published.

Mr. Johnson's Address.

"The life and progress of a great city is more or less bound up in and typified by the character of the institutions that grow up in it. Nothing can bespeak the progressive character of a community better than the progressive civic or private institutions, nor can there be any greater support of progress of civic righteousness than a good private or civic institution.

"The Atlanta Federation of Trades is a noble example of this. There may be some who have never thought of the federation as a potent institution in the life of this city. They may have thought of it merely as a body of labor delegates which has for its aims and sole purpose the consideration of labor problems, such as wages, hours of labor, etc. Such people imagine that the entire deliberations of this body are taken up with plans for filching the employer or getting more wages and less hours of work for the employe. If there be such people they do not understand the objectives of the Atlanta Federation of Trades.

"Of course we are interested in such things as wages, hours of labor, of working conditions and unemployment. However, these things affect vitally the life and happiness of this community. Just as improper diet or improper attention to the physical needs of the body seriously interferes with the happiness and efficiency of the individual whether he be a street sweeper or the city's best citizen, so do insufficient wages, excessive hours and poor working conditions jeopardize not only the life and happiness of the individual worker but of the city as a whole.

"Therefore, the Atlanta Federation of Trades makes no apology for concerning itself with these matters. It will continue to do so, and may be expected to increase its attention to these matters as the necessity for such attention increases. Nevertheless, the Atlanta Federation of Trades is much more than this. The measure of cooperation, the friendly spirit, the goodwill as between employer and employee that has prevailed can be attributed in a great measure to the policy this federation has pursued, and the city may continue to rely upon the federation to cultivate good-will and to strive to attain an even greater measure of mutual understanding as between employer and employe than ever in the past; that it is to the advantage of the employer and employe and to the city as a whole to settle in a peaceful manner, or to prevent altogether through the proper cooperation, disputes which if allowed to become agitated would handicap, disorganize and slow up progress of this community.

"The Atlanta Federation of Trades has meant much in a financial way to the business in this city. It is through this channel that wages have been increased and a higher standard of living made possible. Much of the increase in trade which this city has enjoyed can be traced directly to the effort of this federation. The millions of dollars that have been flowing into the channels of trade have come from increased wages and increased productive energies made possible by the work of this federation.

"The Atlanta Federation of Trades is an institution for civic progress and welfare. The men and women composing the membership of this organization are interested in everything that concerns human happiness and well-being in this city. For that reason we seek to promote the extension of educational advantages and opportunities to our children. We stand for better schools, for well paid teachers and well equipped buildings. We seek to secure efficiency and honesty in government, and we must be on our guard at all times against anything that would tend to take away from the people their prerogatives as citizens, ever anxious to secure honest elections and faithful performance of duty.

"When I assumed the presidency of the Atlanta Federation of Trades a few months ago, I stated then it was my wish that during my term of office the Atlanta Federation of Trades would make more rapid progress than during any like period in its history. I feel that in a large measure this has been true. At that time this federation was confronted with a serious problem brought about by the actions of some of our chosen leaders in this vicinity when they attempted to deliver us into the hands of our enemies. Brother arraigned against brother, and friend against friend. The capacity for friendship, to be loyal to your friends and to be grateful to those whom gratitude is due, is an admirable trait to be found in any one; to possess character, to uphold the principles which we believe to be right is also very desirable; and to be called upon to make a decision as between the two is one of the hardest tasks an honest man can be given. However, quite a few of the delegates to this body have been called upon to make that decision. They elected to uphold a principle and remain true to the American Federation of Labor. I wish at this time to urge the delegates to this federation, if there be petty prejudices and personal enmity between us, that we lay them aside and work in harmony in the interest of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, so that we may be more successful in securing the objectives for which this federation is dedicated. However, I warn you to be ever alert that there be no compromise with the discredited leaders who sought to deliver us into the hands of our enemies. Should they desire to reaffiliate with this body, beware that they do not appear as a wolf in sheep's clothing, and make certain that it comes from a penitent heart in the breast of a remorseful soul.

"It was intended that the work in connection with this federation should be performed by properly designated committees. However, when I assumed office it was apparent that this system had broken down and most of the work was being handled by the officers of the federation. That condition exists in a large measure today. This system is not a healthy one for this federation as it tends to make a one-man rule. I recommend to the incoming committee chairmen that they assume their responsibility as chairmen of committees and seek to have all questions which should properly come before them referred to their committee.

"The importance of members of organized labor exercising the privilege of voting and assuming their duty as citizens of the community becomes more apparent each day. I therefore recommend to the citizenship committee that they seek a way to encourage members of organizations affiliated with this body to become voters, thereby assuming the responsibility of citizenship.

"To facilitate progress, to develop harmony and to encourage incresed activity, I recommend that a meeting be held at least once each month at which all officers and committee chairmen should be present for a round-table discussion to plan cohesive action on behalf of this federation. It is important that the activities of this federation receive proper publicity in our Labor Journal. The publicity committee should make a renewed effort to encourage the daily papers to give more space to this federation. We all realize quite well that the interest of the workers in each of the several cities of this state are the same, and each is dependent in a large measure upon the progress made by its fellow-workers in sister cities and realize the advantage to organized labor of an alert and progressive labor press. I urge this federation to petition the Georgia Federation of Labor to investigate the feasibility of establishing a state labor paper so that all the communities in this state may have the benefit of a labor paper.

"The Atlanta Federation of Trades is chartered by the American Federation of Labor and is subject to all the provisions of the constitution of the American Federation of Labor. However, dual unionism which has arisen within recent years has caused a considerable number of changes in the constitution of the American Federation of Labor. The constitution and by-laws of this body not being in accord with the constitution of the American Federation of Labor, I recommend that a constitution and by-laws committee be appointed to rewrite the laws of this federation.

"May I say to this federation that I appreciate more than I can express in words the honor bestowed upon me and the confidence placed in me by electing me president of this federation, and when this term of office has been completed and I step down from this rostrum, it is my wish that it may be said of me that I was fair and impartial with my rulings from the chair; that I was honest; that I worked diligently for the things that I believed to be right; that I was loyal both technically and morally to the oath of my office. No labor leader in Georgia, either present or past, stepped down to accept leadership of a labor organization. It is a promotion from any station in life to be privileged to lead an organization whose purpose it is to secure a more abundant life for those who toil. Labor owes its leaders nothing except cooperation and active support, so lon gas that leader furnishes the proper type of leadership. All that I am I owe to labor. They have been kind to me, and I am very grateful to them for this kindness."

An Agency of Civic Progress

Dewey L. Johnson, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, in his recent inaugural address, described that organization as "an institution for civic progress and welfare." There is no one at all familiar with the history of the federation, who does not recognize the truth of that description.

The federation has contributed more to the progress of Atlanta than the average citizen, probably, imagines. It has always been a leader in movements for municipal betterment and it has stood like a rock for honest administration of the city's affairs and for better living conditions for all citizens.

It has contributed much to the material advancement of Atlanta and to the prosperity of all forms of business. Through its activities the consumer power of the average citizen has increased, thereby sending more money through the channels of trade and of industry. Through its alertness for human welfare it has raised the standards of living for everyone.

"The men and women composing the membership of this organization," Mr. Johnson declared, "are interested in everything that concerns human happiness and well-being in this city. For that reason we seek to promote the extension of educational advantages and opportunities to our children. We stand for better schools, for well-paid teachers and well-equipped buildings. We seek to secure efficiency and honesty in government and must be on our guard at all times against anything that would tend to take away from the people their prerogatives as citizens; ever anxious to secure honest elections and faithful performance of duty."

In those words Mr. Johnson sets up a standard of citizenship which is difficult to surpass. The importance of the pronouncement is emphasized by the knowledge that the federation he heads will earnestly and effectively strive to live up to every record. The entire history of the organization testifies to this.

Atlanta possesses an asset of inestimable value in the federation and it is evident that the federation itself has secured, in Mr. Johnson, a leader personifying the high standards upheld by all its membership.—The Atlanta Constitution.

Call Him By Name

BY DR. CHARLES STELZLE

When you get to the point that you can call a man by his first name, you feel honored—and, ordinarily, so does he. As a matter of fact, while a man's title becomes more formal as he ascends in his position in life, his name becomes more intimate and informal, but at the same time more authoritative.

A common workman, whose name is John Smith, is known by his last name. When he becomes an officer in the company, he is called "Mister." But when he is knighted he is known as "Sir John." When a man becomes the ruler of a country in which titles are honored, he is known simply by his first name—as, for example, "King Edward," or "Kaiser Wilhelm"—all other titles become secondary. And when he signs imperial documents he usually employs only his first name—without any title.

The same principle applies in other relationships. The Service Clubs—like Rotary, Kiwanis and Lions—have discovered that cordiality is developed by calling a fellow-member "Bill" instead of "Mr. Obermeister," for example. Even a great religious organization now follows this rule. It breaks down stiffness and formality. A man's given name gets closer home than the name which he inherited.

The Scripture reminds us that God calls us each by name. It is as though He wants every man to stand up and be counted as one. And the world is coming to learn the value of honoring every man as an individual. Have you noticed at the big hotel how they are displaying the name of the man on duty at the desk? He's no longer just a clerk—you greet him by name. Even the elevator man is individualized—his name is displayed so that you needn't call him "Cap" or "Boy"—anyway, that isn't his name and he resents it. Many bus lines have adopted the same system. It adds to the man's dignity and character.

The average boss wonders why he can't run his shop as he runs his home—so far as his "help" is concerned. He'll tell you proudly that he never has any trouble with his gardener or his butler. Of course not—he calls them by name, and he knows them, and they know him. Whereas in the shop his men are known by numbers, and each man is furnished with a little brass check—for the purpose of identification. It's perfectly natural that he should find a difference between his "home help" and his "shop help."

All kinds of panaceas have been offered to settle the labor question, so there's no harm in presenting another: Let's call men by their names. And, you may be sure that calling a man by his name carries with it a far-reaching influence. It means humanity, personality, friendship, these three, and there isn't anything more important that these in industrial relationships.

Southern Organizing Campaign In Most Capable Hands Under George L. Googe

Entire Southland Has Had to Change Old Slave-Driving Attitude to Modern Free Labor Thought.

By JAMES F. BARRETT

From the ashes of an exhausted but unconquered South of the sixties, through a period of agricultural evolution during which the South adjusted itself to farming with free labor instead of the previous slave method, the new century of nineteen hundred was ushered into a new civilization. The South, in the short space of 35 years, had not only largely solved its disrupted agricultural policies, but had reached out and laid the foundation for an industrial activity that has had such remarkable growth and expansion as to challenge the admiration of the whole world.

The policy of low wages and long hours of labor was adopted in the South following the Civil War as an absolute necessity. Hard work, long hours, and whatever wage that could be paid constituted the penalty that a people must pay whose great section had been laid in waste through the destruction and ravages of warfare. But as the years rolled by, and recovery was made through the sacrificing and uncomplaining toil of the people; when farms had been reclaimed and rebuilt, and industries were no longer an experiment and a community enterprise, but profit-showing and expanding concerns, those who owned the farms and controlled industry held on to the policy of long hours and low wages.

Everything had changed, except the mental attitude of those who owned field and factory. They continued to live in a dead age when the philosophy of master and slave ruled the destiny of our great section. They retained and maintained the right to hire whomsoever they pleased, pay him whatsoever they wanted to pay him, work him just as many hours as they pleased, and be absolute authority on all questions pertaining to working conditions.

This ideal situation (for the employer) attracted numerous manufacturers from other sections of the country and from foreign countries into this haven of long hours and low wages. Industry grew by leaps and bounds. Industrial empires were built. Big towns sprung up, owned entirely by one man or one company — unincorporated towns, of course, because the owner of the town did not want his workers who lived in it to have any voice in any election of town officials. The owner hired the officers of the law, paid them, and directed them. He built the church houses and the school houses, and fired the preachers and teachers if they didn't suit him.

Naturally, manufacturers who operated in such wise did not want workers who were organized and had won the right to have a voice in fixing the wages, determining the hours of labor and in adoption of working conditions, and cut their holdings in such communities and flocked into this great Southland, where the owner was indeed and in truth, lord and master of all that he surveyed.

The American Federation of Labor, working through the established crafts of the building trades, organizations of shop and transportation, the printing trades and the railroad, long ago became the recognized spokesman and sole arbiter for the rights of the rapidly growing industrial groups throughout the South. Patiently, yet persistently and consistently, the American Federation of Labor established state federations of labor in the Southern states, and then established departments of labor in each state government, succeeding in naming members of organized labor to head such departments in most instances.

Gradually, Central Labor Unions were established in each city of any size, and these organized central bodies, working through the State Federation of Labor, brought sufficient political influence to bear upon state legislatures that long hours of labor were gradually brought down, act by act, until the 72-hour week was reduced to 66 hours, then to 60 hours, and on to 54 hours, while only recently South Carolina succeeded in getting the 40-hour week for the textile industry.

In the early years of this century men, women and children—the whole family—were employed in our textile and tobacco industries. When the word "children" is used, it means children—9, 10, 11 years old. Efforts to obtain child labor laws that would take young children out of industry, were frustrated through the influence of those who employed such children. Finally, it was through adoption of compulsory school attendance laws that the American Federation of Labor was enabled to remove child labor from Southern industry.

The struggle of the working people has been terrific. During the past ten years, however, great headway has been made in the organization of both skilled crafts and industrial workers. This marked progress of the past decade is due in large measure to the splendid leadership of George L. Googe, Southern representative of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Googe, a native of Savannah, Ga., and a member of the Printing Pressmen's Union, opened Southern A. F. of L. headquarters in Atlanta, and became recognized as President William Green's personal representative in the South.

Diplomatic, highly intelligent, more patient than Job himself, imbued with the spirit of unionism, baptized in the fire of persecution, fair in all matters, honest in every detail, and with a courage that is admired by all, George L. Googe has led the hosts of labor in the South to a new high plane.

In midsummer of 1937 the American Federation of Labor launched an organizing campaign in the South, under the sole direction of Mr. Googe, with the largest number of organizers ever assigned to the South. All of these organizers were Southern men and women who had made names for themselves in their own home towns and in their own local unions. In addition to the A. F. of L. organizers, many international unions placed their own representatives in the South, and the result of this campaign has been the chartering of more than 400 new local unions in the 11 states of the Southern territory; formation of numerous new central labor unions and city building trades councils; tens of thousands of new members of labor unions have been added to the rolls, and millions of dollars have been added to the payrolls of the workers through negotiations with employers on wage increase contracts and agreements.

But of still greater value than the gains above mentioned is the increased favorable public opinion created for the American Federation of Labor in the South under the leadership of Mr. Googe. The public at last has come to realize the fact that the American Federation of Labor is this nation's strongest defense and democracy's most powerful and safest ally. Governors and other state government officials, university and college officials, the pulpit and the press, and all other thinking people now recognize and receive the American Federation of Labor upon its own merit, recognized as one of the most vlauable and important American institutions in all America.

ORGANIZED LABOR'S DESIRES TIED IN WITH WELFARE OF INDUSTRIAL ENTERPRISE

President George L. Berry Says Organization Based on American Idealism and American Government.

The American labor movement is undertaking to organize and to educate the workers of the nation upon the broad principle of American idealism and America's form of government. There is no mystery about the purposes of the organized labor movement of America, as I understand them, and I shall attempt to identify them in the following brief manner:

FIRST—The organized labor movement of America proposes to continue the effort to organize every man and woman engaged in industry in the United States. There is nothing illegal and nothing improper about such an effort. Every other institution organizes for self-interest and protection, and there is no group of persons who needs protection more than the workers of the country.

SECOND—The organized labor movement of America contemplates the establishment within our country of a great system of collective bargaining and the establishment of a contractual relationship as between management and employe organizations based upon the principles of—

(a) the acceptance of the contractual guarantee of private ownership of property, and

(b) the maintenance of peace and the use of the instrumentality of conciliation and arbitration to accomplish this end.

THIRD—Organized labor purposes the development of a real and genuine co-operation between management and itself, the employees, in order to give vitality to industry upon which both management, including the investors, and labor depend for their economic existence.

FOURTH—The organized labor movement, as I understand it, has come to realize that the success, the prosperity and the stability of industry means more to them, the workers, than it does to management and the investors because, obviously, there are more of the workers than there are human elements in the managerial categories. Therefore, it is not difficult to understand the acceptance by organized labor of what I have always regarded as inescapable, namely, a community of interest between management and the investors on the one hand, and the workers on the other hand, in the industry in which they are engaged. It is my firm belief that the great majority of the workers of the country have come to realize the simple economic truth—that we cannot take out of industry more than we put into it, and that our whole social and economic standards are determined by that sort of co-operation between the human elements entering into business.

FIFTH—The organized labor movement, as I understand it, fully appreciates not only the establishment of collective bargaining contracts and the use of the instrumentality of conciliation and arbitration to maintain peace, but is prepared, in my judgment, to meet the responsibilities of the full and most complete guarantee that their agreements will be maintained in complete sacredness and that whatever differences may present themselves in the conduct of business will be subject to the mechanisms of conciliation and arbitration in order that that upon which we are all dependent may be undisturbed, namely, industry.

Organized labor wants peace. It seeks the establishment of machinery through collective bargaining that will make definitely for peace and good will. It acknowledges the fact that there is a community of interest between the three human elements—investor, management and labor—in the development of industry, and it is prepared to make the supreme sacrifice for the accomplishment of this result.

In addition to all that is said in the foregoing, organized labor has come to realize that there is a community of interest between industry and its human units and agriculture and its human units. It is so obvious that industry cannot be prosperous without a similar prosperity in agriculture an argument is hardly necessary. However, because of the long record of misrepresentation by certain interests in the United States and, too, because of the depth of convictions that so many held that there was nothing in common between agriculture and industry, persistent education and persistent reassertion of the error of the sort of propaganda referred to is highly necessary.

The claim that we have returned to prosperity and again enjoy a stable economic condition in the United States is a very great mistake. It is true that business conditions have improved greatly and we have escaped the more violent effects of the depression. The fact is, however, that we shall not possess a balanced economy in the United States and be free from the possibility of the return of a depression, which would be more violent in its consequences than the last, until there has been developed and made effective a practical and comprehensive program as between agriculture and industry. One of the great causes heretofore of our disjointed economic situation and the violent fluctuations that occurred was due to the lack of stability upon the part of either industry or agriculture. We observed one of them in a state of reasonable prosperity, the other in a state of distress and despondency, and vice versa, when all the time the actual need was the full and complete realization that one cannot exist without the other. This is said not only because of the fact that man cannot live without the production of food—the activity of the farmer—nor can agriculture exist without the application of science from industry, but it is said because of the consuming power that each has which is dependent upon each other.

Of all the many lessons we learned during the depression, there is one which seems to me to stand out with greater clarity than any other, and that is the fact that the basis for this disaster was in consequence of the constant and ever diminishing purchasing power of agriculture of the United States. As the farmer's dollar diminished unemployment increased because of the simple economic fact that with the decrease of purchasing power, industry automatically suffered. It is true there is little or no value in producing foods unless the people engaged in industry are able to buy the foods.

Agriculture constitutes the fundamental basis upon which prosperity and stability must necessarily rest. The fluctuation in our whole social structure is largely calculated by the fluctuation occurring in the sales price of the farmer's product. The farmer is entitled to absolute parity with industry; he is not only entitled to it, but industry is dependent upon it.

Local Typographical Union Has Contributed Heavily In Building Local Movement

Its Members Have Occupied Varied Positions of Trust in Civic Affairs With Faithful Attendance.

NOTE—The primary purpose of this article is to relate a portion of the history of Chattanooga Typographical Union No. 89. This has been attempted by giving proper attention to early-day members and those of the present who have been the builders. This writer makes special acknowledgment to Finney T. Carter, the local's financial secretary, who, because of his constant labor in assembling facts for a clear record, has been able to render the co-operation necessary for that which is presented here.

The story of the progress of the International Typographical Union is composed of the contributions of each local union. And Chattanooga Typographical Union has kept pace with unflagging energy. In the fall of 1882, a handful of Chattanooga printers decided to establish a local union in their picturesque city. After making application to the International Typographical Union for a charter, their wish was granted on Christmas day. Dated December 25, 1882, the now-faded charter of Chattanooga Typographical Union, No. 89, lists seven members, as follows: E. C. Wright, J. J. Hobby, J. J. Hennessey, W. B. Christopher, C. F. Rollston, W. J. Shanahan and W. W. Pickett. International officers' signatures are George Clark, president, and Mark L. Crawford, secretary-treasurer.

The roll of the Chattanooga union has grown, in the intervening fifty-six years, to a total membership of 150. Mr. Hennessey, who died in St. Petersburg, Fla., Nov. 30, 1935, was the last surviving member. Prior to his going to Florida, he alternately lived here and at Lexington, Ky., his original home.

Although preserved records of Local 89 do not go farther back than 1889, this writer has procured verbal information concerning early-day members. Three members who joined in the '80s and still are at the trade here are:

Sam E. Behm (more fully described elsewhere), who obtained his card in 1888, and who has been a continuous member.

I. J. Gardner, Sr., who has been with the Chattanooga Times since April 1, 1887, and who, at the turn of the century, served as secretary and president of the printers' union. He then became foreman for his paper, serving in this capacity until July 27, 1932, when he was appointed production manager. In 1919, Mr. Gardner was appointed by Governor Roberts to a five-year term as a member of the State Text Book Commission for Tennessee. Last year he served on the arrangements committee at the first mechanical conferenc of the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association, held in Birmingham. He is also president of the Times Credit Union. (For sketch of Mr. Gardner's life and activities, see The Inland Printer for February, 1938.)

Phil Mandre, who joined prior to 1889, and who is now a proofreader on the Times. (The reader is referred to a separate article in this issue dealing with Mandre's fifty-year membership in the International Typographical Union.)

Among the pioneer printers of Local 89 who left their imprint on union and civic scrolls, and after whose names the inevitable "30" has been marked, are:

E. R. Ames, an initiate of 1890. During his lifetime, Mr. Ames was prominent in civic affairs of East Chattanooga. He lived to be 91 years old. At the time of his death, Jan. 18, 1932, he and three of his sons were on the I. T. U. pension roll.

E. L. Barringer joined in 1887 and remained a continuous member until his death, April 6, 1934. He was employed on the Times for many years.

William H. Cooke, father of Al, R. M., Joe E. and M. S., all present or past members of this local, had membership dating back fifty years when he died in July, 1916. Mr. Cooke served several terms as financial secretary prior to 1900.

Thomas J. Davie became a journeyman June 5, 1892, and held a continuous membership until his death at the Printers' Home, March 15, 1938. He served as financial secretary for many years during the local's early life. From 1920 until he left for the Home on Nov. 7, 1937, Davie had been continuously re-elected sergeant-at-arms.

Charles F. Guy joined in 1891. Very active in union work, he had a continuity in membership until his death in August, 1911.

F. M. Hobbs was obligated about 1890. He left Chattanooga about 1910 to establish a labor paper at Macon, Ga., where he died some years later. He had served as president and in other capacities for No. 89 in its early days.

Henry Holdem, who was a member in 1890, was remembered for his activities through to 1910. He died in December, 1914.

Henry W. Hollis, on the roll of the 1890s, was an energetic unionist. He died in 1925.

C. M. Hopkins' membership stretched from 1892 to April, 1917, the year of his death. He was well known for his activity on the Labor Council and various committees.

Frank M. Johnson, remembered by more than a few pioneer printers here, joined in 1896. He died in 1930.

Dan M. Jones, Sr., father of Dan M., Jr., and Thomas H., present members of Local 89, was initiated in the '90s. He was one of the founders of the Intertype Composing company and was steadfastly loyal and active in union affairs. He died March 17, 1925, while a member of Knoxville local.

Andrew J. Linn was obligated prior to 1889 and his membership ran continuously until he died in November, 1930. His long tenure as financial secretary—from 1912 to the year of his death—caused Mr. Linn to be better known to traveling printers than any other member of No. 89 could have been.

W. J. (Bill) Moore, a one-time foreman on Chattanooga papers, is remembered 'way back, for his name appears on the minutes of 1890. He died in September, 1910.

W. L. Moore, who joined at Charleston, W. Va., in 1874, came to Chattanooga about 1910. To this hardy pioneer craftsman goes the credit for a unique achievement; in 1912 he accomplished the compiling of records of the previ-

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR SPONSORED CREATION OF UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR, GREEN SAYS

"There Can Be No Rival Claim for This Honorable Achievement," He Tells Birthday Party; Declares It "Is the Only Federal Department Solely Dedicated to the Promotion of Human Welfare and Betterment;" Was Established in 1913 After Many Years of Struggle by the American Organized Labor Movement.

Washington, D. C.—The twenty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the United States Department of Labor was celebrated in Washington by a dinner in the Mayflower Hotel where William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, appropriately declared that the department was the child of the A. F. of L. and emphasized the fact that it is the only department of the Federal government consecrated to human welfare.

In addition to being a birthday gathering in honor of the Labor Department the dinner was also a tribute to the victory gained by the organized labor movement of the United States on March 4, 1913, when President William Howard Taft, on the last day of his term, signed the bill establishing the department, and by so doing brought to an end the long struggle initiated by the American Federation of Labor at the time of its organization in 1881.

In addition to Mr. Green, those who made addresses at the dinner were D. V. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen; Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York; Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union, and Henry I. Harriman, former chief of the United States Chamber of Commerce. Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins acted as toastmaster.

TEXT OF GREEN'S ADDRESS

In reviewing the events leading up to the establishment of the Department of Labor, the duties it performs, and the achievements of organized labor since the department began functioning in 1913, Mr. Green said:

"The American Federation of Labor regards it a responsibility as well as a privilege to participate in the anniversary of the first quarter of a century of the Federal Department of Labor.

"Our interest in a governmental agency to provide factual material to measure progress and determine policies is long standing. Article 10 of the statement of purposes adopted by the first convention of the American Federation of Labor, which was held almost 60 years ago, emphasized the wholesome work of the state bureaus of labor statistics and recommended a similar Federal bureau supervised by a 'person identified with the wage earners of the country.'

"After such an agency had been created in 1883 and was well started in particular work, the 1896 convention of the American Federation of Labor directed the executive council to draft a bill to create a Federal Department of Labor with a secretary in the President's cabinet.

"The Federation believed then and now believes that peaceful progress for all of our citizens was of primary national concern, and that only by furnishing all groups of citizens with information needed to advance their standards of living could all groups share in social progress.

Dissatisfied With Commerce and Labor Department.

"The immedate response to this legislative proposal was a bill proposing a Department of Commerce and Industries and in 1903 the enactment of basic legislation creating the Department of Commerce and Labor.

"The American Federation of Labor did not believe the statistical and other information developed merely as an activity in a department organized for service to the owners of industries could with equal effectiveness provide service for wage earners employed by these owners. Even with the best of intentions information so collected and interpreted would be colored by the experience of those identified with employing interests. So the American Federation of Labor pressed its claim for a separate Department of Labor with a secretary to represent the interests of labor in the President's cabinet.

"At the very end of President Taft's administration a bill providing for the creation of a Department of Labor passed both houses of Congress and was signed as one of his final official acts. In the light of these historical facts it is most fitting and appropriate that the American Federation of Labor should participate in the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the Department of Labor.

"The officers and members of the American Federation of Labor have always regarded the Department of Labor as its sponsored creation. There can be no rival claim for this honorable achievement. For this special reason those associated with the American Federation of Labor have continuously maintained a deep interest in the maintenance and administration of the Department of Labor.

Wilson Was First Labor Secretary.

"The appointment of Honorable William B. Wilson, the first secretary of labor, was peculiarly fitting. For years he had served as secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, and later a union card member of the House of Representatives where he had been materially helpful in advancing labor legislation. Labor's non-partisan political policy was then beginning to bring positive results. But when the Department of Labor was an accepted institution, the American Federation of Labor found it had a continuing responsibility for adequate appropriations, to defend the department against proposals to curtail its activity by transferring its bureaus, and to advise the department how it can best serve labor.

Consecrated to Human Welfare

"The Department of Labor is the only Federal department solely dedicated to the promotion of human welfare and betterment. In the preamble to the organic act creating the Department of Labor, its purpose is stated in these words: '. . . to foster, promote and develop the welfare of the wage earners of the United States, to improve their working conditions and to advance their opportunities for profitable employment.'

Interprets Department's Duties

"In indorsing and supporting this statement of the functions of the Department of Labor, the federation interpreted these duties to mean the collection and preparation of material and information for the promotion of wage earners' welfare; information on standards that will enable all to measure progress, and plan for betterment as workers and as citizens; information that will help better terms and conditions of work; information that will help develop and improve the instrumentalities and devices of collective bargaining; information on standards that make training for employment efficient and continuously useful, together with an adequate employment service; information on these standards to define and restrict eligibility for profitable employment so that individual and social well being shall be promoted. Such information developed as services to foster, promote and develop the welfare of wage earners by legislation and by collective bargaining through the representatives of the union of their own choosing is the basic work of the Department of Labor.

"During the first 25 years of the peace-time activity of the Department of Labor a foundation has been laid upon which has been erected a fine superstructure for service. Labor has looked to the department for service on labor legislation and the administration of Federal labor laws such as child labor, immigration, Walsh-Healey, Wagner-Peyser, as well as for conciliation service in times of labor disputes.

Importance of Collective Bargaining

"Two laws have been enacted by Congress which represent a revolution in national thinking which should bring consequent changes in the services of the Department of Labor; the national labor relations act and the social security act. The national labor relations act marked the end of one long struggle for labor's rights. Collective bargaining cannot be carried on intelligently or constructively without facts on labor conditions, labor's share in industrial progress, knowledge of the financial conditions of the firm, past performance in the industry together with the outlook for the future. There is before us an unprecedented opportunity to realize the constructive possibilities through collective bargaining.

Taft Refused to Exempt Unions from Anti-Trust Act.

"It is interesting to recall that when former President Taft signed the act creating the department of Labor, he vetoed the important sundry civil appropriation bill because it contained the proviso that none of the funds should be used to prosecute trade unions under the Sherman anti-trust act. This provision in the anti-trust appropriation section of sundry civil appropriation bill, March 4, 1913, reads as follows:

" 'Provided, however, that no part of this money shall be expended in the prosecution of any organization or individual for entering into any combination or agreement having in view the increasing of wages, the shortening of hours or bettering the condition of labor, or for any act done in furtherance thereof not in itself unlawful.'

"That was the time when organized employers were trying to outlaw unions by injunctive writs and suits under the law designed to control trusts. This veto convinced labor it would have to look to substantive legislation to establish and maintain its fundamental right to union membership for the purpose of collective bargaining. Milestones of progress along that road were the labor provisions of the Clayton anti-trust law, the Norris-LaGuardia injunction act, Section 7A of the national recovery act, executive order of Aug. 5, 1933, Public Resolution 44, and the national labor relations act.

"Now that the federal government has guaranteed to wage-earners the right to membership in unions for the purpose of collective bargaining, more wage-earners will look to the department regularly for information for use in collective bargaining. There will be a steadily increasing demand from persons negotiating union agreements for information on more industries and more occupations.

"We shall need not only information on current wage rates, actual earnings, hours and conditions of work, but fully rounded, up-to-date information on industries and their subdivisions. We shall need the facts on employment opportunities and on unemployment together with trends. We shall need comparative studies of collective bargaining provisions and machinery. The field to which collective bargaining machinery will be applied is as broad as that of the employment relation—salaried as well as wage-earners.

PRESIDENT WILLIAM GREEN

Wants Labor Department to Administer Social Security Act.

"The social security act following a collapse of world economic institutions, reflects the conviction that when persons are denied opportunity to earn a living, society must make provision.

"Relief is no more a matter of charity where wage-earners are concerned than when applied to industries, railroads, etc. It is a social responsibility for which provisions must be made and administered without the stigma of a means test or poor law. The development of this social sceurity progress is only in its beginning. Labor feels that its administration, touching so intimately the matter of wage-earners' welfare, should be in the department of labor, for it is to that department that labor looks for understanding of workers' rights and problems.

Urges Adequate Medical Service

"We are looking forward to the development of social security to provide against all of the hazards which interfere with gainful employment, including sickness. Labor has been considering all the increasing data and information showing that the main obstacles to adequate medical care necessary to good health are economic and those in the lower income families. That incomes of 80 per cent of all families are inadequate to meet the cost of needed medical care is a conservative estimate. We cannot, as a civilized nation, permit loss of health or life through withholding adequate medical service merely because the persons have not the money to pay. We hope the social security act can be expanded rapidly and effectively.

Qualifications for Department Personnel

"For the personnel of the department of labor, labor has a real concern. It is because we feel that the department of labor is the result of our own legislative work and because its administration is so intimately bound up with our rights and welfare, that labor has been so insistent that the staff of the department of labor should be composed of those who have intimate knowledge and experience with problems of wage-earners and their unions.

"We look to the department of labor as the place of all places where there is understanding and acceptance of unions as the representative agency of the wage-earners of this country, where union functions will be understood and respected and where service will be available generously and intelligently.

Administers Conciliation Service and Immigration Laws.

During the administration of the department of labor by its first secretary, Hon. William B. Wilson, a mediation and conciliation service was created upon such a sound and satisfactory basis as to inspire the universal approval and cooperation of working men and women everywhere.

"During the administration of the second secretary of labor, Hon. James J. Davis, immigration legislation was enacted and its administration lodged with the departmnt of labor. This legislative and administrative development was asked by and supported by the officers and members of the American Federation of Labor.

Has Charge of Women's and Children's Bureau and Walsh-Healey Law.

"Now during the administration of Secretary of Labor Perkins the mediation and conciliation department has been strengthened, the statistical department enlarged and made more practical and vital and the administration of the Walsh-Healey act pressed. Under her administration the children's bureau and the women's bureau have grown and assumed increased responsibilities.

A Record of LIVING

THIS MAN'S FATHER WAS A SOLDIER IN THE WAR OF 1812.

MR. JAMES S. JORDAN, of Halifax County, Virginia, was born during the administration of President Buchanan, and his father, the late Motley Jordan, was born during President Washington's administration. Thus he is a representative of two generations who have lived during every presidential administration under the American constitution!

"My father was a soldier of the War of 1812," writes Mr. Jordan in an unsolicited but duly appreciated letter to the manufacturers of Black-Draught purely vegetable laxative. "I am in my 78th year, and have been using Black-Draught for a long time. I am writing this because I think Black-Draught one of the best medicines on the market. I keep it in the house all the time and when I know I need a laxative I take a small dose of Black-Draught which relieves the bad feeling,—hardly ever have to take the second one. I recommend Black-Draught to my friends."

The above testimonial is true and was given freely. No money was paid for permission to publish it.

Historical records completely back up the unique record of living by Mr. Jordan and his father. And incidentally, Black-Draught is held in high esteem by thousands of other men as a dependable, economical purely vegetable laxative.

PHIL MANDRE CELEBRATES FIFTIETH YEAR AS MEMBER OF INTERNATIONAL TYPO UNION

It was a sunny Monday morning in the quiet city of Chattanooga, back in 1878. An 8-year-old boy alternately skipped and walked on the dusty and pebbly street, all the while endeavoring to keep a small blue sailor hat at the correct list. At the other extreme of his person was a pair of well-greased button shoes, which he had to reach down and dust off from time to time. Black cotton stockings reached upward from the shoes to disappear in the tubelike recesses of knee-length black velvet breeches. From the pants' top upward to his chin, there could then be admired the ruffles that hid the pearlish buttons of a well-laundered, white flounced shirt. When his left hand wasn't busy holding onto his hat or dusting off his shoes, he employed it along with his right to wield a stick that batted small stones out into the roadway.

School bells began to ring. The boy quickened his pace. A man in homespun clothes, battered straw hat and toes sticking out from well-worn shoes, ambled toward the lad. His one hand held a long cane fishpole across his shoulder and the other gripped a rusty can filled with bait.

"How're ya, Mister Plummer! Going fishing?"

The boy knew the veteran of the battle of Missionary Ridge well. And hadn't he given him many a minie ball and told him how he got that bad limp from being all too brave when General Pat Cleburne's Johnnies had held Sherman back down Ringgold way?

"I reckon ye be goin' straight t' school, eh? How about fergittin' it 'n' goin' down 't' the river bank with me. Fishing's right smart good on the Tennessee nowadays—and I'll let ya bait my hook."

"No-o-o-o. I couldn't do that, Mister Plummer. Mother's sick this morning and Dad's toting some folks to the country. And I have to fetch back my monthly report card to mother. She always reads it, you know. Smack on report day, too."

The boy, Phil Mandre, went on to disappear into the vestibule of the school, where the janitor was giving a last tug to the bell rope. And, ever since, he has been faithful in observing all obligations. Well—er—er—that is, almost ever since.

Phil Mandre, now 68 years young, was born in Chattanooga on March 18, 1870, at a time when the gas man went around to light post-lamps with ladder and lighter, when citizens crossed Market street in the mud and when many steamboats blew for the landing that Chief John Ross had made famous.

PHIL MANDRE

Phil was named after his father. Phil, who was born of German parentage in Wisconsin. His mother's maiden name was Bridget Cox. As a vivacious colleen (cailin to the Irish) she had left Ireland when quite young. The elder Phil had fought valiantly in the War Between the States as a soldier of the Blue army. He did some of the fighting at Vicksburg. But the day came when he was mustered out—at Chattanooga. And so he married Bridget Cox here.

There were six children born in the Mandre family, only three of them still living. Younger Phil's sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Brennan, now is juvenile court officer here. A brother, John W., who is a former city councilman of Chattanooga, is at present in California, connected with the telegraphic branch of a big-time horse-racing syndicate.

About the first real job young Phil Mandre ever had was carrying a route for the Times and Adolph S. Ochs. He earned $1.50 a week while going to school. In 1882, he became an immense help to Mr. Ochs in the business office—at a salary of $5 a week. The Times then occupied a three-story brick building on Market street, where Eckerd's store now is to be found. Will Weitzell, late assistant business manager of the Times, came to the paper about the time Phil was an office boy.

Mandre liked to slip into the composing room at night, to set type out of the boxes (case to later printers), so in 1884 he asked to be transferred to the composition end of things. About twelve handmen worked on the paper proper, while three or four more "stuck up" a semimonthly trade sheet called "The Tradesman." The journeyman printer's scale was twelve round dollars weekly.

Phil also worked on "The Tradesman" and he got to be a swift typesetter, earning more because of piecework. He learned his trade, for the most part, under "Pat" Gamble, who at that time was the Tradesman's foreman. But Mandre also had another good friend who took a deep interest in his welfare. Lapsley G. Walker, the well-known editor of the Times in later years, taught the boy a deal of good English and grammar and encouraged him to stand shoulder to shoulder with the old type-stickers.

Mr. Walker was then the Times' telegraph editor, handling that never-to-be-forgotten stuff called "flimsy" or "manifold copy," a transparent, tissuelike paper which the printers "raved" over under dim and glimmering gas lights. Colonel Milton Ochs and Miss Anna Schneitman, says Mr. Mandre, are the only ones now living in Chattanooga who were members of that group of the early '80s.

The Times moved from Market street to the corner of Eighth and Cherry streets in 1886. When 18 years old, and after completing the four years' apprenticeship in six months less than that required time, Phil obtained his journeyman's card at the June meeting of the awesome typos in 1888. At that date, Local 89 boasted about fifty members, for there was issued a Sunday morning paper called

COOKE FAMILY IS DEEPLY ROOTED INTO PRINCIPLES OF TRADES-UNIONISM -THROUGH ACTIVITIES OF 5 OF TRIBE

Total Membership Amounts to 168 Years As Father Leads Parade With Fifty Years in International Typographical Union.

R. M. Cooke Carries Pride of Organized Labor As a City Commissioner in Chattanooga—With Other Three Brothers Much Has Been Seen By the Clan As Labor Marches On.

The labor movement was just beginning to take a firm root in America when William H. Cooke was born in the Ohio village of Circleville, on Christmas day of 1848.

Little did he realize when, in his youth, he became a pioneer leader in the unions of labor, that he would furnish to this great cause more than a century and a half of service through himself and four sons.

Chattanooga may point with pride to the fact that much of this 168 years of service was established right here in this community.

The citizens of the community may justly be proud that few, if any other families in the nation, can boast of such a record.

MILTON S. COOKE

William Cooke was born of a farmer father of Dutch descent. Although he grow up with the advantages of a common school education, his field for learning was limited.

But the young man was not to content himself with the narrow scope of knowledge thus afforded. He grew to manhood spending every moment of his spare time striving to improve himself.

He sat up half the night to read Pilgrim's Progress, the Bible, and to study of this movement called "organized labor." And while yet in his teens decided to become a printer.

Entering this trade as an apprentice, in the Civil War era, young Cooke paused long enough to enlist in the United States Navy and serve his country.

But in these trying years William Cooke's interest in labor never slackened. He traced the unions of labor back in European history for 600 years.

He realized that the eldest American charter, under which the first English settlement was made on American soil, was granted under a stipulation by King James that a common storehouse would be established into which products were to be poured and distributed according to the needs of the colonists.

And so it was, he found, that this was the industrial Constitution under which the first inhabitants of Jamestown lived for five years.

Young Cooke began to trace, in his own mind, the struggles of organized labor. He found that the ink on the American Constitution was hardly dry when the first craft unions came into existence.

He read that in the 1850s the first permanent national unions were formed, among them his own typographical union, which was born in 1851.

These were the things that led Cooke to take up the work and become a pioneer in the field, conditions in which he longed so to improve.

William Cooke had come into the world a few years after the invention of the electric telegraph, that was in later years to play such an important part in the progress of his own craft.

One has a picture of him growing into manhood in a period of many trying times of the youth of his country. There were the questions of slavery, the annexation of states and the expansion of the territories of America, and the beginning of strikes in the labor movement. Along with all this came the invention and advancement of labor-saving machinery that was to change the whole industrial picture of the world.

William Cooke died before the coinage of such modern terms as "depressions" and "sit-down" strikes, but he lived through many a panic, that threatened the security of business, and participated in history-making strikes.

When young Cooke started out in the world of labor, eight hours a day and a five-day-week plan were unheard of. Many a time was he called on the job to work all day, grab a few hours' sleep and begin all over working on throughout the night.

These were the days prior to the advent of the Linotype machine, when type was set by hand. When the day's work was over Cooke and his colleagues usually were required to begin undoing what they had done, by collecting the type and placing it back in its holders.

These are some of the conditions that led Cooke to become a pioneer in the labor movement.

Some years after William Cooke was born he removed with his family to Evansville, Indiana. Here he completed his apprenticeship on the Evansville Courier, at the age of eighteen. He became a charter member of the Evansville Typographical Union, and, meanwhile, had married Miss Ada Lindsay, of Evansville.

Young Cooke was working in Evansville as an apprentice when Abraham Lincoln was shot. He helped set the type that announced this tragedy to the world.

He was working on the Evansville Courier when Andrew Johnson was in the White House, and many a time did his hands set the words "Andrew Johnson," as he recorded news of the readmission of the seceded states, or amendments to the Constitution of the United States, that grew out of the Civil War.

Back in those days a typesetter was more than a printer. Frequently he was called on to compose, edit and set the copy, and thus was a liberal education required.

If young Cooke was setting a story about President Johnson, Ulysses Grant, or any of the other national leaders of the time, he was required to know something of their background, for the proofreader might be out or the post unfilled.

About the time that the movement of organized labor was growing and spreading with the rapidity of a Kansas dust storm, William Cooke and his family left Evansville and moved to Chattanooga.

This was in the year 1886, when Grover Cleveland was in the presidential chair, and at a time when there were extended labor strikes and Congress was taking steps forbidding Chinese laborers to emigrate to this country.

Cooke became connected with the Chattanooga Times as a compositor.

He was a member of the International Typographical Union for approximately fifty years, during which time he served on many important committees and participated in leading labor discussions of his time.

He served for a number of terms as secretary-treasurer of the Chattanooga Typographical Union and was at one time its president.

But when this leader first came to Chattanooga there were no central or state organizations of labor.

The Chattanooga federation was organized four years after Cooke had taken up his residence here and the State body was not formed until eleven years later.

Shortly after Cooke moved to Tennessee and became employed here, there occurred the panic of 1893, which was followed in 1894

by what was then regarded as the most serious conflict between capital and labor that this nation had ever known.

The American Railway Union, a labor organization of railway employes, had ordered a general strike on all railroads running pullmans, and for days traffic was almost at a standstill.

All through this, and other important labor difficulties, Cooke continued his interest in the affairs of labor, blazing trails and fighting for the rights of his fellow workers.

Meanwhile there had been the beginning of what was to be a large family of nine sons and five daughters, eleven of whom are still living, including eight of the sons and three of the daughters.

The spirit of this early leader was inborn in these children, and as a natural course four of the boys grew up to follow in their father's footsteps.

These sons have, and are still holding, offices long since filled by their pioneering father, and each of the Cooke quartet is affiliated with the International Typographical Union, with a total membership aggregating 118 years for the four.

Allen L. Cooke, the oldest of the group, was born in Evansville, Indiana, fifty-seven years ago. Moving to Chattanooga with his family, he served his apprenticeship on the Times. He joined the union in 1900 and moved to Cincinnati, where he is now working in a large commercial plant.

He has worked at various times on every newspaper in Cincinnati and has served for a number of years as chairman of the business committee of the Cincinnati Typographical Union and has held other posts in the typographical union there.

Robert M. Cooke, the next in age, was born in Evansville in 1887, and came to Chattanooga with his mother a few months after his father located here.

Becoming a member of the Chattanooga Typographical Union in 1907, he has been a leader in local, state and national labor movements for thirty-one years.

R. M. Cooke was elected for five terms to serve as president of the Chattanooga Typographical Union and for thirty years represented this body in the Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council. He was for twenty-five years delegate from his local trade union to the State Federation of Labor, and was for three terms president of the Tennessee Federation of Labor.

As a delegate in 1936 to the International Typographical Union's annual convention in Toronto, Canada, from the Chattanooga Typographical Union, R. M. Cooke was named chairman of the resolutions committee, one of the most important offices of the meeting.

He also was delegate to the seventy-fifth jubilee convention of the International Typographical Union, in Indianapolis, in 1927.

And, added to his long record is eighteen years as editor of the Labor World, the official publication of the Central Labor Body.

In 1935, his friends in organized labor presented a united front in electing him to the office of Chattanooga commissioner of public

The Sanctity of a Contract

A contract is a sacred obligation. It is an agreement in good faith by two persons or parties to guarantee the fulfillment of conditions. It is secured only by their integrity, an intangible value, yet more precious than the greatest wealth. It is their word of honor and should be held as sacred as honor itself. The person who violates a contract breaks his word—and who does not hold in contempt the person who cannot be trusted?

Labor and capital must need meet on common ground. The rights of both must be recognized and respected. It is their common right to expect the complete fulfillment of the contracts between them. The right to collective bargaining depends on the collective responsibility and collective good faith—these gone and all else is lost. Labor cannot expect capital or the public to respect their organization if the members of those organizations fail to respect the principles upon which they are organized.

Industrial unrest and high living costs cannot be remedied save through the common effort toward increased production. Therein lies the remedy for the state of unrest. Every strike, however trivial, impedes our progress toward that common goal. The radical agitators that are gnawing at the foundation of our industrial structure can only be combated by square-jawed, two-fisted Americanism. What more certain way can they be defeated than by every worker faithfully fulfilling his contract and arbitrating any differences he may have with his employer? Therein is the most convincing answer that can be made to those who seek to destroy the principles upon which our country is founded.

Increased production can only be accomplished by everyone working together. If contracts are not violated there will be less strikes. The true American workman will not listen to those who would have him break faith with his union, his employer and his country. The sanctity of contracts must be observed. What American does not hold his honor and his country above all else?—The Carpenter.

New Instrument Splits Seconds In Thousandths

Knoxville.—Splitting seconds into thousandths with exact precision is the feature of a new machine demonstrated at the University of Tennessee this week. Introduced by Psychologist Ralph E. Dunford, of U. T., to a group of fellow phychologists from all sections of the nation, the instrument measures time required for a person to respond to a stimulus.

Dr. Kenneth L. Hertel, of the U. T. physics department, is inventor of the machine, a "chronoscope." It is used in the field of psychology to time different persons on seeing a flash of light, hearing a sudden sound, or reacting to any given stimuli. Also, this information is used in selecting workers in fields where quick, accurate movements are necessary.

While other chronoscopes are in use, none can measure as accurately as this new machine, Dr. Dunford said. Moreover, this machine can outdo others by measuring the reaction of nine persons at one time or of simultaneous movements of one person, and the number could be extended if desirable.

AFL Approves New Wage-Hour Bill, Increasing Chances of Passing Measure in Present Congress

Rules Committee Barrier Down, as Chairman O'Connor Asks Favorable Vote on Bill Reported by House Labor Committee and Accepted and Indorsed by William Green.

Washington.—The wage and hour bill reported by the House Labor committee agrees about 99 per cent with the ILNS forecast. It is approved and accepted by William Green for the American Federation of Labor and by Congressman John O'Connor, of New York, who, as chairman of the Rules committee, has pretty nearly the power of life and death over the measure.

The minimum wage is fixed at 25 cents per hour for one year, to be raised to 40 cents per hour within three years. The definite time is the only thing that was not told before.

The maximum work week for the first year is 44 hours, which is to be reduced two hours a year till it reaches 40. The Ramspeck bill started with a 48-hour week.

The Secretary of Labor holds hearings and decides what industries come under the law because of their "affecting commerce," and issues orders to that effect. The year's lag cited above begins with the issuance of this order. Appeals from these orders are to the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals. The Department of Justice is charged with the duty of enforcing the law.

Outlook for Bill Changed.

"Oppressive child labor" is defined in a complex way. Roughly, it means the employment of youngsters under 16 in manufacturing and mining; or the employment of persons between 16 and 18 years of age in occupations which the Chief of the Children's bureau shall find hazardous or detrimental to the health and well-being of such persons. The Chief of the Children's bureau also has the power to certify children between 14 and 16. Orders of this kind can be enforced by injunctions of the Federal District courts, and the U. S. courts in the territories.

A week ago, opinion on the Hill was that any bill would have a hard time to get by the Rules committee. That is definitely changed. John O'Connor, chairman, has written all members of the committee, asking them to favor the bill. It is practically certain that enough of them will do it.

"The American Federation of Labor accepts and favors the new wage and hour bill. It embodies the three fundamental requirements fought for all along by the American Federation of Labor — a specific and universal floor for wages, a specific and universal ceiling for hours and provision for enforcement by the Department of Justice.

"In some particulars we believe the bill can be improved. We believe the 25-cents an hour minimum wage is too low to begin with and the 44-hour week too long even as a start. It is true the bill provides that these rates be stepped up until a 40-cents an hour 40-hour week is reached at the end of three years. But why postpone these benefits? The country needs them now.

Effective Bill Needed Now.

"At this very moment, when the nation is suffering from curtailed purchasing power and widespread unemployment, a really effective wage and hour bill should prove most beneficial. We believe it would be sound common sense to adopt a bill providing a minimum wage of not less than 30 cents an hour to begin with and a maximum work week of 40 hours.

"Any industry which depends for survival on sweatshop wages and sweatshop conditions of labor should cease to exist in the public interest."

WPA Condemned By Alabamans

Tuscaloosa, Ala. — The Alabama State Federation of Labor, in a strong resolution charged the WPA with forcing heretofore self-respecting men to go on relief rolls in order to get a job, all because this agency of the government is being placed in competition with private industry. The resolution was presented by representatives of the Common and Construction Laborers' organization. Practically the same resolution was adopted at the Florida, Louisiana and Georgia convention, and it is said that many city central bodies and local unions are sending into Washington similar resolutions and requests.

Judge L. D. Miller

Here is my record while in the Tennessee Legislature, the 61st session. I have been consistent all the time since.

April 18, 1919.

Honorable L. D. Miller
Chattanooga, Tennessee

Dear Sir:

As Chairman of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, it affords me great pleasure to express to you my sincere thanks for your valuable assistance in the recent session of the General Assembly of the State. I think it is simply a matter of justice for me to state to you that I consider your services in the Legislature of more value to the masses—the common people—than the work of any other man in the Lower House in the Sixty-first Session of the General Assembly. * * * In fact, in every instance when I had occasion to call upon you in behalf of the toilers of the State, you responded so readily that I consider it my duty to express to you, as the Legislative Representative of the State Federation of Labor, the sincere gratitude of this organization.

With best wishes for your future welfare, etc.,

Yours very truly,

DAVE HANLY, Chairman,
Tennessee Federation of Labor.

The above letter was written nineteen years ago. I hope my record as a public official through succeeding years has been consistent with the sentiment expressed in Mr. Hanly's letter.

"Labor News Review" Radio Program Establishes All-Time Record Run

Presented Every Week by Station WJSV of the Columbia Broadcasting System, Old Feature Was Originated by and Is Still Produced and Broadcast by Albert N. Dennis, Labor Writer and Editor Since 1912, Who Took Up Radio in 1931.

The "Labor News Review" radio program has become the oldest of its kind in the United States to be continuously presented and the oldest labor program of any kind on any standard key network radio station on the North American continent! It is presented every week by Station WJSV of the Columbia Broadcasting system, Washington.

Having gained this phenomenal record, International Labor News Service has undertaken to learn for readers of the nation's labor press just why it sticks—and clicks.

The individual who originated the "Labor News Review," and who still prepares, produces and broadcasts this program, is Albert N. Dennis, labor writer and editor since 1912, who has also been interested ir some manner in radio since its practical beginning in 1921. He has long been called "The Radio News Voice of Labor." He now has a labor column published in daily newspapers and edits a book called "Facts About Labor," in addition to his radio work.

How Program Started.

"How did you start the 'Labor News Review?' Mr. Dennis was asked. "That is, how were you able to get it on an important station like WJSV, then keep it going?"

"That would be a long story if told in detail," Mr. Dennis replied. "Perhaps you can use a summary, something like this: It got on and has remained on the air because it has met with the approval of a very liberal radio station management, while rendering a distinct public service. It has always been recognized as a standard professional program. You see, the station management knew I had put on other programs and had long been a student of radio; they knew I had spent years in training myself for a regular program; they knew I had been intimately associated with the labor movement for about twenty-five years, not as a labor official, but in an independent capacity, as a labor writer and editor. This knowledge, coupled with a sincere desire to render a complete public service, apparently induced Mr. Harry C. Butcher, then general manager of WJSV but now a vice-president of the Columbia Broadcasting system, to request the then program director of WJSV to give me a try-out. I recall there were six station representatives in the small Studio 3 when I made the first broadcast of the 'Labor News Review.' Anyway, the try-out must have been successful, for the program has never missed a week since—and that was during the summer of 1934."

Public Service Sought.

"Did you get your try-out through the influence of any organization, or by reason of the fact that you were then the editor of 'The Trades Unionist?'" Mr. Dennis was further asked.

"No," was the reply, "and I'll be frank to tell you that 'pressure' would very probably have prevented the program from getting on. It should be made clear that the management of Station WJSV really wanted to work up a suitable labor program, as a public service. Credit for the 'break' that put the program on the air belongs exclusively to Mr. Harry C. Butcher, who did the unusual by personally requesting his staff to make the try-out.

"Mr. Butcher will bear me out, I'm sure when I tell you that one of the first things he said to me, before the try-out, was that the station should not be brought into any 'entangling alliances'; that, if I should broadcast as a representative of some certain organization, other organizations could and probably would, demand similar representation and there may reasonably be 'no end' to complications. But an independent station commentator of proven ability, Mr. Butcher pointed out, could properly represent all, by giving general coverage to the subject of labor and allied interests.

Broadcast as Independent

"Thus Mr. Butcher made it clear that, even if I made good on the try-out, I would have to broadcast as an independent commentator, put on as a sustaining feature by the station, without a sponsor, and devote the program to general labor coverage. Mr. A. D. Willard, Jr., then commercial manager but now general manager of Station WJSV, and Mr. F. A. Long, the present program director, have since followed this policy."

"Well, since you virtually became a member of the station's staff," we continued, "was there any censorship established?"

"Theoretically, perhaps, but actually none," Mr. Dennis said. "There are certain laws and FCC regulations, besides WJSV and Columbia policies, that must be observed, of course. But there has never been any direct censorship exercised by the station management on the 'Labor News Review.'"

It was explained that the program is different from an "address" prepared for one-time delivery by some individual, copies of which must always be filed in advance. Practically all radio "addresses," it was stated, are put on to delineate some particular policy or theory, which may or may not be agreeable to "the other fellow"; and the individuals preparing such addresses are not always familiar with entirely necessary radio regulations, promulgated in the public interest. Staff broadcasters, on the other hand, are supposed to "know the ropes."

Much Praise of Programs

"Have there been any complaints from anti-union sources?" we asked.

"Surprisingly few," Mr. Dennis stated. "We try to keep the program clean. While it is avowedly a 'labor' program, even espousing the labor viewpoint, and we certainly use hot words on occasion, we do stick to facts. Facts, you know, are difficult to combat."

"And how about commendations?" he was asked.

"There have been many commendations from labor, civic and even from progressive business interests. While the labor movement has apparently come to take the program for granted, the Building Trades council nearly three years ago selected the Labor News Review as the 'most valuable public service program' on any Washington station. Only recently, the Washington Union Label league unanimously voted a special award to Station WJSV, believed the first such honor conferred by a bona-fide labor organization upon a standard network station. Also, floral tributes have been sent to the station on special occasions by the American Federation of Labor, the Washington Central Labor union and the Building Trades council."

Many Guest Speakers

Further questioning revealed that over 100 special guests have appeared for 5-minute periods on the Labor News Review program, each telling their own particular story. These have included Frank Morrison, secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Labor; I. M. Ornburn, secretary of the A. F. of L. Union Label Trades Department; John Locher, president of the Washington Central Labor Union, and Chester M. Wright, editor of ILNS, who has himself created several radio programs for labor and, with his staff, prepares "The Labor Parade." Also many others of local and national prominence.

It was brought out that WJSV, which broadcasts on 1460 kilocycles with 10,000 watts power, is heard for various distances. Letters have been received from Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio, North Carolina, Florida, and elsewhere. This raised the question as to why the program is not on the regular Columbia network, especially since it has made good for so long on a Columbia key station.

Program Largely Local

"That has been suggested to Columbia, I understand, by several good friends," Mr. Dennis informed us. "However, this particular program is not suited for network broadcast. It is a combination of local and national labor coverage, especially designed for broadcast in the nation's capital city. On the other hand, I have now developed a program especially adapted for network broadcast; a program confined strictly to pertinent facts concerning labor, industry and their allied interests; wholesomely impartial and void of theoretical argument, yet vital as public infor-

United Labor Support Helps Wage-Hour Bill's Chances But Measure Faces Hard Fight—Proper Rock Dusting Would Have Prevented Virginia Mine Disaster.

By GEORGE L. KNAPP

Washington.—The wage and hour bill reported to the House by Mary Norton as chairman of the Labor committee has the united and complete support of Labor. Both A. F. of L. and CIO want it passed now; though both want it amended in the near future. Mrs. Norton made her report a vigorous and powerful plea for the bill; declaring that it is absolutely necessary to check the "deflation spiral," and that this spiral, if allowed to continue, "may threaten the foundations of government itself."

And yet, the wage and hour bill could take the place of Jordan in the old Negro song: "Jordan am a hard road to trabbel."

* * *

The fact is that many good friends of the bill in the House fear that Representative Ramspeck, of Georgia, has put his finger on the really weak point of the bill; that the Supreme Court will find it contrary to the due process clause, and declare it unconstitutional. Ramspeck points out that in two cases, the Supreme Court has upheld price-fixing and wage-fixing, but that, in both cases, "the power to fix prices and wages was delegated to fact-finding agencies, and these agencies were directed to establish varying prices and wages in accordance with standards incorporated in the laws."

The absence of such a fact-finding agency from the present bill, Ramspeck holds, will bring it under the ban.

Quite a number of friends of the measure fear that he is right. Some of those who have this fear will vote for the bill anyway, trusting to amend it before the court can knock it out. But it gives the measure a "hard road to trabbel."

The explosion in a Red Jacket coal mine in Virginia, killing 45 men, means negligence not many degrees short of murder.

All agree that it was an explosion of coal dust; though none yet know what set it off. But for 20 years, all authorities on safety in mining have agreed that if rock dust is distributed in a mine with sufficient care, the coal dust cannot be set off at all. The Bureau of Mines has been preaching this doctrine since it was born in 1910; and British mines had been trying it out before. It has to be done carefully and with no shifting.

But the cost of this method, where it has been tried out, varies from half a cent to four cents per ton of coal taken from the mine.

One of the most important events in Washington in the last few days has passed almost without notice. President Roosevelt, acting under the tax laws, has authorized the Senate lobby committee to inspect all income, excess profits and capital stock tax returns.

Lobbies can't be conducted without money — especially when they involve the sending of literally millions of telegrams. An inspection of tax returns offers a good chance to learn where the money comes from. That chance is improved by the fact that Minton, of Indiana, is chairman of the Senate lobby committee, and that Minton so far has shown himself unable to get scared at the roarings of Big Business.

Big Propaganda Flood Coming—

House Is Warned of Fight Against Recovery Program

Washington. — Sam Rayburn, of Texas, majority leader of the House, read the House a letter received by the president. "I just want to show the beginning of the great flood of propaganda that will pour into the House through the circulation of printed petitions against the recovery or pump-priming program," he said. The letter follows:

Dear Mr. President:

I thought you (and Jim Farley) might be interested in copies of the new propaganda about to launched on members of Congress against your recovery program, and that your leaders in Congress might get ahead of this and take the teeth out of it before they get started by letting them know beforehand where the stuff actually originates.

This is being originated in a large corporation in Detroit, Mich., the same outfit that got out the chain telegrams started by their henchmen in different states, many of which were signed by minor children, babes in arms, and even the family pet poodle, and Congress fell for it like a ton of brick, so they are about to try it again. The minor children and pet poodles cannot vote.

(Signed) Your supporter 100 per cent. (I don't sign my name because I might lose my job.)

The petition which the letter writer enclosed demands "immediate repeal or most drastic amendment of the Wagner Labor Relations Act," "elimination of all control over railroads by the ICC," except safetly regulations, relief only "by appropriations to the Red Cross when really needed and on the most economical basis," and taxes that would reach "every citizen with a margin above bare necessities."

End Building Service Strike.

New York City.—A three-day strike of elevator operators and other service employes in resident clubs and furnished room establishments on the upper West Side, called by Local 32-A of the Building Service Employes' International union, has been terminated by an agreement covering all but one building, it was announced by Herbert Kallman, president of the local.

PRESERVATION OF DEMOCRACY IN ORGANIZED LABOR IS ONLY ISSUE IN CONTROVERSY OF A. F. OF L. WITH C. I. O., GREEN DECLARES

'A. F. of L. is Based on Democratic Procedure, Majority Rule, He Asserts; In the C. I. O. "We Find a Self-Appointed, Self-Constituted, Self-Perpetuating Committee Ruling Affairs by Absolute Dictatorship; Membership Never Has Been Consulted About Any Policy; Union Members Who Contribute Part of Their Wages to Finance Organization Never Have Been Given Any Sort of Accounting of Their Funds."

"This Committee, Itself, Is a Fraud; In Reality the C. I. O. Is Governed by One Man—John L. Lewis; He Does With the C. I. O. as He Alone Pleases, He Spends C. I. O. Funds as He Alone Desires, He Decides C. I. O. Policies as He Alone Wishes—All Without the Slightest Vestige of Responsibility to Anyone But Himself."

EDITOR'S NOTE: In its March 9, 1938, issue the Washington (D. C.) Daily News published a statement by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, on the Democracy Sole Issue in Feud Green." In an explanation of why the News said: "Recently the News and other Scripps-Howard newspapers published two series of labor articles—'Inside the C.I.O.,' by Benjamin Stolberg, and 'Inside the A. F. of L.,' by Herbert Little. At the conclusion of the Stolberg articles, John L. Lewis was invited to make a statement regarding the C. I. O.'s position. Lewis did not accept our invitation. At the conclusion of the Little articles, William Green was invited to make a statement regarding the A. F. of L.'s position. Green accepted. His statement follows." By courtesy of the Washington Daily News, the American Federation of Labor Weekly News Service republishes Mr. Green's statement.

President, American Federation of Labor

In the world epidemic of hate and despotism our country today is striving to save peace and democracy. We fear that the red and black plagues of oppression, which have stricken so many other nations, may be transmitted to us.

A few years ago we were inclined to scoff at such fears. We felt "It can't happen here." But we are beginning to realize that official justice, communal tolerance, our individual liberty—things we took for granted yet based our whole lives upon—now may be swept from under us. And we are beginning to understand that the first field in which the sowers of hate already have begun to plant the seeds of class warfare in this country is labor.

In the fight to maintain democracy in American labor, the American Federation of Labor stands in the same position as does the United States in the world struggle for the same cause in government. The four million members of the A. F. of L.—hard-working, decent, loyal American citizens—stand arrayed together as the shock troops against the perverters of labor, the enemies of freedom.

Recalls Battles

During the past two years much has been written about labor's hopes and trials, its past and future. Dramatic material was provided in the secession of the unions now with the C. I. O. Many well-meaning liberals and enthusiasts, attracted by the sensationalism of C. I. O. tactics, blinded by spectacular promises, deluded by empty claims, poured into print abuse of the A. F. of L. and praise of the C. I. O. Time has rectified and will cure most of these false impressions. And we are indebted to the Scripps-Howard newspapers, to the sense of fairness of their editors, for this opportunity to relate a few facts.

First, let us emphasize that the sole issue between the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization is democracy.

Refusal of a minority group in the A. F. of L. to abide by the organization's democratic processes and by the will of the majority brought about the formation of the C. I. O. and the present division in labor in the first instance. The leaders of the C. I. O. have shown since by their works what contempt they have for democracy.

Patterned After U. S.

A word here about the structure of the American Federation of Labor. It is closely patterned after that of the United States Government. The national and international unions are the states. They banded together 57 years ago in a federation to which they granted certain powers, reserving the rest to themsleves. Only in this way could central dictatorship be avoided and local democratic control over union affairs preserved.

The national and international unions elect delegates to the federation's annual conventions. The votes of these delegates are based upon the numerical strength of the unions. The ratio is one convention vote for each 100 union members. The conventions make all the federation's laws and elect all its officers by majority vote. At any convention the federation's constitution can be changed by a two-thirds vote.

If this system of government should prove inadequate or ineffective, it would be the fault of the union members, just as it would be the fault of the citizens of the United States if their government broke down. To indict this system would be to indict democracy itself. Those who say the governmental structure of the A. F. of L. is out of date are saying democracy is out of date.

How C. I. O. Operates

Now let us see how the C. I. O. is governed. There we find a self-appointed, self-constituted, self-perpetuating committee ruling the affairs of the organization by absolute dictatorship. The membership never has been consulted about any policy. The union members who contribute part of their wages to finance the organization never have been given any sort of accounting for the expenditure of their funds.

This committee, itself, is a fraud. In reality the C. I. O. is governed by one man—John L. Lewis. He does with the C. I. O. as he alone pleases, he spends C. I. O. funds as he alone pleases, he decides C. I. O. policies as he alone pleases — all without the slightest vestige of responsibility to anyone but himself. Even such an outstanding C. I. O. leader as David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers, has protested against such a condition of affairs.

As a further example of the peculiar form of C. I. O. government, let us take the Steel Workers Organizing Committee. It held its first "convention" in Pittsburgh a few months ago. The delegates did not elect officers because under the S. W. O. C. agreement with the C. I. O. these officers must be appointed by Lewis. Philip Murray, chairman of the S. W. O. C., promised the delegates a financial report. They got one. It did not state how much money had been spent. It merely gave percentages of expenditures for various purposes.

False Issue

But, the C. I. O. sympathizers assert, the basic issue between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. is industrial versus craft unionism. That is a false issue. The American Federation of Labor is not opposed to industrial unionism. It recognizes that the industrial form of unionism is best suited for certain mass-production industries. It has chartered many industrial unions. At the same time, the A. F. of L. recognizes that certain industries are best suited to craft unionism. It is simply a question of applying the rule of reason.

Let us explore only briefly the recent history of this so-called issue.

The 1933 convention of the A. F. of L. authorized a committee to draw up a compromise agreement on a policy satisfactory to both industrialist and craft unionists. The committee, on which Mr. Lewis and his group were amply represented, submitted a unanimous report to the 1934 convention The report was adopted by that convention.

The Lewis group urged the 1935 convention to adopt a more extreme policy. The suggestion was defeated in the 1935 convention by more than a two-thirds vote. Instead of accepting this verdict and continuing the fight within the federation in the hope of winning over a majority to their side, the Lewis group bolted and seceded.

Was that democracy?

Points to Strike

Another oft-repeated charge is that the American Federation of Labor failed to organize the unorganized. The C. I. O. announced it would set out to do so. Conditions for an organizing drive were highly favorable. The Supreme Court had just upheld the constitutionality of the National Labor Relations Act, freeing the workers from the fear of being discharged if they joined a union.

What happened? The C. I. O. did not seek to convince the workers of the benefits of joining a union, nor did it seek to convince employers of the benefits of dealing with organized labor. Instead, the C. I. O. sought to organize by coercion and intimidation. It fomented a wave of sit-down strikes. It flouted contracts. It harassed industry. It antagonized the public. It permitted trouble-making communists to gain positions of control over some of its unions.

The communist party became the champion of the C. I. O. In "little steel" the C. I. O. presumed to call a strike without first organizing the workers and without even calling a strike vote. The disastrous collapse of that strike has set back the prospects of organizing "little steel" for many years and has impoverished the workers in the industry.

Charges Raids

The net result is that the C. I. O. made some membership gains but could not hold them. When the industrial recession set in, its new membership disintegrated. Its new unions were loosely organized and not self supporting.

In desperation the C. I. O. started to raid established A. F. of L. unions to gain membership. That's all the C. I. O. is doing now. And its activities in this respect have become so flagrant that certain C. I. O. leaders themselves, including Mr. Dubinsky, have pleaded with Mr. Lewis to cease, lest the possibility of restoring peace in labor be irreparably damaged.

What was the American Federation of Labor doing during this period? It marshalled a large force of organizers and went to work in an orderly, disciplined way. It gained more than a million members and still has them. It did not resort to sit-down strikes or other illegal methods. It respected contracts. It entrenched itself in the confidence of the workers, the employers and the public.

The total membership of the A. F. of L. now is close to 4,000,000. This figure is not an empty claim. It is based on the per capita tax receipts from each union of 1 per per month for each member, which finance the federation. The federations' financial reports are made public annually.

Questions C. I. O. Claim

It seems the C. I. O. claims four million members. Some newspaper writers recently have scaled that figure down to three million. The C. I. O. never has made public any report on its dues-paid membership. There is no proof of it in any record available to the public. Mr. Dubinsky, of the C. I. O., estimates its membership at about 2,000,000. He says its new unions represent only about 25 per cent of the C. I. O.'s present membership.

It must be evident by now to any impartial observer that the C. I. O.'s vainglorious boasts must be largely discounted and that it has practically abandoned its efforts to organize the unorganized.

The pity of it is that had labor's ranks remained united, the gains of the past two years could have been trebled without upsetting industrial recovery.

We come, finally, to the all-important question of labor peace in which the American people have so vital a stake.

Want Peace

The American Federation of Labor wants peace. It did everything possible, short of submitting to minority rule, to avert war. When the C. I. O. unions seceded, the A. F. of L. humbled itself and begged them to come back. For two years the federation held out a standing offer to negotiate a settlement.

This offer was spurned by the C. I. O. until last October, when the rapid dissolution of their membership forced the hand of the C. I. O. leaders. A peace conference was arranged.

After prolonged negotiations, the conferees representing both sides reached an agreement. It was acceptable to the A. F. of L. representatives and to the C. I. O. representatives. A few hours before the public announcement of peace was scheduled, Mr. Lewis, who was not a member of the C. I. O. committee, vetoed the agreement so far as the C. I. O. was concerned.

This statement is not a mere assertion by the American Federation of Labor. It has been confirmed by David Dubinsky, a member of the C. I. O. peace committee. It has been confirmed by Max Zaritsky, president of another C. I. O. union.

Serious in Effort

No one who listened to the cheers of the delegates at the last A. F. of L. convention when it was announced that a peace conference was being arranged could doubt that the members of the American Federation of Labor want peace. The members of the C. I. O. have no forum, but their equal anxiety for peace is unquestioned.

Then it is an inescapable conclusion that the united desire for peace in the divided ranks of labor is being balked by one man. He is the dictator of the C. I. O. He is the would-be dictator over all of organized labor. His recent political activities indicate he ultimately seeks an even broader domain.

This one man flouted the principles of democracy when he formed the C. I. O., he disdained the principles of democracy in running the C. I. O. and he threatens the future of democracy by maintaining the C. I. O.

Mr. T. R. Cuthbert,
Editor, Labor World,
Chattanooga, Tennessee.

Dear Mr. Cuthbert:

May we offer our congratulations on your new, enlarged edition of the Labor World. This new improvement reflects the interest and support of Chattanooga Craftsmen and identifies the Labor World as one of this localities' most progressive and growing newspapers.

We shall continue to advertise in the Labor World as we have in the past, because we feel that this is our most effective method of reaching Chattanooga Tradesmen.

Best wishes for your continued success.

Very Truly Yours,

IT IS the WAGE EARNER who always wants a better home, more and finer furnishings, new clothing, a new radio, a better car. He keeps his wages in circulation, BUYS THINGS with his money. . . . When the WAGE EARNER restricts his buying, merchants feel it immediately. 10,000 UNION MEMBERS ARE READING

THE LABOR WORLD

THIS BLANKETS the Labor Movement in Chattanooga --- goes right to the heart of the most responsive and best buying group in this area. THE LABOR WORLD is the most effective approach to this trade. When you are in THE LABOR WORLD it is just like being introduced and sponsored by a friend of the readers.

After repeated tests, PRINTERS INK, the recognized authority on advertising media, gives this verdict: "A labor paper is a far better advertising medium than any ordinary newspaper in comparison with circulation A labor paper having 2,000 subscribers is of more value to the business man who advertises in it than the ordinary newspaper with 12,000."

Three Essentials of a Profitable Advertising Medium

1 It must reach a group of people who are ABLE to buy your goods. Craft unions represent the highest paid labor in the Chattanooga area. Readers of THE LABOR WORLD not only are ABLE to buy, but they DO BUY things they want

2 It must have the interest of its readers, so that they will read the paper thoroughly and, therefore, are likely to SEE YOUR ADVERTISEMENT. No other publication has such intense reader interest as THE LABOR WORLD. It is the authoritative voice of Labor in Chattanooga

3 Readers must have confidence in the paper. THE LABOR WORLD is owned and operated by the Chattanooga Central Labor Union and goes automatically to all its union members. They know that the business man who is not reliable, or is unfair to organized labor, cannot buy an advertisement in THE LABOR WORLD.

The readers, who are the owners of THE LABOR WORLD, are loyal to business men who use the paper. An advertisement establishes a background of friendliness among union people as no other publication can.

mation and, I believe, quite interestingly arranged. I am confident that the seniority preference, other considerations being equal, which I have earned through my long apprenticeship on a prominent Columbia station, will be recognized and when it can be proven that the network program is in the public interest. I am equally confident that a try-out will definitely establish its unusual value. I hope to know that WJSV and Columbia, too, wish sincerely to render the greatest possible public service."

The "Labor News Review" is one of few radio programs protected by copyright, which is entered in the name of its originator, Albert N. Dennis.

Dennis Never Missed Broadcast

While minor time changes have been unavoidable, the program has never missed its usual weekly broadcast. This has meant that the broadcaster has had no extended vacation, no full week-ends out of town and no disabling illness. The only exception was on Dec. 28, 1936, when he had the grippe. On that occasion, he prepared the program but his daughter, Ruby E. Dennis, broadcast it, with John Beecher, the guest speaker for that date, appearing as scheduled. A book issued shortly thereafter, entitled "It Didn't Just Happen!" created a mild sensation and brought out the fact that Ruby had studied long and earnestly to prepare herself as the regular stand-in for her dad, but she has never had further occasion to broadcast the program.

Albert N. Dennis is reputed to have as clear diction as any network broadcaster on the air today and an all-around pleasing "radio voice." Many attribute his outstanding success to this fact. But he prefers instead to give chief credit to helpful friends, including the station management and numerous labor people, to a knowledge of his subject gained through over 25 years of constant research and to hard-won ability to "boil down" vital issues, trends and events, to a few fully understandable words, interestingly arranged.

Program Leader in Popularity

It is said more people hear the "Labor News Review" regularly than any other weekly local broadcast. Of these, it has been determined, a goodly portion are women and perhaps as many as fifty per cent of the listeners are not directly connected with the labor movement. The program has, therefore, proven to pack a very definite "popular" as well as educational and cultural appeal.

Green Urges All A. F. of L. Unions To Press for Quick Passing Of Wages-Hours Measure

Washington, D. C. — President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, has sent a letter to all federation affiliates, urging them to launch a telegram and letter barrage on the members of the rules committee of the house, in behalf of the wage and hour bill reported by the labor committee. He announced further that he would support a petition drive to force enactment before adjournment.

The CIO issued a public statement, urging supporters of the bill in the house to begin circulating a petition to take the bill out of the hands of the rules committee if that committee tried to pigeon hole it.

Mr. Green, in his letter to all federation affiliates, said, in part:

"In fighting for final acceptance of this fundamental principle, namely, a universal foundation for wages, a ceiling for hours, and the administration of the law by the Department of Justice, we have been compelled to contend with the uncompromising opponents of wage and hours legislation of any kind, and the supine willingness of representatives to accept any form of wages and hours legislation. * * *

"It is the opinion of the executive council that if the wages and hours legislation supported by the CIO had been adopted, a great injury would have been done the working people of the United States.

"Action on your part is urgently necessary if we are to secure the enactment of this wages and hours bill before congress adjourns.

"Act at once, act vigorously and convincingly."

Grievances Against NLRB Listed

Green followed up his criticisms on the CIO in this letter by remarks at a press conference. Asked if he would sanction a repeal of the Wagner act, he answered:

"There is no sentiment for repeal of the Wagner act. We believe the measure is sound, if administered properly. But I can say definitely that we feel that the Wagner act has been very badly administered by the board."

He listed these grievances against the NLRB:

1. "Setting aside contracts honestly and sincerely entered into. We don't think that this board has any right to set aside contracts negotiated through the instruments of collecive bargaining.

2. "Setting aside results of an election won by the International Association of Machinists among employes of the Carrollton Metal Products company, Carrollton, O.

3. "Granting the CIO time to proselytize and said an established A. F. of L. union in a Washington, D. C., street car case, where the federation union had enjoyed contractual relations with the company for more than 20 years. This to us is reprehensible."

Mr. Green also said that the State Federation of Labor of Nevada had been reorganized to eliminate the CIO unions.

Our conduct is influenced not by our experiences, but by our expectations.—Bernard Shaw.

Supreme Court Rules "No Jurisdiction" In Union's Plea

Washington, D. C. — The International Ladies' Garment Workers' union lost its appeal to the supreme court against an injunction issued by a three-judge court forbidding the picketing of the Donnelly garment plant in Kansas City, Mo.

The three-judge court held that the Norris-La Guardia anti-injunction law did not apply to this case. Attorneys for the union took an appeal to the supreme court, on the direct appeals act of 1937, which provides that if a law is declared unconstitutional by district judges, the matter can be brought straight to the supreme court.

The supreme court, through Chief Justice Hughes, pointed out that the lower court had not declared the Norris-La Guardia act unconstitutional, but only said that it did not apply to that case. Without the constituional quesion, the supreme court has no jurisdiction in the case at present.

15-Hour Day, 60-Hour Week for Motor Vehicle Drivers Assailed by Green

A. F. of L. President Tells Interstate Commerce Commission That With Over Eleven Million Jobless the Long Hours "Will Constitute the Most Drastic Single Set-back Experienced by American Labor Throughout the Entire History of Government Supervision and Regulation of Standards."

Washington. — Vigorous opposition to the decision of the interstate commerce commission establishing a working day of twelve hours within fifteen hours and a work week of sixty hours for drivers of motor vehicles operated by common and contract carriers, was expressed by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a statement before the commission.

The hearing before the commission resulted from the submission of a joint petition by the American Federation of Labor, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America, the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes and the International Association of Machinists requesting the commission to postpone the application of the hours regulations "until the commission finds it possible to devise regulations which are truly reasonable and will effectively prevent unnecessary hazards to the operation of motor vehicles of common and contract carriers."

The petition, Mr. Green said, was in direct response to the deep feeling of the unfairness and injustice of the proposed regulations which swept the ranks of our labor movement when these regulations were announced to the public.

Welfare of Personnel and Safety of Public Ignored.

"The men employed in this great industry, who are at the weels of the busses transporting passengers across state lines and of the trucks which maintain the movement of commodities in interstate commerce, have received the news of these regulations first with incredulity, then with bitterness, almost refusing to believe that their interests, their welfare and their safety have been disregarded and discounted in deference to the demands and claims of the truck and bus operators.

"It was difficult for these men to believe that in its ruling the interstate commerce commission would subordinate the purpose of public policy to the purpose of the operators who in the very record of this proceeding have made it clear that the welfare and safety of their personnel and the safety of the great mass of men, women and children daily using our public highways are but a matter of casual concern to them."

Great Reverse for Shorter Hours Movement.

Tracing the efforts of organized labor for nearly one hundred years to secure shorter hours by means of both union agreements and maximum hour legislation enacted by federal and state governments, "including the Adamson eight-hour law which effectively limited hours of work on railroads more than twenty years ago," Mr. Green emphatically declared that with the unemployed army approaching the 12,000,000 mark and efforts being made throughout nation to spread employment by shortening the hours of work, "a decision of the interstate commerce commission giving official sanction to a maximum work week of 60 hours and a maximum working day of 15 hours for men engaged in an occupation unique for its exacting, strenuous and admittedly hazardous character, will constitute the most drastic single setback experienced by American labor throughout the entire history of government supervision and regulation of standards."

Hazardous and Undesirable Conditions Stabilized.

Pointing out that "the main argument of the carriers" in favor of the long hours "was that the application of shorter hours would be economically burdensome for them," Mr. Green said "this argument was apparently accepted by the commission at its face value," adding:

"There is no valid finding in the report that the prescribed hours meet the basic condition laid down by congress that they insure safety and eliminate the hazard of operation arising from long hours. No attempt is made in the report to reconcile the argument of the carriers with the fact that the daily maximum work or driving hours laid down by the commission is in excess of those now in effect in nine states."

"I respectfully submit," Mr. Green continued, "that these preliminary regulations which prescribe hours of unreasonable length will so tend to stabilize the unsafe, hazardous and socially undesirable conditions in the industry as to surround any future attempt at revision of these regulations with insuperable difficulties.

"Long hours of service are nothing else but an unfair, destructive, competitive practice resorted to by certain members of the industry for the sole purpose of unfair competition in order to gain an advantage by undermining and destroying the standards adhered to by competing carriers. Under the rules prescribed by the commission there is ample latitude for such unfair and destructive practices against which a specific warning was made by congress in the act itself.

"The American Federation of Labor has championed for several generations the shortening of the work week. I have long advocated the adoption of a 30-hour week in industry as a means of wiping out the scourge of unemployment and of raising the standard of living of the workers.

"As a matter of direct experience in dealing with the regulation of hours we know that the effect of this regulation would be to destroy the standards built up over many years through collective agreements in this industry.

"The prestige and the authority of the commission which stand back of this regulation cannot fail to have the tendency of lengthening the hours in instances where shorter hours have alrealy been achieved.

"In view of this, on behalf of the American Federation of Labor and its affiliated organizations, I submit that the regulations prescribed will have a destructive effect on the labor standards in the industry. Our exception is not limited to the daily maximum of 15 hours on duty and 12 hours of work per day. We equally object without reservation to the maximum work week of 60 hours.

Better for Drivers to Continue Without Regulation.

It will certainly be more beneficial to the wage-earners engaged in this industry to continue without any regulation of hours of service until such time as it is possible to determine through direct scientific fact finding the reasonable maximum hours of service which would effectively eliminate the existing hazards and insure the extent of safety on the highways that the congress contemplated.

"On behalf of the American Federation of Labor and its affiliated organizations, I urge the commission to act favorably upon our petition to stay the application of such regulations until the commission finds it possible to devise regulations which are truly reasonable and will effectively prevent unnecessary hazards to the operation of motor vehicles of common and contract carriers."

Emergency Program for Railroads Includes Loans for Equipment And Encouraging of Mergers

Washington. — The emergency program for the railroads is not absolutely settled yet; but the odds are heavy that it will include the following items:

1. Easing of loan restrictions by the CCC and the RFC, and the authorization of loans for equipment totaling $300,000,000. In this case, the interest rate will be low, and the equipment will be the collateral for the loans made to produce it.

2. Easing of statutory restrictions on railroad consolidation and even more on railroad reorganization. Possibly the establishing of a 3-man reorganization court to speed the process.

These are the important and almost certain things. The railroads want the government to pay full rates on land grant railroads. Now, as a very partial recompense for those land grants — which, taken together, include an area larger than that of France and about equal to that of Texas—the government gets lower rates on these roads. The opposition to this on Capitol Hill is not strenuous, and it may be included in the program, with a limitation to two years.

The railroads also asked to have the government barge lines discontinued, and ICC control over water transportation. The last may be included; the first almost certainly will not.

Subsidies Opposed.

President Roosevelt said some time ago that he did not want any railroad subsidy. Senator Wheeler, of Montana, chairman of the senate interstate commerce committee, has said the same thing more recently.

Senator Wheeler is inclined to scrutinize all railroad loans beyond the equipment loan with care. If a road needs to "go through the wringer" and get the water squeezed out of it, let it go. He is strongly opposed, likewise, to the Pettingill bill. This is a bill which, in substance, would allow railroads to charge more for a short haul than for a longer one.

The present intention is to put this railroad emergency plan in the form of an amendment to the bill embodying the president's general spending plan.

San Francisco to Aid In Slum Clearance

Washington.—The national government's $500,000,000 slum clearance and low-rent housing program extended to the Pacific coast when Mayor Angelo J. Roossi, of San Francisco, telegraphed a request for an earmarking of $15,000,000 to Nathan Strauss, administrator of the United States Housing Authority.

Up to the present time, Omaha, Neb., and El Paso, Tex., have been the farthest points west to request earmarkings with which to carry out slum clearance campaigns.

California was without a state housing enabling-law until recently when a measure approved by the USHA was passed by the legislature after a special message requesting action had been sent both houses by Gov. Frank F. Merriam.

JEROME JONES HAS INSPIRED ORGANIZED LABOR NATIONALLY BY STEADFAST CONVICTIONS

Beloved Atlanta Citizen Admired by All Groups in Life — His Speech 29 Years Ago Holds True Today, ,Which Indicates AFL Consistency.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 15.—In the adjoining column there is reprinted an address delivered by the Hon. Jerome Jones, of Atlanta, before the Twenty-fifth Annual Convention of the Trades Labor Congress of Canada, held at Quebec City, Quebec, Canada, on Sept. 20, 1909—29 years ago.

Mr. Jones is preaching the same gospel today that he did upon that memorable occasion. He is editor of The Atlanta Journal of Labor, a position from which he wielded an influence throughout the past years so fine and constructive that the city of Atlanta named one of its schools for him—the Jerome Jones High school. In the hall of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, which Mr. Jones has served in every capacity from president on through to heading the Georgia State Federation of Labor many times, there stands a life-size portrait of the beloved leader. Other manifestations of similar nature have been made by the people of Atlanta to show their sincere love and high respect for Mr. Jones.

Every employer of labor in the state of Georgia has implicit confidence in Jerome Jones. All business men respect him and honor him. Among the hosts of labor not a word has ever been said about Jerome Jones except in loving, tender manner.

His address made in Canada 29 years ago is being herewith reprinted in order to show the constancy of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Jones was speaking for the American Federation of Labor, for he had been sent there for that purpose by Samuel Gompers, president of the A. F. of L., as his personal representative. Reading this speech, delivered 29 years ago, will be an inspiration to the older members of the unions, and enlightening to the younger members. The general public will find in it conclusive evidence of the integrity, the stability, the constancy of the American Federation of Labor.

Copies of this newspaper with Mr. Jones' address are being sent to all colleges and universities throughout the south, that the students may have the benefit and advantage of reading this able and eloquent presentation of the American Federation of Labor's program 29 years ago, and compare it with that of today, to find that the same high and holy purposes, the same constructive policy, and the same lasting results are being obtained today as those of three decades ago.

'Adequate' Financial Report Not Supplied Taxpayers by County

Knoxville. — Tennessee counties fail to compile adequate financial reports for taxpayers, for county courts and for administrative officials of the counties, said W. Harold eRad, assistant professor of accounting at the University of Tennessee, who made a six months' investigation of accounting systems used in the various counties in order to set up a "model" system.

In his model system, which will be published by the university and distributed among officials in all counties, Prof. Read will show what he means by an "adequate" financial report. He recommends that the report be in three different forms, one to picture for the taxpayer how his tax dollar is spent, the second more in detail to show county court the source and expenditure of all funds, and the third very much in detail to give each administrative head full information on his department.

"Operating a county without adequate reports is like driving an automobile at night with no headlights," said Prof. Read. "No one knows where the county stands, or where it is heading."

With adequate reports, a county can control its budget, not only by keeping each department within its appropriations but by preventing over-spending if actual revenues do not equal appropriations. Also, county officials are given a break-down of expenses which forms a sound basis for future plans, he said.

Prof. Read said reports cimpiled by some counties are "in a language no one but the author can read." He recommends a simple, uniform system, so that a county can compare its expenditures with other counties and see where it could economize. He believes the report for the county as a whole should be supplied periodically from the accounting system in the county judge's office.

Jones' Speech Still Holds Good 29 Years Later

Address Before the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress Gave A. F. of L. Program of That Day.

The Labor World reproduces the address made by Jerome Jones 29 years ago before the Canadian Trades and Labor Assembly in Quebec City. Mr. Jones was the personal representative of Samuel Gompers, the idolized president of the A. F. of L.

Careful study of his address, which laid down the A. F. of L. program, shows that through all the years the A. F. of L. has remained true to those principles.

"Ladies and Gentlemen—As fraternal delegate to you great congress, it is my very great pleasure to bring to you the most sincere fraternal greetings of the American Federation of Labor.

"The generous and most hospitable welcome you have so royally extended to me makes this commission doubly pleasant, for you have, indeed, made me feel as thoroughly at home and among good and true friends and brethren as if I were upon the floor of a convention of the A. F. of L.

"The political ties which bind your mother country and your own great Dominion of Canada and the United States are most close and cordial, and I believe and trust shall ever remain indissoluble. A common history, the same high aspirations, and the sharers of the freest liberties possed by any peoples of nations on the face of the earth constitute political ties and friendships which it would be the gravest and most colossal crime of history to weaken or break. But while this is true, and ever to be cherished, it is further true that the ties of fraternity which bind International Trade Unionists together are far closer than any political ties which bind nations together.

"The immemorial struggles of the working classes to secure a just share of the fruits of their toil, against such frightful odds, and through such great tribulations, have bound us together in closer ties of friendship and brotherly love than any other. And particularly is this true of the wage-earners of Canada and of the United States. And may such fraternal ties, with the passing of the years, grow even closer and more enduring.

"Allow me just here to congratulate organized labor in Canada upon the great progress it has made in recent years. Your loyalty to the noble principles and highest ideals of International Trade Unionism is most praiseworthy, and worthy of emulation, and bespeaks still greater victories and benefits for the toilers of your land in the future. Canada is growing immensely, perhaps with greater rapidity than any other section of this hemisphere, and your great Northwest Territory is being enormously recruited from the best blood and brawn of our own border states.

"Organized Labor in the United States and in England and her Colonies, has grown with giant strides during the last two decades, and is infinitely stronger today than ever before in the history of the world. It has come to be recognized by the foremost thinkers and statesmen in both countries, as the best and only agency of the working people to work out their economic salvation. No sane, impartial man any longer questions the right of the working people to organize into labor unions, for their mutual benefit and welfare. This was not true a generation ago. Then, public opinion was hostile, in large measure, to organized labor. It had its harsh critics everywhere. The employer class, as a whole blindly and fatuously opposed and damned organized labor right and left and those in the 'seats of the mighty' looked with unfriendly eye upon the struggles of the masses to throw off ages of serfdom and oppression. While all this is true, and while organized labor has made vast strides, there is yet much to be accomplished. It has not yet 'come into its own.' There are still hostile critics, and there are many open and covert enemies to encounter and overcome, in our upward and onward struggle for industrial liberty. But thank God, organized labor has made too much progress, has entrenched itself too strongly in the good opinion of the world for it ever to go backward; and its march toward ultimate liberty and independence will be slow or rapid, according to the degree of determination, loyal effort, fair dealings and high purposes which may actuate us, and animate our brethren everywhere.

"During the last few years the greatest obstacle in the way of organized labor in the United States, has been the marked tendency of the Courts to set in motion the harsh process of injunction in conflicts between employers and employees. Labor's enormous growth in recent years, and, the fact that in the State Legislatures, and the Federal Congress, Labor has been able to obtain a modicum of remedial legislation, caused many of the employer-class to throw themselves in the arms of the courts to secure undue advantage in such disputes. Without intending to impugn the motives or integrity of our Judiciary, as a whole, it is nevertheless a notorious fact that nearly all of our Federal Judges are recruited from the ranks of life-long corporation lawyers. The corporations, seeing the growing strength of organized labor in popular assemblies, early began to cast anchors to the windward in securing the appointment of judges with known friendly corporation tendencies and affiliations. They sought, and are seeking, to render negatory the Acts of Legislatures, and of Congress, through the aid of such judges, by having such laws declared unconstitutional. And, in the largely undefined sphere of Equity Jurisprudence, where it would seem that individual opinion or judgment of judges upon any given state of facts not directly controlled by statute law determines whether or not the injunctive process shall, or shall not issue, such employees seek such injunctions; and, unfortunately for organized labor, have up to this time too frequently obtained their issuance in the face of the commonest principles of justice and fair play. In the immediate future, therefore, the chief battleground between the hosts of organized labor and oppressive and unjust employers, would seem to lie in the equity courts of our country.

"Determined and I hope successful efforts will be continued to have Congress specifically take away this undemocratic usurpation of power now exercised by both Federal and State Judges, and have the law-making bodies clearly define that which is now undefined, namely, the occasions or cases wherein injunction may, or may not, issue. That which served to call the attention of the whole civilized world to this most extraordinary and altogether wrongful misuse of the injunctive process, was the recent indefensible decision of Justice Wright in adjudging Messrs. Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison in contempt of the courts order in the case of the Buck Stove & Range Co. vs. American Federation of Labor, et al., in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Such decision was so utterly violative of all precedent, and popular concept of law and equity as to shock the conscience of our whole people. One of the grounds upon which Mr. Gompers was convicted, was because in political speeches in the Presidential campaign he merely referred to the utilities. When Cooke took office he was the first labor representative to become a member of the city board.

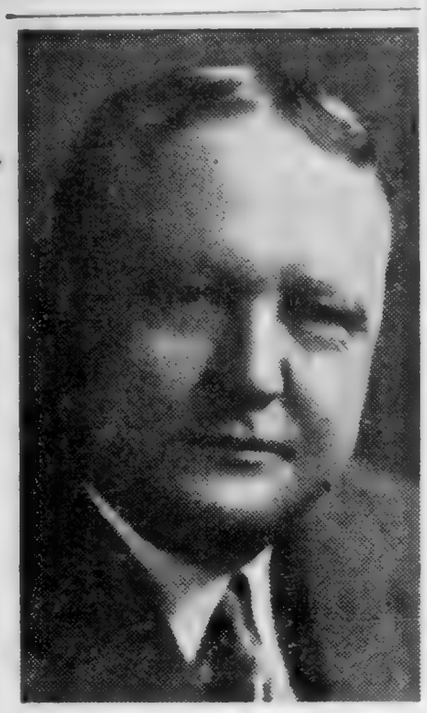
While he resigned his editorship post, on entering public office, Commissioner Cooke still has the interest of organized labor at heart, and his advice is sought on every major local issue.

Joseph E. Cooke, the third son in the group, was born in Chattanooga, in 1889. He served his apprenticeship on the News and became a member of the union in 1909, remaining a member for the last twenty-nine years.



R. M. COOKE

He is now in the Union Printers' Home at Colorado Springs. He served in various official capacities during his active connection with the local typographical union, and for some time was delegate to the Central Body, and to the Tennessee Federation of Labor from the Chattanooga Central Union.

Milton S. Cooke, youngest of the group, was born in Chattanooga in 1895. He joined the Typographical Union in 1918, and has been a member for the last twenty years. He, too, has held many labor posts and is now recording secretary of the Chattanooga Typographical Union.

And so it is that the work started by William H. Cooke over seventy years ago, has been picked up by his sons, and carried on for many decades.

These 168 total years of service, rendered by the Cooke family have not been in vain in America's labor progress. These men have seen many changes take place as they have participated in scores of winning conflicts.

Their total years of affiliation with the labor movement almost antedates the history of the movement itself in the United Staes.

This more than a century and a half of devotion for a cause far exceeds the birth of the International Typographical Union, one of the oldest of the trade organizations, which came into being eighty-seven years ago, first as the National Typographical Society.

This record almost doubles in point of years the age of the American Federation of Labor, that came into existence in 1852, a few years after William Cooke was born in the small Ohio village.

And the total age of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council, 41 and 48 years, would not equal the years of devotion given to the movement by these five men.

Interesting it is, too, that the present total membership of the Chattanooga Typographical Union is approximately that of these combined years of membership in the labor movement.

Harry Cooke, youngest son of R. M. Cooke, is also a charter member of the newly formed Mailers' union of Chattanooga, which is also a branch local of the I. T. U.

And older than the city of Chattanooga itself, which is thinking of its centennial celebration, is the total years of work of these men in a movement that they so well loved.

And more significant to Chattanooga is the fact that much of this devotion was here in this community.

A closing chapter in the history of the Cooke family in organized labor is that William Cooke participated in many a labor strike in his pioneering days, but, oddly, his sons have never been involved in a walk-out.

AFL SPONSORED DEPT. OF LABOR

A reference to these developments attracts our attention to the progress which has been made in the administration of the affairs of the department of labor since its foundation in 1903.

"We anticipate with satisfaction the service that will come in the next twenty-five years of cooperation with the department of labor. We take pride in progress so far achieved but are impatient for expansion for wider and more effective service. We believe the welfare and progress of the department of labor are inseparable from that of the welfare and progress of the organized labor movement."

Saved the Foundation.

The chief of the village fire brigade was making his report to the chairman of the village council.

"Yes, sir," he said, proudly, "we put out the fire just 10 minutes after we got there."

"Very praiseworthy," said the chairman. "Had it got a start on you?"

"I should say it had," said the fire chief. "When we got there, only the foundation was standing."

BAKERS' PICKET EXPERIENCES NEW STYLE OF OPPOSITION AS EMPLOYER PICKETS PICKETS

Although It Had Been Tried Elsewhere, "Stunt" Used for First Time in Tennessee—Reacted as Racial Issue, and Company Signed Up.

Curtis R. Sims, business agent for Local 25, Bakery and Confectionery Workers, had a new experience since the last convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor. Mr. Sims does a great deal of the picketing that occasionally becomes necessary, and at all times he has remained cool and business-like, walking back and forth untold paces, taking occasional slurs and attempts to "start something" with good graces and judgment.

However, in a recent misunderstanding with one of the Chattanooga employers he had to take out his banner and start telling the world. Lo and behold, the enterprising employer thought that he would so embarrass Mr. Sims that he would run off. Another picket blossomed forth by the side of Mr. Sims and dogged his steps for several days. The picket was at first a colored man, masquer-aded as a bride, and bore a sign "herself" which said "Just Married."

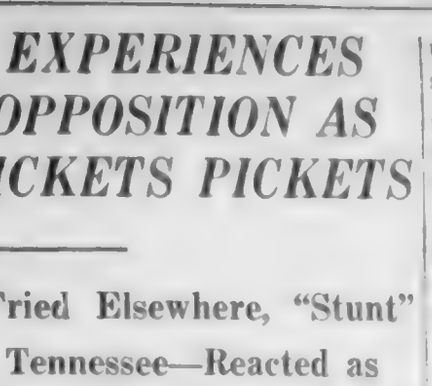
That ought to fix him, thought Mr. Employer. Instead, it fixed Mr. Employer. People who otherwise were not particularly interested in organized labor resented an attempt to raise discord between the races. The colored race did not like it either. Business fell off to nothing.

The employer called in his picket and asked the union picket for a union agreement. The agreement was signed.

Mr. Sims is also President of Central Body, and is still being kidded in a friendly way by trades unionists over his experience, but like a true sport he laughs with them.



Natural Enough.

"Of doctors?"

"No, of dressmakers."

Attorney Criticizes State Requirements For Practicing Law

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.—Requirements for admission to the bar in Tennessee are severely censured by Attorney Walter P. Armstrong, of Memphis, in an article in the April "Tennessee Law Review," the State Bar Association's quarterly publication edited by University of Tennessee Law School students and faculty. The amount of legal training necessary is much too meager, he declared.

"Requirements are so low that they can be met by half a legal education," wrote Atty. Armstrong, a past president of the Bar Association. "At the present time of all the states in the union only Arkansas, Georgia and Mississipp have lower admission requirements than Tennessee."

Atty. Armstrong pointed out that only two of the ten law schools training the state's future lawyers have been approved by the American Bar Association, which is generally recognized as the standard rating agency of law schools in the country. These two approved schools are the Vanderbilt university and the University of Tennessee law schools.

"Students in the unapproved schools are getting only a half to a third as much legal education as students at Vanderbilt and at the University of Tennessee," continued the attorney. "The answer is sometimes made that the bar examinations will stop the poorly prepared candidates, but this is a false hope. Figures show that even where the mortality at individual bar examinations was heavy, eventually the great majority of the candidates passed."

Another reason why Tennessee has so many unapproved law schools is because "there is no restriction in Tennessee on the formation of a law school or the conferring of degrees," Atty. Armstrong added.

"The incorporation of an educational institution with full degree-conferring power is as simple as the formation of any private corporation. Five persons may get together as the incorporators and organize a non-profit educational institution with a board of trustees consisting of the immediate family of the founder. They may present him the entire proceeds from the school and still maintain their standing as a non-profit organization."

ous history for Chattanooga Typographical Union. He died in July, 1930.

M. A. Park joined in the '90s and died in 1919.

Gordon Russell is found to have been active in affairs of No. 89 in the late 90s and early 1900s. Some years ago he went to Miami, Fla., where he died April 24, 1938. He was owner of the Miami News, labor organ.

Charles A. Smith, who came here about 1905, served as foreman of the Times' adroom and was active in union work. He answered the final roll-call in 1916.

"Colonel" W. M. Stone, who assumed his obligations prior to 1889, was a continuous member until his death, Feb. 5, 1926. He was superintendent of the Times' job department until its closing, when he went on the pension roll. As a loyal friend of Publisher Adolph Ochs, "Colonel" Stone worked in the composing room "whenever he wanted to," say old-timers.

John Tinker, after serving apprenticeship on the Times, became a journeyman May 1, 1898. Prominent in local politics, he served as chairman of the county republican executive committee. He was a member of the Hamilton county court and one of the committee to build the present courthouse. He, with Dan M. Jones, Sr., and Neil J. Crowley, established the Intertype Composing company. Mr. Tinker, also grandkeeper of seals for the Knights of Pythias of Tennessee for several years, died Nov. 4, 1933.

F. J. Weber, who is well remembered as a very capable proofreader, employed on the News and Times many years, joined some time before 1889. His death came Nov. 5, 1933.

The final part of this history treats of those printers who joined No. 89, either by initiation or by card, twenty-five or more years ago and who have remained loyal to their obligations. More than a few of them not only have been stalwart unionists, but also have been outstanding in community and state affairs. To them is paid high tribute that is due "builders" and craftsmen.

First mention goes to the proprietors of the Arcade Printing company, which has carried the union label with the same firm name longer than any other job plant in Chattanooga. This firm began business in 1902 at the corner of the Arcade and Broad street, deriving its name from the original location. A year later it removed to 816 Broad street, and on May 1, 1930, it established itself in its present site at 1029 Carter street. Its four proprietors—Sam E. Behm, Dan A. Carruth, Charles R. Douglass and Arch Faidley—and William C. Wood, pressman, have shared the ups and downs together continuously since 1903. Behm, Douglass and Faidley are members of the Fifty-Year club.

Mr. Behm came to Chattanooga in 1887 and joined No. 89 the following year. Mr. Faidley became a journeyman in 1895, and Mr. Carruth in 1901. Mr. Carruth's son, Hal D., is an apprentice member. Mr. Douglass, who carries a pressman's card, was an original charter member of the old Pressman's union when it was under jurisdiction of the I. T. U., in the early 1900s. He served as president and secretary of this organization. He and James Stanfield, now retired on a pension, are the only living members of the original union pressmen's group of Chattanooga.

W. A. Brooks has been a member of Local 89 since 1908, and is now with the News. He and his wife were recently injured severely in an automobile accident and were confined to a local hospital for several weeks.

Finney T. Carter became a journeyman Jan. 5, 1908, and at present is the Times' reliable "head" man. After employment with the News and Times, Carter joined Jake Cohen in establishing the Labor World here in 1916. While editor of this paper, Carter was elected to the Tennessee senate in 1918. R. M. Cooke filled the editorship while Carter attended the legislative session of 1919, and stayed with the job until elected city commissioner. Carter has served in every office of No. 89 except sergeant-at-arms. He served as president at different periods, for about eight or ten years. He has served as financial secretary continuously since 1930, except one year, when L. M. (Jack) Worthington replaced him. Carter, along with "Bob" Cooke much of the time, has been an advocate before the local arbitration board several times and before the international group twice. Besides serving frequently on newspaper scale committees, he has been a delegate to two I. T. U. conventions, Colorado Springs (1917) and Seattle (1929). Carter, as a pillar of strength in his union and as one deeply interested in the welfare of his community, is a candidate for the eighty-second I. T. U. convention, to be held at Birmingham this year. His earnest endeavors are known far and wide.

R. M. Cooke left off his apprenticeship to become a journeyman May 1, 1907. He worked alternately on the Times and News until 1919, when he put on the robes of editor of the Labor World. Cooke has been a delegate to two I. T. U. convention, and served as president several times. More than once he has officially attended the Tennessee State Federation of Labor convntion, and served as president of that organization two terms. He has long been a member of the Central Labor union. He is now serving his first term on the Chattanooga Board of Commissioners. In this capacity he has made an enviable record, especially in obtaining recognition and improvements for playgrounds. Cooke is also a member of the board of directors of Chattanooga's home-owned Lookouts' baseball club. (Aside: While the idea of having an ostrich laying an egg on second base at the opening ball game this year might have been Joe Engel's own, let it be understood that Bob Cooke was responsible for Donald Duck laying "his" share.)

Neil J. Crowley, who joined up at Cincinnati on June 1, 1893, came to Chattanooga (how he came is his own secret) in 1895—for a week (how he left is probably his own secret). But he returned in 1909, and just had to stay. Eventually he, John Tinker and Dan Jones, Sr., established the trade composition plant known as

Washington.—On May 16, in the little town of London, Ky., 24 coal mine executives and 23 "law enforcement" officials of "Bloody Harlan" county will go on trial for criminal conspiracy. They will be tried in federal court under two federal laws; one, the Wagner labor relations act, and one, an old law of post-Civil War days, which makes it a criminal offense to conspire to prevent any citizen from enjoying "any right or privilege secured to him by the Constitution or laws of the United States."

The trial is a direct result of the investigation made by the La Follette civil liberties committee; an investigation which showed up Harlan county, not as a democratic unit of a free country, but as a little fascist oligarchy; a government of the people by thugs for coal barons.

Even the briefest summary of the committee's discoveries will help the reader to follow the story of the trial. The devilments worked in Harlan county may be classed in two groups; those to keep the miners from organizing, and those to exploit and graft on the unorganized workers.

Coal Operators Tried Many Tricks.

In fighting the campaign to organize the miners, the coal barons and the Harlan county officials tried every trick from spying to murder. The miners were forbidden to hold meetings. The Black Mountain church in which one meeting was scheduled to be held was blown up by dynamite. The favorite trick was to send out bands of armed thugs to block the roads leading to any central place where meetings might be held.

"Thug" Johnson, long a deputy sheriff, told how he was called to come down to Sheriff Middleton's office. A whole bunch of gangsters was assembled, and Middleton told them all that they must not allow anyone to come to either town, and that "there was an open season on organizers."

They went in gangs, met the unarmed miners walking to the meetings, and drove them back, clubbing them with guns.

Dynamite Used Against Organizers

As more direct measures, they fired on the meetings, shot union organizers, and dynamited or shot up the places where those organizers were stopping. They dynamited the hotel where Lawrence Dwyer, a union organizer, was staying. The explosion tore the whole front out of the building and broke every window for rods, but Dwyer escaped unhurt. They damaged him a little with a second explosion. Another organizer, Clontz, found three sticks of dynamite under his house floor. The fuse had gone out about 10 feet from the sticks.

Clontz's house was shot up while he was away, and bullets went through the beds in which his wife and son were sleeping. They shot up the house of another organizer, Marshall Musick, with more results. Musick was away, but his son, Bennett, was killed.

Terror Closed Witnesses' Mouths.

"Bennett just rose out of the chair, an' fell into the bedroom," his mother told the committee. "He crawled some, and his feet were past the door."

Clubbings were almost too numerous to talk about. The reign of terror was so severe that when the Clouse boys saw deputies firing at automobiles of organizers, their parents told them not to mention the names of the deputies they recognized. Organizer after organizer was clubbed and shot at; and one man testified that he got $25 for manhandling an "agitator."

Miners Victims of Company Graft.

It is with such things as these that the trial will be chiefly concerned. But the graft which was worked on the miners was almost as hard to bear as the brutality. Company stores and company houses were as thick in Harlan county as formerly in the Rockefeller coal regions of southern Colorado.

But the prize graft was Pearl Bassham's scheme for raffling off the used cars of the Harlan-Wallins mine. The miners on that property had to buy "chances" at a dollar a chance. They did not buy a chance on a known car, but a chance on a car, they knew not which.

The financial minded Mr. Bassham thus unloaded seven or eight used cars every year at from $750 to $800 apiece.

Louisiana Labor Asks Wage-Hour Legislation

State Convention Also Favors Child Labor Amendment and Payment of Union Wages on PWA and WPA Projects.

Bogalusa, La.—Resolutions favoring ratification of the child labor amendment to the federal constitution and national legislation for minimum wages and maximum hours were adopted by the annual convention of the Louisiana State Federation of Labor here.

Another resolution adopted called upon the state government to cease its $75,000 annual appropriation for the Louisiana State Employment service, an amount which is matched every year by the federal government for the operation of the service. The resolution recommended that the state appropriate instead $150,000 and operate its own employment service independent of the federal government. The union charged that the service as it is now operated tends to lower salaries, and often suggests that employers hire out of state mechanics.

The convention also asked a state conference to call upon WPA and PWA to pay union wages, legislation limiting the hours of truck drivers to eight a day and a minimum scale of $1.00 per hour for skilled workers and 40 cents per hour for unskilled labor on highway work.

E. H. Williams was elected president of the federation for the sixth consecutive term. Monroe was selected for the 1939 convention.

The bill of rights will not be complete until it includes the right and the full opportunity to work for a living—and collect it.

the Intertype Composing company. He was fond of the union spirit, has been active in Central Labor affairs, and was business manager of The Labor World at one time; he was president of his typos at least twice. At the I. T. U. convention at Nashville in 1913, Crowley was a member of the laws committee, and some of those laws still sound fair and square.

In 1917, Crowley entered what proved to be a very hot race for city commissioner. Labor backed him wholeheartedly, but certain political sacrifices had to be made and Crowley made 'em—he quit the race of his own accord. But the main objective was gained. Today, take it by and large, it would be hard to find a man more highly respected by both worker and employer groups than Neil J. Crowley.

Ona G. Elder was initiated as a journeyman in December, 1905. Later he served as chairman of the Times chapel, and has proved himself, though unostentatiously, a sincere friend of labor.

John R. Galyon, with a card from Bristol, showed up here in March, 1907. He was a delegate to the Baltimore convention in 1910, and was president of Local 89 in 1916-1918. A very thorough unionist and energetic in all his undertakings, Galyon is now a firm member of the Galyon-Smith Printing company.

Frank L. Gardner successfully pleaded his cause before the assembled members of No. 89 on May 3, 1908, and was joyfully admitted as a journeyman. Ever since that date Frank has been known far and near as an all-round newspaper printer. And he wears the title of machinist all too humbly. It has oft been said that Frank could about name his price to any newspaper owner who was looking for a No. 1 man to keep up a battery of linotypes and at the same time keep the operators over-optimistic. But the Times and No. 89 claim Frank Gardner as their own and shy at competitive bids for his services.

Fred N. Gardner, of course, grew up with Frank and has proved, since his initiation on June 2, 1907, that he is equally as loyal to labor's cause. The two brothers have served the Times continuously since their embryonic and inky days as apprentices—except that Fred decided to help "save the world for democracy" for a time. He was in the army for thirteen months, overseas about a year. His reminiscences of cootie days with this writer have now and then brought back fond but awful memories. And while we're on the subject of scratching, it is well known Fred is a mighty efficient scratcher of type.

W. L. Gardner, after receiving journeyman's obligation came to the Dynamo of Dixie from Charlotte, N. C., in 1899. (Yes, he had a card on him.) Since that time he has never shirked at any task members of his union thrust upon him. Mr. Gardner has twice been a delegate to I. T. U. conventions—at Cleveland in 1912 and at Kalamazoo in 1924. He has served several terms as president and vice-president of Local 89. Now, while on the executive committee, he also is delegate to the Central Labor union and has been re-elected director of The Labor World. Wont to hide his activities under a cloak of modesty, Mr. Gardner nevertheless puts many younger printers in the shade for real zeal.

Guss D. Groner grabbed his first day as a journeyman Jan. 1, 1893, and his membership in our local has been continuous. With his son, he is now proprietor of the Groner Printing company. Some years ago, Mr. Groner served in the state legislature of Tennessee, and his record of activity in the labor movement is stamped with pride.

H. D. Hix became a full-fledged member April 2, 1905. From 1910 to 1920, he printed elsewhere than in Chattanooga. Always proud of his working card, he presents an impressive labor record. He has served as 89's president, has been on various committees and in attendance as a delegate to Central Labor union. In the late '20s, he represented Chattanooga at the Charleston (S. C.) convention.

E. A. Kelly, efficient foreman of the News ever since 1919—graduated from apprenticeship April 3, 1910. He had been an apprentice on the News, and has never been able to find a good reason for leaving that paper. And his able craftsmanship has stood him in good stead with Milton's lively evening publication.

J. M. Long assumed the role of journeyman Aug. 4, 1907. His membership has been continuous. Mr. Long is now the popular proprietor of the Long Printing company.

J. R. McGhee joined forces with the typo "grads" on June 4, 1911. He has spent most of his time on the News and was its foreman for a few years. A reliable co-worker, Mr. McGhee attended the Charleston convention as a delegate in 1928.

B. H. McLaughen deposited a traveler here May 1, 1906. Except for brief trips elsewhere, he has been a standby of No. 89, and has been active in committee labors. Mr. McLaughen recently was compelled to undergo a major operation. His many friends now are glad to be informed he has started "to get about a bit."

M. M. Morris "blew in" from Helena, Mont., with a traveler in 1902. Since that date he has left a worthy imprint on the union roll. He has served as 89's president and vice-president, and has been chairman of the executive committee along with work in other capacities. He was a delegate to Colorado Springs in 1926.

John O'Brien (yes, we wager he's Irish) handed a "traveler" to 89's secretary Feb. 7, 1904. Since that date he's found himself occupied in more than a few capacities. He was a member of the state legislature for a term and formerly conducted a labor paper here.

Basil Palmer, with good grace, took his initiation as a journeyman here Dec. 6, 1908. He has stood ace high with the I. T. U. ever since. Basil has made about three round-trips to Florida just to vary his pace. "Mite" though he be, he has proved to be a veritable "Gibraltar" with the big 9s on the ad end of the Times' battery.

J. Martin Peyer, after completing apprenticeship on the Times, took his "graduate" oath June 4, 1905. Peyer has done much for labor's welfare. He has been president of Local 89, and has been active in committee endeavors. He has twice been honored by being named delegate to I. T. U. conventions—at Albany, N. Y., in 1920 and at Colorado Springs in 1936. Of late years Mr. Peyer has been with the Intertype Composing company.

Dan N. Power deposited a traveler here in 1911, and virtually ever since has been with the News. As a proofreader he has few peers. Aside from other tasks, Mr. Power is proving himself a capable and thorough instructor of English for the benefit of apprentices.

T. A. Rogers, now city editor of the Times during daylight hours, has his name appearing on 89's minutes as early as 1890. Prior to his changing over to the editorial department of the Times, in 1922, Mr. Rogers was active as a unionist, and he took an honorable withdrawal when he found himself among pencils and typewriters. He conducted a labor paper here and has been active in politics. He has been a state legislator and city alderman, friendly to labor and its interests.

J. O. Sehorn made his appearance in Chattanooga with a perfectly good traveler on Jan. 2, 1910. He was active in union affairs here until 1923, when he removed with his firm, Frictionless Metal company, to St. Louis. He liked his work in the job department of this firm—and stuck. In 1936, Mr. Sehorn went on the pension roll and returned to his Chattanooga home.

Claude A. Springfield became a journeyman member here May 5, 1912. He has been active in local politics and now is to be found on the courthouse staff.

C. M. Williams took his "graduating vows" here Nov. 4, 1894. His membership has been continuous. At present he is retired and is residing on his farm near Ringgold, Ga.

Leon Wood, an initiate of the Chattanooga local on July 2, 1905, can boast of the continuity of his membership here up to the present. Until recent years he was to be found regularly at the Arcade Printing company.

Thus passes the parade of those who can say "I remember when"—and even as they have fulfilled their obligations so are others marching along with new banners. Space forbids mention of all.

Among the craftsmen of Chattanooga who have added to the glory of its printingdom are Phil I. Angel and Henry L. Morris, members of the firm, Angel Printing company, established in 1921. Mr. Angel, who this year was listed in "Who's Who in American Jewry," has been an I. T. U. member about sixteen years. He has been president of the Mizpah congregation, Reformed Jewish temple (Julius and Bertha Ochs) three years. He is active in American Legion affairs. Mr. Morris has been a member of the Pressmen's union since 1924. He is president of the Chattanooga Jewish Welfare federation and treasurer of the Chattanooga lodge, B'nai B'rith. As head of the printing and office supply division of the Community Chest, he has worked in harmony with Neil J. Crowley, leader in this group the past few years. Mr. Morris also is a member of the board of the Printers' club, of which Crowley recently was president.

At the helm of The Labor World, voice of Chattanooga unionism, is T. R. Cuthbert, who became a journeyman printer in 1922 at Nashville. He couldn't help being from Nashville, however. In 1927 he learned how good Chattanooga is and went to work for Crowley. In venturing down the corridor of union activity, Cuthbert first went as a delegate to the Central Labor union (he's been attending ever since), and was that body's secretary for five terms. He resigned his local bookwork to accept election to the secretaryship of Tennessee's State Federation of Labor in May, 1936, a position he still holds. He was 89's president for the term of 1936-37. The apprentice committee had him as its chairman two years, and he was a delegate to the I. T. U. convention at Houston, Tex., in 1930. Cuthbert has been the editor of The Labor World since March, 1935, when Bob Cooke announced his candidacy for city commissioner.

And — lest we forget — some women have shared equal rights and pay as members of Local 89, each proving loyal to obligations. They are:

Mrs. Mabel W. Black, a top-notch proofreader, sharing her talent with Uncle Sam in the P. O.

The late Miss Sallie Charlotte Bobo, who came to Chattanooga in 1904, was an efficient operator with the Times until her death on Nov. 6, 1930.

Miss W. C. Simmons, carrying on her duties faithfully, has been an operator with the Times since 1931.

Ever marching ahead with full energy, members of No. 89 have been representatives the past year with others from five allied printing trades in the circulation of blotters to impress Chattanooga with the total earnings invested at home. In this drive, with an allotment of $15 to $16 monthly, plus donations, four men have seen to it that 50,000 blotters were produced for distribution since June, 1937. Phil Mandre, business agent; J. D. Frawley and John Crump, printers, and Pressman C. R. Davis, by consent of the Allied Council, made many contacts that have borne much fruit. About $50,000 per month is earned for spending in Chattanooga by the five allied printing trades—a no mean figure, one now obtaining notice.

With all the benefits that have accrued through organization of printers down through the years, one of deepest interest to all is the better health condition. According to figures furnished by the bureau of labor statistics, the life span of printers in the United States has been lengthened nearly 50 per cent in the last thirty-five years. Members of the I. T. U. in 1901 died at the average age of 41.94 years; in 1935 the average age at death was 62.28. And as longevity is a mighty good thing in this old world, may its increase among printers witness also a greater quickening of appreciation for those who have made it possible—both employe and employer alike.

Upholsterers Win Signed Agreement

High Point, N. C.—The Upholsterers' International union has signed its first agreement in this great furniture center, presaging a most successful organizing campaign launched here a few weeks ago. The Fuller Manufacturing company has signed a closed shop agreement, and is now entitled to the use of the union label on their product. It is hoped that the company will have a display at the Union Label Exposition next month in Cincinnati, and introduce their upholstered furniture to the union trade throughout the United States.

Employes in the plant are members of Local Union No. 307, of High Point, and was organized by J. R. Arrington, general organizer for the upholsterers. C. M. Fox, of the A. F. of L. staff, assisted in the negotiations.

There are seasons when to be still requires immensely higher strength than to act.—Channing.

Labor Looks to Southern Workers To Resist Disruptive Forces, Florida Federation Is Told

Pensacola, Fla.—"Four million members of the American Federation of Labor, and countless millionsof other interested citizens throughout the United States, are looking toward Pensacola today," said George L. Googe, southern representative of the American Federation of Labor and personal representative of President William Green, in addressing the Florida State Federation of Labor convention in session here.

"With equal interest," he continued, "these people are looking toward Bogalusa, La., for it is here in this city and in the city of Bogalusa that the first conventions of the state federations of labor in the south are being held this year. These conventions are more significant than you, perhaps, realize."

Disrupters Answered.

"Just one year ago the efforts being made by a few self-appointed and self-styled members of a committee for industrial organization were at their highest peak. Because of false and groundless charges made by these few men against the American Federation of Labor, and because of the glowing promises, made to the workers by these men confusion reigned for a while within our ranks.

"So now, at the end of another year, the delegates representing the local labor unions and the central labor unions of the great state of Florida have assembled here in Pensacola. And in this meeting is the answer to those who would disrupt the labor movement. That is why I say to you that the eyes of the nation are looking this way today."

For Uniform Minimum Pay.

"With the CIO definitely out of the picture in the south," Googe added, "we can devote our full time and efforts to a continuation of our constructive program. With the tens of thousands of new members who have joined our established organizations, and with the hundreds of new local unions formed during the past year, we are better prepared than ever before to advance the interests of all of the working people of the south."

"Our first objective just now is that of resisting all efforts to saddle a lower minimum wage rate upon the south than that adopted for other sections of the country. We shall insist upon one minimum wage rate for all of the United States. Likewise, we shall resist all efforts to place the interests and the welfare of the working people of the south in the hands of a board of any kind."

Picture Smut

There has always been a market for pictorial bawdiness and nornography and there probably always will be, but it has generally been furitive and under cover. Now with the mad scramble of the picture magazines for circulation, involving the big ones as well as their nasty little satellites, the business of purveying pictorial salaciousness on a big scale has come into the open.

We do not know the present number of picture magazines on the market, since no one seems to be keeping an hour-by-hour total, but the last half-dozen we have looked through reveals their editors tunneling sweatily into the smut pile.

A few newspapers, perhaps thinking there is a bonanza in this sort of thing, have recently printed picture features which are definitely out of place in publications going into the home.

Two facts in the situation are plain to responsible publishers and editors:

First, that national advertisers wouldn't be caught dead in 90 per cent of these publications, as their lack of copy attests;

Second, that a firm groundwork is being laid for insistent censorship demands. The printed material already is at hand which, if assembled, would impress any legislative group.

the Commercial, and some job shops were doing well. The old Commercial was in the James hall, at Sixth and Market.

Those were good days for tramp printers—"knights of the road"—who passed and paused frequently. The handmen threw type in the "boxes" about two hours in the afternoon. They started their regular work on the Times at 7 o'clock in the evening and worked through for about seven and a half hours, getting paid by the thousand ems. The last "take" of copy, marked with the inevitable "30," had to be put into type before the boys could call it a day. Between shifts the printers were wont to cross the street and use their elbows to good advantage in hoisting a mug or two of amber-colored refreshment. There was no "priority" for the group at that time, and those too "heady" to show up for work bribed more alert fellows to try a shift.

All was not dull toil for the typos of those days. They, too, noticed the girls—fair belles who smiled from beneath pretty bonnets and who frequently inveigled aid from some handsome beau to help them across muddy streets and paths. For dresses decked all to well with innumerable flounces, and reaching below dainty ankles, had to be safeguarded. It was difficult washday when Sunday-go-meetings dresses were soiled in the days of old. There was an up-to-date livery stable, under the proprietorship of Wisdom & Owen, on Market street between Ninth and Tenth. The Beau Brummel rented a well-curried horse and a freshly polished buggy for $2 a day. He took his girl-friend out the dusty roads, which led most fequently to the shaded byways of the ridges and mountains. Dances were held at various halls and, when the moon staged its proper role, the youths preferred to clamber aboard the steamboats. Many were the rides and many were the proposals that resulted in marriages. And, too, there were the picnics, with a good time had by all.

Phil Mandre recalls the flood of the early '80s, when the lower floor of the Times building was awash and the occupants had to make their egress from the rear of the establishment. News from nearby communities had to be mailed in; there were no telephones. Week-end baseball games were played, generally on a vacant lot south of the present American Express offices at Chestnut and Carter streets. Milton Ochs was in his heyday as a catcher for the "Prothro" baseball team, and Phil was the energetic bat boy.

The first and last strike of Chattanooga printers came in June, 1890; it lasted into December of that year. Printers were getting 33 1-3 cents per 1,000 ems and asked for 35 cents. They won their battle after staging a strategical campaign. As out-of-town printers replaced the unionists during the strike period, the latter gradually absorbed the opponents into organized ranks. Then they were presented with traveling cards and extra pocket money—and given a proper send-off as they entrained for various destinations.

In 1890, Phil was elected financial secretary of No. 89, and the following year he was a delegate to the International Typographical convention at Boston. I. J. Gardner succeeded him as secretary. Mandre again was elected secretary in 1899. He occupied the president's chair in 1900. It was in the first year of the new century that Phil found himself ready to wed. He was married to Miss Florence Anderson, who died last year, on March 25.

Phil resigned as president of his local in 1900 and printed in Atlanta for a year. From there he journeyed to New York City, where he remained nineteen years. Most of this period was spent in job offices, and his wages ran up to the high total of $65 a week during the World war. With other members of the "Big Six," as the New York local is known, Mandre enjoyed frequent outings at Rockaway Beach and Coney Island, where the printers maintained tent privilegs. And many were the rare times enjoyed at printers' clubs.

While in the metropolis, Phil served as chairman of his chapel for six years—at the A. O. Jennings composition firm in Park Row, an eight-machine plant. He also was a member of various committees of the "Big Six." Frequently, he had the opportunity to hear addresses by James Lynch, late I. T. U. president, who originally came from Syracuse. Mandre was on the campaign committee which boosted for election of John F. McFarland, who assumed the presidency of the I. T. U. in 1920.

Phil returned to Chattanooga and its Times in 1920, in time to go, with Ed Hale, to the international convention at Quebec, Canada. They were lively delegates. Phil was placed on the laws committee. Representatives of the many locals took advantage of the special privileges granted by the Canadian chief of police, who "voided" certain restrictive measures for the sake of the visitors.

McFarland visited Chattanooga in 1921. The local printers held a big dinner at the K. of C. hall, and prominent citizens turned out to assist the typos in honoring their international chief.

In 1927, Chattanooga union printers staged a vigorous campaign to bring the I. T. U. convention for 1928 to their home city. Mandre and "Pop" Kemper journeyed as delegates to the 1927 convention, held in Indianapolis. A "booster" group—Neil J. Crowley, Bob Cooke, Secretary A. G. Linn and Walter Gardner—also traveled northward to aid the delegates. The late Senator Nathan L. Bachman arrived in the Indiana capital city to lend his support. The Chattanoogans, not wanting to be outdone by competitors, entertained I. T. U. leaders as lavishly as they dared, and pleaded for the Dynamo of Dixie. But another southern city, Charleston, S. C., won the 1928 convention.

Before and since that time, Phil Mandre has served as business agent for Local 89. He has lost none of his zeal that has carried him through the years as a highly respected unionist and friend of the business man whom he frequently contacts. He became an efficient proofreader for the Times about eight years ago, and he's still in love with his work. The extra years that rest upon Phil Mandre's shoulders have not diminished his ardor for work and for fellowship. He still is a competent craftsman, a loyal citizen, and a man who is ever ready to contribute his share for the mutual welfare of his fellows.

The "governor, legislative council and house of representatives of the territory of the United States of America, south of the river Ohio," provided for its disabled soldiers, their widows and orphans twelve years before such an act was passed by the United States. The territorial government passed an act Sept. 30, 1794, "unconditionally and permanently pensioning disabled soldiers and militiamen, and widows and orphans of such as had died from wounds." Like provision was not made by the congress of the United States for its disabled service men until 1806 and then temporarily, being revised in 1812, 1820, 1822 and 1828.

pendency of such injunction, not in terms of disrespect to the court, but signifying his desire and purpose to endeavor to have Congress pass such laws that would take from Federal Judges the power to condemn litigants without trial by jury, etc., and Mr. Mitchell was condemned mainly because five years before such injunction was issued—to-wit: in his great work on organized labor—he declared that, as an American citizen, he would feel it to be his bounden duty to disregard an injunctive order, where it violated a plain constitutional right, and which order would therefore in its last analysis and adjudication be utterly void, and of no legal effect. Never before, I believe, in the history of English or American jurisprudence was there ever a decision or judgment of a court so utterly subversive of the liberties of the citizen.

"An English King lost his head for tyrannies vented upon English citizens not one whit more tyrannical and subversive of liberty than this decision of Justice Wright. Happily, the Court of Appeals quickly reversed Justice Wright's decision in its most essential parts; and it is believed that when the case reaches the Supreme Court of the United States, such great tribunal will utterly set aside this judge-made law, which would throttle free speech, and turn over the most cherished liberties of American citizens.

The Eight-Hour Day

"Two-thirds of our States, and the Federal Government, have passed laws providing that on public works, eight hours shall constitute a day's work. Many municipalities have passed similar laws or ordinances. Still other states, and the Federal Government, have in one form or another (notably in railway telegraphers and other railway employees) passed laws restricting hours of labor in diverse occupations. By supplementary Federal State and Municipal action (if indeed it be not of more account and lasting benefit than government laws in that behalf) about thirty of the great crafts have won and established an eight-hour day. Fact, this reform, instituted by organized labor, goes marching on to new victories—upsetting the old barbarous custom of working men and women 12, 14 and 16 hours per day—wearying the body to the breaking point, and starving mind and soul to the level of beasts of burden.

Employees' Liability Laws

"During the past year the Federal Congress, and some additional States have passed laws abrogating the old cruel common law rule of Master and Servant, now making employers liable for the acts of fellow servants—until at present fully three-fourths of the States have laws upon their statute books according a fair measure of justice and protection to employees who may be injured and to widows and orphans of those whose lives are lost in the modern industrial battle of bread. In this connection I will add, that in nearly every State of our Union, there have been passed in the recent past laws providing for the safety of life, and limb, and health of employees, such as furnishing guards to dangerous machinery, proper ventilation and sanitation for workshops and factories, modern safety devices on railroads, mine inspection, etc., etc. And yet, that such laws need further strengthening and that vastly still greater care and diligence should devolve upon the employer class, with rigid and commensurate penalties attached for violations thereof, is witnessed by the fact that about 100,000 people are killed and wounded annually, on our railroads alone; and the number of miners whose lives are yearly offered up as sacrifices to the cruelty and greed of mine owners, is utterly appalling and calls to Heaven for further relief and amelioration.

'War its thousands slays,
Peace its ten thousands.'

Child Labor Laws

"Thirty-three States, and the District of Columbia, have passed laws limiting the age of employment of children in factories and workshops. This work of freeing the child factory slave is entirely due to the disinterested loyal and determined efforts and propaganda of organized labor. It has been truly said that if organized labor had never accomplished any other good or benefit to humanity than the passage of such Child Labor Laws, it has thereby justified its existence, and thus fully earned the thanks and plaudits of the civilized world. No greater crime against humanity, no more festering blight has rested upon our civilization, than this brutal working of little children, more fit for the nursery than the spindle and loom, and this fight of organized labor against this crime and curse shall go on until all children of immature years are utterly excluded from every factory and workshop in the United States.

Other Remedial Legislation

"Organized labor is not only entitled to the credit of having passed anti-child laws, but has fought for and obtained nearly every law upon the statute books, Federal and State, which serves to benefit the working classes; organized and unorganized. In standing for fair wage, and a shorter work-day, and safe and suitable conditions of labor, organized labor helps everybody, and every line of trade or business, and therefore adds vastly to the sum total of the happiness and welfare of mankind.

"But for the strong and determined stand of organized labor as first voiced by its great chieftain, Mr. Gompers (who ever stands sentinel upon the watchtowers to protect our rights and guard our liberties), the wages of working men and women would have been summarily and largely reduced during the panic of 1907 and 1908, brought on by the speculative interests of Wall Street. Corporations, and other large employers of the country, were quickly served with notice that any attempt on their part to reduce wages would be met by stubborn and successful opposition — that there were no sufficient economic reasons why the wages of employes should be lowered; whereupon, the announced intention of reduction was withdrawn, and thus millions of dollars in wages justly saved to the organized employes of our country. Here the unorganized workers lost heavily by having cuts made in their wages, as they were helpless to resist.

Labor and Politics.

"The A. F. of L. does not intend to throw the trade-union movement in the United States into the tempestuous uncertain sea of partisan politics; nor does it seek to disrupt our government or bring about revolutionary changes in our institutions. On the whole, we are proud of our institutions and proud of our flag. We believe the international trade-union movement to be, primarily a business and not a political movement; and that such changes in our laws as are needful can be brought about by agitation, education and peaceable propaganda. We believe that the justice of our cause, and the reasonableness of our demands can best win out by requisitions upon both of our great political parties, preceded by intelligent and active interest on our part, as individuals, in things political—rather than to attempt to form a separate independent political labor party. Wherever practicable, we shall see that men favorable to the rights of the masses shall be elected to law-making bodies, greater attention to be shown in that behalf than ever before. Where vital principles should be involved, and one of the great parties should show utter disregard thereof, and the other should declare for just recognition, organized labor will doubtless devise ways and means in the future to make its influence properly and effectively felt.

International Affiliations.

"The A. F. of L. is heartily in favor of bringing about close international affiliations of labor organizations. By every token, the bonds of brotherhood of all the toilers of the civilized nations should be strengthened, and a greater degree of cooperation and solidarity brought about. Untold advantages will enure to all if such fraternal bonds be wisely cemented.

International Affiliations Will Promote Peace.

"We believe that closed working affiliations between the hosts of organized labor on this continent, and abroad, will serve, ultimately, to promote peace among nations God grant that this may be so. Immemorially, the working classes have furnished their bodies as food for powder and steel, in useless, cruel wars. We, the toilers of America, Canada (and of our great mother country, if you please) do not lack in patriotism and, upon just cause after all efforts of our respective nations to secure honor able, abiding peace should utterly fail, and nothing should be left but the stern arbitrament of war—we would fight and, if need be, die for our respective flags.

"But war can and should be avoided in nearly every instance of disagreement or dispute between nations; indeed, it is hard to conceive how in this enlightened age civilized nations could or should ever war upon each other. Too often scheming ministers, or presidents, or scurvy politicians of high degree, bring on war to serve some devilish purpose of their own. And, in this splendid 20th century organized labor should begin a campaign for universal peace; should serve notice upon the world that, hereafter, war must not be declared until everything humanly possible shall have been done to avoid it; then, indeed, will it have earned the plaudits of humanity and the blessings of Almighty God.

Ring out the narrowing lust of gold,
Ring out the thousand wars of old,
Ring in the thousand years of peace."

Unicoi.—In a report made by the county court clerk in May, 1877, the clerk stated that for that month his collections were only 20 cents. Since his commissions were 2 cents, he was concerned as to how he was going to get the 2 cents from the 20 cents. State Treasurer Polk solved the problem by forwarding a 2-cent postage stamp.

'NOOGA MACHINIST UNIONS CELEBRATE 50TH ANNIVERSARY

Two Lodges Today Form Backbone of Local Movement—Known for Its Loyalty

During the month of May the two local unions of Machinists will celebrate the 50th anniversary of the founding of the International Association of Machinists.

The first Machinists Lodge in Chattanooga was known as the Chickamauga Lodge of the National Association of Machinists, which was founded May 5, 1888. This lodge was changed to Success Lodge 56, International Association of Machinists on May 31, 1900, and has been functioning since that date with the following names on the original charter:

Thomas F. Hall, James Lucas, James Rogers, D. T. Jones, Wallace H. Cry, George Bailey, Will Lucas, Carter L. Kirk, Richard Evans, Frank Wolfe, W. G. Jones, J. S. Bell, George Morgan, Peter Blackman, Omar Gladish, John C. Gribbens, John C. Quintel, W. M. Bailey, J. H. Street, J. W. Jones, J. U. Jones, John Inglehard, Harry Jones, J. T. Spearman, S. B. Shattuck, W. M. Milsaps, T. G. Duckett, W. M. Krause, J. S. Golden, Richard Evans, J. E. Decker, Joseph Smith, J. P. Frank, W. J. Gladish, H. V. Mulligan, J. L. Moore, George Baker, C. A. Johnston, Sam Dobbins, A. B. Johnson, E. R. Riddle, J. W. Flack, A. L. Totten, C. F. Robinson, J. E. Taylor, J. W. Bear, D. M. Blanton, L. R. Beanco, Joe Bice, E. T. Taylor, L. H. McDaniels, M. Lyden, Jess Reynolds, S. H. Schwier and T. A. Mulligan.

The following charter members are at present regular attendants of lodge meetings, with a 39-year continuous record in this brotherhood: Wallace H. Cry, John C. Quintel, W. M. Milsaps, Thomas F. Hall and James C. Rogers.

Twenty years after Success Lodge was organized there came Lookout Mountain Railroad Lodge No. 1450, which was granted a charter on February 2, 1920, and is now enjoying a membership of more than 250 members. This lodge meets on the second and fourth Thursday nights at the Central Labor Hall on West Seventh street. The following members are the present officers of Lodge 1450:

Membership in these locals grows steadily and an auxiliary has recently been organized. They have made application for a charter and about 42 ladies will form the charter members of the auxiliary.

The membership of Success Lodge 56 and Lookout Mountain Railroad Lodge 1450 wish to express their appreciation to the entire labor movement for the cooperation and interest that has been displayed throughout the years and special thanks to their Labor World and its editor, according to W. H. Cry, president of Lodge 56.

It is the intention of the Machinists' organizations in Chattanooga to continue to work for the betterment, not only for their own organizations, but for the good of the whole Labor movement.

Supreme Court Upholds Municipal Bankrupt Act

Washington.—The supreme court has upheld the constitutionality of the new municipal bankruptcy act, and opened a way for some 3,000 distressed cities, towns, villages and districts to move for an adjustment of their indebtedness. The decision was read by Chief Justice Hughes and was reached by a vote of 6 to 2, Justices McReynolds and Butler dissenting.

In 1936, by a vote of 5 to 4, the court invalidated the original municipal bankruptcy act, McReynolds writing the decision. Chief Justice Hughes and Justices Brandeis, Stone and Cardozo dissented.

The court dismissed an appeal from the Tennessee Electric Power company which was hoping to reinstate a vacated injunction forbidding a $4,000,000 WPA loan and grant to Chattanooga for a municipal power plant.

Even a company union can't suit some employers. The Ford c. u. wants an annual pay minimum of $1,500; and Henry is terribly peeved.

Atlantans Strike $1,600,000 Project—Local Hospital Project Shut Down Because Same Contractor Had Job—Dispute Settled Monday.

"We do not consider Atlanta a union town, and that is why we do not recognize the union and pay wages that we pay in Chattanooga," is said to have been the reply that an official of the J. A. Jones Construction company gave to a committee appearing before the officials concerning the big job started in Atlanta, known as the Peachtree Hill apartments.

Whereupon the building crafts undertook to prove to Mr. Jones' representative that Atlanta is a union town. A strike was called last week, and all crafts walked off the job, although some of the crafts were working all union members. Bricklayers, plumbers and steamfitters, electricians, and probably other crafts on the job were 100 per cent union. But other crafts, including building labor, were paid no attention by the Jones Construction company. A strike was decided upon by the business agents and international representatives as being the only way of convincing the Jones company that Atlanta is a union town. All crafts responded, and the job was shut down, with exception of a comparatively few fellows who evidently decided that scabbing is an honorable profession.

As a result of the Atlanta strike, building tradesmen on the Chattanooga hospital job walked off last Friday until the Atlanta construction was unionized. The Chattanooga job was being done by the Atlanta firm.

Report received Monday said that the Atlanta contractor made a settlement, whereupon the Chattanooga building tradesmen resumed their work Tuesday morning.

The Peachtree Hill apartment job is to be of 174 units, and is quite a big job. As an illustration of what the workmen had to face, the Jones Construction company is doing $1,600,000 hospital job in Chattanooga. Representatives of Mr. Jones said they considered Chattanooga a union town, hence the wages paid there are greatly in excess over that paid on the Atlanta job. The minimum wage on the Chattanooga job is 45 cents an hour. The minimum wage on the Atlanta job, for the same work, is 25 cents an hour.

Brewery Int'l. Indorses Berry

Erskine Fischer, secretary for Local 79, Brewery Workers' International, received a letter this week from his international office which says that organized labor of Tennessee would do well to re-elect Senator George L. Berry.

The letter says:

Cincinnati, O., May 5, 1938.

Mr. Erskine D. Fischer,
Secretary L. U. No. 79,
Chattanooga, Tenn.

Dear Sir and Brother:

I write to advise our membership in Tennessee that Senator George L. Berry, President of the International Printing Pressmen's union, has always been a very, very staunch friend of the Brewery Workers' International union.

He is a staunch trades unionist and labor can be proud of having a member of the rank and file of the organized workers in the senate of the United States.

Senator Berry has announced his candidacy for re-election to the senate of the United States and I am sure that our membership would make no mistake if they will actively support him for nomination and re-election to the senate of the United States.

Expressing the hope that the membership of your local union will render this service, and

Fraternally yours,

JOSEPH OBERGFELL,
General Secretary-Treasurer.

Local 600 Plays Monday, Tuesday

Local 600, Meatcutters, invites all members of its families and all friends to two big parties.

Next Monday and Tuesday nights Local 600 will hold open house in their new hall at 906 Market street, beginning at 8 o'clock each evening.

They promise "all you can eat and drink" and there will be entertainment furnished by some of the local radio talent.

The admission price is only 50 cents per person and, according to Business Agent Mack Ball, that isn't half enough for all the entertainment and food you will get.

17 Stores in Frisco Sign Furniture Salesmen's Pact

San Francisco, Cal.—Union contracts have been secured by Retail Furniture and Appliance Salesmen's Union No. 1285, covering 17 stores here, with approximately 500 employes.

The agreement, in negotiation five months, is the first of its kind here and was reached with the Retail Furniture association of California and the Industrial association.

The uniform contract provides for minimum wages ranging from $80 to $200 a month, with a 45-hour week for the sales force and a five-and-a-half-day week for non-selling employes; also for seniority rights, vacations with pay and an adjustment committee, which will arbitrate any future dispute that may arise.

Krispy Kream Goes Nonunion

Curtis R. Sims, business agent for Local 25, Bakery and Confectionery Workers, announced today that the Krisky Kream Doughnut shop at 2000 McCallie avenue discharged its union employes and replaced them with nonunion people.

Pickets are parading in front of the place telling the world that Krisky Kream doughnuts are not union made.

What Next?

Electrical Workers Join in Move For Supreme Court Review Of Labor Board's Ruling

Washington. — International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers has joined the Consolidated Edison Co. of New York in asking the Supreme Court to review a National Labor Relations Board order against the company.

The brotherhood, in an appeal from a Second Circuit Court of Appeals compliance decree, challenged the order which directed the firm to cease "giving effect" to its contract with the brotherhood.

The board ordered the company to cease discriminating against members of the United Electrical and Radio Workers of America, a CIO affiliate which lodged the original complaint.

The Second Circuit Court ruled against separate appeals of the company and the brotherhood and directed the company to comply. The company filed a petition for review on April 2. The petition from the brotherhood was filed as a separate action later.

The brothedhood based its challenge on the same three basic grounds cited in the company's appeal:

1. That the board does not have jurisdiction because the company is a purely intrastate utility.

2. That the board's proceedings violated the "due process" clause of the federal constitution in that the brotherhood was given no opportunity to defend itself.

3. That the board did not have power to abrogate the contract between the brotherhood and the company.

Senator Berry Shows Beyond Doubt Marble "Charges "Are Purely For Political Purposes to Injure Him

Radio Address Monday Night Ably Presents "The Other Side" of the Suit Brought Against Berry and Not by Berry.

Berry Owned Recognized Marble Business Long Before President Roosevelt Took Office—Has Never Sued Government and Is One of Smallest of Thirty Property Owners Whose Holdings Were Confiscated.

Senator George L. Berry put on his fighting togs and answered "slanderous" charges brought against him on the eve of his announcement for the United States senate in an "effort to injure my candidacy" when he spoke on the radio last Monday evening in which he conclusively showed by dates and facts that he had been in the marble business for many years before there was any TVA and President Roosevelt.

That he is for the development of the Tennessee valley he emphatically stated, but on the other hand, he said that he believed that no man's property should be confiscated.

That he has ever sued the government for damages is absolutely false, but on the contrary the TVA sued him in order to confiscate his property. That he is one of the smallest of the thirty people were were sued, has not been mentioned, but on the contrary he has been held up as an enormous holder of property for which he is suing the government for "millions and millions," he declared to be part of a program of "small-minded" politicians who know no other way to run for office.

First Speech of Campaign.

It was Berry's first speech of his campaign for the democratic nomination to succeed himself and his first comment on the marble controversy since a three-member federal commission held recently that lease holdings of the senator and his associates in the TVA Norris dam area "cannot be profitably operated commercially."

He and his associates were denied any award in condemnation proceedings brought by the TVA. At the hearing Berry charged he had been "robbed" by the government agency.

"Please remember that I have not received any moneys from the Tennessee Valley Authority, nor have I asked for any amount for damages sustained as a result of the confiscation of my properties," the senator told his hearers. "I have simply insisted that some board determine the value upon the basis of fact, whatever it may be."

Berry declared [illegible] port of the development of the Tennessee valley and the navigable streams occurred before any of the political gossipers were ever heard to have said a favorable word for the development of these streams."

Machinists Sign Corley Company To Union Pact

Closed Shop Agreement Marks Advance of Lodge 56—Barney Elected.

Lodge 56, International Association of Machinists, kept up its steady pace of progress last month when they secured a signed closed shop agreement with the Corley Manufacturing company, at 29th and Clifton Hills.

The contract provides for union rules and regulations, and at present affects some 32 men. In busy season, however, approximately 70 employes are used.

The company manufactures sawmills and sawmill supplies and is known all over the country.

Brother W. R. Barney, business agent for Lodge 56, was elected at the last meeting as delegate to the Tennessee Federation convention. W. D. Sively was named as alternate.

Lodge 56 is also working under an agreement with the U. S. Pipe company, Mr. Barney said.

Bakers Win Strike At Tracy City's Baking Company

The Baggenstoss Baking company, of Tracy City, after a one-week strike last week, signed a completely union agreement last Saturday with Local 25, Bakery and Confectionery Workers.

The strike occurred after the company refused to renew its agreement with the union, demanding instead a reduction in wages and an increase in hours without the closed shop. So effective was the campaign that was immediately carried on that after one week the company agreed to the terms of the contract, according to Curtis Sims, business agent of the union.

CONGRESSMAN ASKS 6-HOUR DAY AS ONLY UNEMPLOYMENT REMEDY

Washington. — Representative John Luecke, paper mill worker of Michigan, who was elected by Labor support, called upon industry in a radio speech to establish the six-hour day for all workers. He argued that shorter working periods represent the only solution for unemployment.

Luecke said that universal application of a six-hour day would mean creation of 8,000,000 jobs and solve the pressing problems of unemployment.

He said the shorter work day directly would provide 2,000,000 men with work. But, he said, to keep one man employed in industry requires indirect services of three other workers — thus creating 6,000,000 indirect jobs to bring total employment resulting from the plan to 8,000,000.

Many N. Y. Firms Seek Small Business Loans

New York.—The first day's session of the Smaller Business association of New York District, Inc., authorized to administer the new statute under which the Reconstruction Finance corporation is empowered to lend up to $1,500,000,000 to persons owning small businesses, received approximately one thousand applications for loans varying from $1,000 to $5,000 and totaling about $2,500,000. Under the Glass-Steagall law, recently enacted by Congress, an applicant may have as long as fourteen years in which to complete payment of the loan.

Most of those seeking federal aid said they were conducting successful businesses, but that a loan would enable them to replenish stocks or purchase improved equipment. Most of them said the loans would enable them to employ more workers.

WAPO Signs Pact For Closed Shop With Radio Men

Increase in Pay Also Secured After Ten-Day Strike — WDOD "Talking."

Radio Station WAPO is the first 100 per cent union broadcasting station in Chattanooga with a signed agreement, according to Jean Paul Jones, president of Local 662, Radio and Electrical Workers, Tuesday morning.

An affiliate of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 662 struck the job ten days ago when negotiations broke down with Manager Raymond aPtterson, of WAPO. An active campaign was waged, during which business houses that advertised over the air waves cooperated with great effect.

Included in the closed shop agreement was a reduction of hours to 54 per week and a wage increase.

Negotiations are being rseumed with Station WDOD, with fine prospects of a successful termination, which would make Chattanooga 100 per cent regarding radio service.

Railroad Unions Seek Investigation of ICC

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Railway Labor Executives' Association will demand that the investigation of railroads now being conducted by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee shall be continued and extended to cover the ICC. The resolution to make this demand passed the meeting of the Association practically without opposition.

George M. Harrison, chairman of the association, explained the demand thus:

"We are of the opinion that the commission has not properly discharged its function under the law, because much of the difficulties of the railroads today are due to their unsound and indefensible capital structures.

"Since 1920, no railroad could issue stocks or bonds without the approval of the ICC. This was to protect the public against the floating of worthless securities.

"One third of the railroads are in bankruptsy today, whirh shows that the public was not protected."

Bridges Deportation Proceedings Halted

Washington. — The U. S. Labor Department ordered postponement of the deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges, San Francisco representative of the CIO longshoremen's union, pending an appeal of the recent decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the fifth judicial circuit which held that membership in the Communist party is not sufficient grounds to order an alien deported. The decision freed J. G. Strecker, a restaurant keeper of Hot Springs, Ark., who admitted membership in the Communist party and had been ordered deported.

The deportation hearing had been scheduled to begin in San Francisco on April 25. Action against Bridges was asked on the ground that he is a member of the Communist party. He is a naturalized Australian, and has lived in the United States many years without having taken out naturalization papers.

Deeds are better things than words are,

ELECTRICAL WORKERS WIN CASE WHICH CALLS FOR AN ELECTION AMONG POWER COMPANY SYSTEM

CIO Plea Turned Down as Board Orders Election Which Will Determine Sole Bargaining Agency for Entire System.

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers has been notified by the national relations board of its victory in an effort to obtain an election among the employes of the Tennessee Electric Power company. Request for the election was made on Nov. 1, 1937. On Jan. 13, 1938, the regional director issued notice that a hearing would be held on Feb. 3 and 4. James C. Paradise was selected by the board as trial examiner. George L. Googe and O. A. Walker represented the I. B E W at the hearing.

The CIO had organized a few men at Hale's bar and at South Pittsburg, and they had obtained agreement with the company, covering their membership at these two points. The A. F. of L. union, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, claimed that these agreements were obtained by the CIO after an election had been called for by the I. B. E. W., and were, therefore, valueless and should be voided.

On March 3, a hearing was held before the national labor board at Washington. The decision of the board handed down on May 5 orders an election "within twenty days" or on or before the 25th day of May, for the purpose of determining the bargaining agency for the employes of the Tennessee Electric Power company. The CIO had urged and insisted that the employes at Hale's bar and at South Pittsburg be excluded from voting workers, and that the board permit the agreements which the CIO had at these two places to remain in force and effect.

The board denied the plea of the CIO, stating that the workers engaged in the industry and generally employed in the work of power distribution should vote as a unit throughout the sections covered by the Tennessee Electric Power company. The CIO has notified the company that they do not wish to be represented on the ballot, as they claim no membership in the entire system except at Hale's bar and South Pittsburg. The election, therefore, will be simply to determine whether the workers desire the I. B. E. W. to become the sole bargaining agency for the employes. Leaders in the A. F. of L. union movement express belief that practically all employes will vote for the I. B. E. W. as most of the employes are already members of this union.

Milne Chair Co. To Re-Hire 51 Discharged Men

Labor Board Hearing Proves Unfair Practices and Men Are to Return.

As an outgrowth of hearings extending over the past week in the national labor relations board, the Milne Chair company has agreed to re-hire fifty-one of the former employes of that company who had been fired for union activities.

Charges brought by Woodworkers' Local 1882, an affiliate of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, showed that the company had forced the union to strike to protect their union after a large number of their employes had been discharged.

Evidence also showed that the company had fostered two company unions, which are to be dissolved.

Textile Workers Strike Against Wage Slashes

Providence, R. I.—Some 1,500 dyers in eight Woonsocket plants struck May 2 in protest against a 12½ per cent wage reduction.

More than 28,000 other textile workers in Providence, Woonsocket and vicinity empowered the executive councils of the Woonsocket Independent Textile Workers' Workers' union and of the Textile Workers' Organizing Committee of the CIO to meet with mill operators in a final effort to halt spreading wage cuts.

The plants affected by the strike were the Woonsocket Dyeing and Finishing company, Blackstone Dye Enterprise Dye works, Inc., Rosemont mill, French Worsted company, Lafayette Worsted Spinning company and the Argonne Spinning company.

Decatur Company Signs Grain Processors Pact

Decatur, Ill.—Flour and Cereal Mill Employes' Union No. 20765 announced the negotiation of an agreement with the Decatur Milling company which provides for vacations with pay, seniority rights, arbitration of all grievances, and a number of other benefits usually contained in agreements finalized by American Federation of Labor unions.

The employes of the A. E. Staley company have also been organized and chartered as United Grain Processors' Union No. 21490.

Both of the unions are affiliated with the National Council of Grain Processors and Allied Industries.

The union labels of the American Flint Glass Workers' Union and the Sheep Shearers' Union of North America have been added to the constantly increasing number of labor unions that use these insignia to assure the buying public that their products are made under union conditions.

THE MARBLE CASE

We believe that of all radio political speeches, the one made by Senator George L. Berry last Monday evening probably received more interest than any made, due to the attacks made on him regarding the TVA suit against him for the purpose of confiscating the property owned by the senator and twenty-nine others.

Senator Berry had been built up as an unpatriotic and bloodthirsty grafter who was attempting to secure something to which he was not entitled.

Senator Berry realizes, as do most of us, that the hullabaloo has been raised at this particular time for the express purpose of defeating his nomination to return to the senate. He realized that the public was entitled to an explanation.

His talk, backed by facts and citations, definitely bared the political aspect of the suit. He showed that he had never sued the government, that he had not set a value on his properties containing marble deposits, although propaganda had him as suing for five million dollars.

He definitely proved that he was and is in the marble business, that he had been quarrying valuable marble from property involved, and that furthermore, he is one of the smallest of thirty property owners involved in the suit.

The whole suit has been built up to indicate that Berry is the only one involved, that he is attempting to graft five million from the government which he does not deserve. Berry stated his case to the public in his usual calm and logical manner. He insists that he has constitutional rights which guarantee to him the safety of his property, and that it must not be confiscated without payment.

He showed that he has asked for a board of arbitration to set the value thereon. He showed, that before President Roosevelt went into office that he was in the forefront of development of the Tennessee valley, and that he is for TVA.

All in all, Senator Berry's speech did much to dispel the dark clouds of smoke that had been thrown about him by his political enemies for the purpose of defeating him.

We commend the senator for the manner in which he has conducted himself while being attacked so maliciously. He has bided his time, and when that time came, he presented his case to American citizens in Tennessee, knowing that as a whole our citizenship believes in fair play and that they will act fairly when the facts are presented them.

Green Speech Boosts Union Label Buying

CINCINNATI.—One of the highlights of the campaign in connection with the A. F. of L. Union Label and Industrial Exhibition to be held here May 16 to 21, was a speech made by President William Green and broadcast through Station WLW of the National Broadcasting System.

President Green's address allowed individuals who compose the immense union-conscious market of this nation to hear directly from the lips of the head of the American Federation of Labor the plans in conjunction with this new idea of stimulating collective buying.

The campaign to educate the public to buy merchandise bearing union labels has had Green's enthusiastic support since the formation of plans for the first national exhibition of union-made, union label products. It is his firm belief that this exhibition will do much toward establishing and maintaining a balanced purchasing market in America.

A. F. of L. Wins Fight C. I. O. Sawmill Unions

Portland, Ore. — The steady march of victory for A. F. of L. unions over vicious raiding attempts by the dual CIO-scattered adherents, was marked here recently by announcement of the eighth Portland sawmill that is ready to re-enter the A. F. of L. fold of protection and progress, following similar action by seven other mills within the past few weeks.

By practical and beneficial service to workers, instead of hot air and radical political propaganda, the Lumber and Sawmill Workers' Union, A. F. of L. affiliate, is welcoming the return of thousands of workers who were originally influenced by the CIO spellbinders.

It is reported that CIO activities on the coast are now practically at a standstill.

Philanthropy vs. Wages

A plan is being put into effect in Brooklyn whereby any and every expectant mother in that borough may receive full medical attention, whether she can pay for it or not. Staffs of forty-nine public and private hospitals will grant consultation in all cases, unless the doctor who asks the consultation certifies that the family is able to pay.

The plan is expected to save the lives of many mothers and babies—but why? Partly because it is a blow at the too great ignorance on this subject everywhere. But more because it puts at the disposal of thousands of families care which under present conditions they cannot pay for.

It is one more instance of the way health and life itself is tied up with income. Poverty is the deadliest disease in our so-called civilized world; and almost as fatal to mothers as to babies. We have exact and comprehensive figures showing that in proportion to numbers, three times as many unskilled laborers as professional men die of tuberculosis and seven times as many die of pneumonia. No such unanswerable figures are available on deaths in giving birth to children; but every physician and social worker knows that the slant is in the same direction.

Yet the Brooklyn plan, fine as it is, is only one more makeshift substitute for a satisfactory distribution of national income—and the greatest single aids in getting national income distributed properly are high and steady wages. When all men have a truly "living wage," living fro themselves and their families, there will be a rise in health and a lengthening in life that no philanthropies can bring.

Unmasking the Exchange

The security and exchange commission investigation of the Richard Whitney fiasco is stripping all pretense of high-minded honor from the New York Stock Exchange. Member after member is shown to have known of Whitney's double dealing; and not one of them did anything about it. The final touch in this exposure was given, appropriately enough, by J. P. Morgan.

"Did you give any consideration at all to your responsibilities toward the exchange in this matter?" asked the counsel for the SEC.

"No, none at all," said Mr. Morgan.

If he cared nothing for his responsibilities to his fellows on the exchange, how much do you fancy he cares for his responsibilities to the public? That question wasn't asked; but Mr. Morgan, in another connection, went far toward furnishing the answer:

Most of us have been taught that wealth, like other forms of power, involves duties and responsibilities. Not Mr. Morgan. He openly says he can do what he pleases with his own money—and he sat by silent while Whitney did as he pleased with other people's money. The curbing of that biggest of gambling houses has gone a long ways in the last five years. But it has a longer way still to go.

WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCES DISCUSS RECOVERY PLANS

Washington. — President Roosevelt continued his conferences at the White House on ways and means to launch the recovery program. Jesse Jones, of the RFC; Harry Hopkins, of WPA, and Willam O. Douglas, chairman of the SEC, have been his chief consultants; but by no means the only ones.

Secretary Ickes undoubtedly was speaking for the administration when he said that projects already sanctioned will have the precedence when the new program begins; and urged the political subdivisions act as speedily as possible. PWA where such projects are located to offices throughout the country, he said, are getting ready for a season of intensive work.

Mr. Ickes also said that PWA officials have prepared a list of 2,785 projects, estimated to cost a total of a little over a billion dollars, on which work can start almost immediately after Congress appropriates the funds.

The president approved the allotment of $36,657,000 for slum clearance and low-cost housing in four cities. New York gets about $30,000,000; the rest is apportioned between Louisville, Ky., Augusta, Ga., and Jacksonville, Fla.

Notwithstanding the fact that Tennessee became a state in 1796, it was 109 years old before it had a state flag. LeRoy Reeves, of Johnson City, designed the flag, and drew up the bill for its adoption. The bill was passed and approved by Gov. John I Cox, on April 17, 1905. The same colors as the national flag are embodied in the Tennessee flag, yet it is very different in appearance. The field of the Tennessee flag is red, with a blue bar at the end, separated from the red by a white stripe one-fifth as wide as the blue bar. The blue bar and white stripe are one-eighth the width of the flag. In the center of the flag is a blue circle, separated from the red field by a white circle which is the same width as the white stripe. There are three white stars within the circle of blue, designating the three political divisions of the state.

Flint Bakers' Union Prevents Wage Slash

Flint, Mich. — The local Bakers' Union successfully resisted an attempted 10 per cent. wage cut, announced by the Home Dairy company the first of last February.

As a result of negotiations here and at the firm's headquarters in Detroit, participated in by the Department of Labor and Industry, the cut was restored to the original union rate, retroactive to February. The original union contract extends to May 20.

Announcement of the cut followed the usual line of "necessary economy," often used as an excuse to lower wage standards. While the union was prepared to strike if necessary, negotiations were followed through patiently and with ultimate success. Only effective organization of the bakers prevented the wage cut and it was understood that some other employes of the firm, in other departments that are not organized, would be required to accept the cut as originally announced.

Union Barbers Win Strike for Union Shop

Uniontown, Pa. — A brief strike by members of Journeymen Barbers' Local Union No. 604, affecting 32 Uniontown barber shops, brought a prompt victory, with 16 shops signing up after the strike had been in effect only half a day, with negotiations for settlement continuing with the other 16 shops.

The barbers, who had been getting 75 per cent. of the first $33 and 60 per cent. of all over that amount, had asked a change in contract that called for a straight commission of 70 per cent. The former contract had expired March 31. The contracts signed recognize the union demands.

Crop Insurance Started By Secretary Wallace

Omaha, Neb.—The wheat farmers' crop insurance program, authorized by a federal statute recently enacted by the United States Congress, was launched by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace in a broadcast speech here before a meeting of midwestern farm leaders.

Declaring that "projects like crop insurance, which require both planning and co-operation, help make democracy work," he said, "the success of boom and collapse is what cripples democracy," and that "the swing from surplus to shortage of farm products is one of the causes of that succession," adding:

"The cycle of glut and scarcity is one of the most menacing aspects of our economy. More stability of supplies and prices is the aim of our crop insurance. Such stabilization safeguards democracy."

In explaining the program, Secretary Wallace said the farmer can insure his wheat crop for either one-half or three-quarters of the average yield, the premium being smaller for one-half.

He estimated the cost of insuring three-fourths of the average crop at about one-half bushel an acre a year on the best wheat land, one to one-and-a-half bushels on good wheat land and two to two-and-a-half bushels on high risk land.

After the farmer pays his premium he can take his wheat to the elevator as usual and secure a warehouse receipt made out for the amount required to pay the premium. If he desires to pay cash, the Federal Crop Insurance corporation will buy enough of his wheat for the premium.

"We do not know how the wheat insurance program will pan out," Mr. Wallace said, "but we do know that the principle of insurance is applied in almost every field, and that if this plan gives farmers adequate protection against crop losses, millions of farmers will be benefited."

He was convinced that if wheat insurance succeeds the principle will be expanded to cotton and corn, and perhaps other crops, but if it fails for wheat it will very likely be abandoned.

U. T. Bacteriologist Tells Need of Safe Rural Water Supply

Knoxville.—A safe water supply is the biggest health problem of Tennessee's rural areas, said Dr. Paul W. Allen, head of the University of Tennessee bacteriology department, in a speech on one of the U. T. semi-weekly broadcasts over Station WSM. Protection of the rural dweller from water-borne disease is "pitiably small" compared with protection of people in the cities, he said.

"Some years ago the country was much healthier than the city, and it was common to advise city people who were ailing to go to the country and get health," said Dr. Allen. "Statistics now show that there is proportionately less disease due to infections in our large cities than in the country. In the cities, the water, the milk and the fooda have been made safe by the application of bacteriological laboratory testing and the devices of sanitary engineering."

Human sewage has contaminated springs, streams, lakes and ponds so universally that safe water supplies in rural districts become a great national problem. The first step is to carry a wholesale installation of proper sewage disposal by every home, hamlet, village and city. Low cost, efficient sewage disposal systems have been worked out for every type of home and community, he said.

Dr. Allen listed eight rules the rural dweller should follow to keep his water safe. They are:

1. Wells should have water-tight platforms and casings.

2. The ground around a well should be kept clean.

3. There should be wide separation of well from sources of contamination.

4. During long dry periods drainage ditches may be reversed that contain toilet matter for a well serving in ordinary operations it would never reach.

5. Well water should be tested [illegible] characteristics are no guarantee of its safety.

6. Rain water run from roofs is often a safe source of water.

7. Water over watering [illegible] contamination [illegible] explains.

8. For final determination safety of water for drinking purposes have tests [illegible] made.

Justice Brandeis supported the constitutionality of the Wisconsin statute in a unanimous decision. The statute was attacked by the Holmes Shoe and Garment Co., Eau Claire manufacturer, which claimed the law was unconstitutional because it applied only to employers in Eau Claire county.

Individual Members Exempt

As amended the act provides that the summoning of any incorporated group before the courts of the province may be effected by summoning one of its officers thereof and "that judgment rendered in any cause may be executed against all the movable or immovable property of the group." This removes the liability to individual members. Aside from the Bricklayers and Longshoremen, few international unions have immovable property in the province, and they do not have to keep their funds in the province.

Still the act, along with other acts, may be a mischievous weapon in the government's fight to determine the internationals.

Union Funds Menaced.

In event of a strike, says C. A. Calder, king's counsel, and legal adviser of the Quebec Civil Liberties union, a third party may start a suit to attach any funds being sent into Quebec to help the strikers.

WAGE-HOUR BILL FORCED TO HOUSE FLOOR

Petition Taking Measure from Hostile Rules Committee Is Signed by 218 Members in 2 Hours and 22 Minutes; Majority Leader Predicts Passage; AFL Is Jubilant; Vote Is Likely on May 23.

Washington.—In the short space of 2 hours and 22 minutes on May 4, two hundred and eighteen members of the house representatives signed the petition discharging the house rules committee from further consideration of the wages and hours bill. This decisive action assured a full and free discussion of the measure by the house not later than May 23, with its passage practically certain.

There is a possibility that the rules committee, in view of the overwhelming desire expressed by the house to take up the measure, will reconsider its former action blocking consideration of the bill by a vote of 8 to 6 and report a special rule under which the bill could be given immediate consideration. Observers, however, expressed the opinion that the committee would stand pat on its original decision in the vain hope that before May 23, the earliest date possible for consideration of the measure under the petition procedure, a certain amount of opposition to the bill would develop.

Mrs. Norton Is First Signer.

Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, chairman of the house labor committee in charge of the bill, was the first to sign the discharge petition after she had placed it on Speaker Bankhead's desk. Then came the unprecedented rush of other signers.

The members were asked by Speaker Bankhead to form in line in the interest of orderly procedure. But the enthusiasm was so overwhelming that the sergeant-at-arms had to be called to enforce the speaker's request.

During the first hour signatures were attached at the rate of three a minute. This put 180 names on the petition. With victory in sight the speed subsided, but the constant tread of members to the desk where the petition had been placed continued.

The eight members of the Louisiana delegation clinched the victory for the bill. Following the Texan they marched in a body to the dais and signed up.

Representative Mouton is 218th Signer.

Mrs. Nan W. Honeyman, of Oregon, the first woman congressman from that state, was the 217th signer against the arbitrary action of the rules committee. Then Representative Robert L. Mouton, of Louisiana, who had given way for Mrs. Honeyman, signed his name as the final necessary one.

Representative Joachim Fernandez, of Louisiana, after signing the petition took Mrs. Norton's hand and with a courtly bow kissed it as the 218th name was affixed.

Before the ink on the last signature had time to dry, Mrs. Virginia E. Jenckes, of Indiana, who had flown from her state to help put over the petition, rushed into the chamber with a fountain pen poised ready to affix her signature. But she was five minutes too late.

As she left the house, Mrs. Norton planted a kiss squarely on the cheek of Representative Arthur D. Healey, of Massachusetts, an ardent supporter of the petition movement.

Rayburn Predicts Passage of Bill.

Representative John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, who with Representative Healey aided materially in swinging the New England delegation back of the measure, said "Congress dare not adjourn without a final vote on such vital legislation."

Majority Leader Rayburn said: "I think the bill will pass, but that doesn't mean I wouldn't vote for amendments."

Green Praises Petition Success.

The American Federation of Labor, which backed both the bill and the petition to discharge the rules committee from further consideration of it, was jubilant. William Green, president of the federation, said: "I commend the house of representatives for the prompt signing of the petition which brings the wages and hours bill out on the floor for a vote. By their action, the signers of the petition showed themselves responsive to house opinion. It is now up to congress to pass this measure which carries out the fundamental principles espoused by the American Federation of Labor and has the overwhelming support of the American people."

THE WORLD ABOUT US

Plants 'Get Around'

BY STANLEY A. CAIN,

Department of Botany.

Plants ordinarily are rooted to the soil, and we do not think of them as migrating. Although they are not motile in the sense that animals are, they do get around in the world about us.

They cannot exhibit annual migations like many birds, nor periodic mass movements like certain animals, such as the squirrels. The spread of plant population is, in contrast to that of animals, a matter of slow movement, by dissemination of their seeds of spores.

Certain kinds of trees are known to have migrated only two or three hundred miles in 20,000 years, while others have spread their territory ten times that much. If we imagine an oak tree standing at the edge of the area occupied by that kind of oak, we can see that its heavy fruits will drop near the parent tree. At most, the seedling is likely to develop only a few feet distant if it rolls down hill, or a hundred or two feet if some squirrel hides it away.

The Wind Helps

Trees with seeds small and light enough to be wind blown, as is the case of the pine and spruce, may spread farther in a season. However, the next spread is not made from the frontier represented by the seed or seedling until years later, when the new tree is itself old enough to bear seeds. Certain weeds have been known to have a comparatively rapid migration. They have very small, dust-like seeds, or they have prickles which enable them to stick to animals, or they are carried on the feet of birds.

Wind storms have been known to carry spores of mosses and of fungi, a matter of a few hundred miles. Another large group of plants travel by water. The cocoanut palm is thought to have originated in Brazil, but it was found along tropical shores around the world everywhere man explored.

Man Transports Most

Man has been the most active agent in extending the range of plants in the United States. He has planted eastern plants in the west, southern plants in the north, and introduced others from Europe, Asia, and South America. Many of our worst weeds are foreigners imported by man—without his intending to do so—in agricultural seeds as contamination. Several devastating plant parasites have likewise recently come to our shores from foreign countries. Chestnut blight and Dutch elm disease are good examples of diseases which have gotten around too freely for man's good.

Plants, of course, cannot move purposefully in any one direction. They cannot migrate especially toward situations where they will do well; some fall on barren soil and others on stony ground. In general, we can say that plant seeds and spores are spread in all directions. They survive, of course, in exceedingly small numbers in proportion to the total enormous numbers produced, only by means of those seeds or spores which happen to settle in suitable living conditions. Mother Nature is prodigious in the production of seeds with the result that a few survive to produce mature plants, and thus the kind continues its existence.

National Bowl of Rice Ball June 17 To Climax First Phase of Great Labor Drive for Chinese Aid

Washington. — Labor's coast-to-coast drive for civilian Chinese relief is under way, with announcement by National Chairman Matthew Woll that the first phase will wind up with a national bowl of rice ball on June 17.

Labor's national committee for civilian Chinese relief has appointed 500 local general chairmen throughout the country and these, in turn, have organized committees ready for every branch of activity.

General headquarters is suggesting that each bowl of rice ball follow a uniform pattern, as far as possible, with a general charge of $1, with a national goal of at least a million dollar total, net return for Chinese relief.

In each case the simple bowl of rice is to be used as the main dinner item—in many cases a bowl of rice and tea will constitute the entire dinner.

Today Chairman Woll is sending to every local general chairman an official call to action. It is expected that within a week arrangements will be almost completed in every city.

One Big United Movement.

In addition to labor's national committee, four other relief groups have joined the great undertaking to form one great united council for civilian Chinese relief.

In this picture are the trade union auxiliary members, under the national chairmanship of Marie Fox Lowe, with 22,000,000 women rallying to the undertaking.

Best estimates today are that more than fifty million Chinese are suffering, with most of them in the utmost depths of misery and hunger. Epidemic disease is an ever-present menace. Perhaps the world never has known such a huge relief necessity.

Blow at Imperialism Seen.

The heroic defense of the Chinese armies has in no way changed the enormous picture of disaster and suffering, although it has beyond doubt rebuilt the Chinese morale and given the Japanese imperialists a new concept of "the destiny of empire," in the view of National Chairman Woll.

"We must throw our full strength into this great effort," said Mr. Woll. "The relief task is staggering. But let me make it clear that we have in this case something in addition to relief. We have the ambitions of a militarist-imperialist invader to deal with. Every bit of relief we can muster helps by that much not only to relieve suffering, but to stop imperialism. At a time when so much of the world has gone over to one form or another of dictatorship, our effort takes on the size and importance of international defense of freedom.

Great Radio Hook-Up.

"Our labor effort becomes the most important effort in the world in the pathway of imperialist and dictatorial ambitions. I am sure our whole movement will rally in this tremendous drive for relief. Let me add that every cent raised will go to the relief of the Chinese sufferers."

Every bowl of rice ball will be brought into a great coast-to-coast radio hook-up on the night of June 17. A national broadcast is being arranged and every local unit is being asked to arrange for radio reception in its hall or in whatever place the ball is held, so that all may be brought together around a central theme. Where there are public address systems these will be hooked up with the radio program. In other places radio sets will be installed.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—While the final fate of the wage-hour bill is still uncertain, several things have occurred which decidedly increase its chances.

Both branches of organized labor are not only for the bill, but have started vigorous campaigns in its favor.

The smashing victory of Senator Claude Pepper in the Florida primary, where, as a straight out supporter of the new deal program—wage-hour bill included—he got 60 per cent of the total vote, has heartened liberals in both Houses.

G. O. P. Support Asked

The effort to get House Republicans behind the bill, mentioned several times before, was given a dramatic force by the speech of Hamilton Fish, rock-ribbed Republican from New York. Here is a part of it:

"I am saying to my northern Republican friends that if they vote against this bill, they will go down and our party will go down as an enemy of labor. That is the reason we have been defeated for the last eight years in the nation. In the state of New York, it is the reason why we have been defeated for 20 years.

End of Party Feared

"If the Republicans vote against this bill, which is backed by every labor organization, it will destroy the Republican party. There will be no more Republican party. There will be nothing left except the name, backed by a few industrialists and bankers."

It has been an open secret in Washington for days that Fish did his utmost to get the Republicans on the Rule Committee to report out the bill.

Then Silence Reigned.

His father scowled at him, and Tommy waited.

Two minutes later. "Daddy, this egg is not fresh!"

One minute later. "Daddy, this egg is—

"If you can't keep quiet at the table I'll give you something to make you!" roared his father. "There is many a child would be glad of an egg for breakfast!"

Silence. Then in a whisper: "Daddy, can I leave the beak?"

Worst Features of Quebec Bill Aimed at Labor Eliminated, But Act Is Still Menace

Montreal.—The Duplesis government of Quebec at the fag-end of the session of the legislature brought in a bill which, if it had passed in its original form, would have been the most serious threat yet aimed at international unions in the province. Though amendments eliminated the most dangerous feature, the measure as passed may still be a source of mischief.

The bill was somewhat dubiously entitled "An Act to facilitate the exercise of certain rights." As originally drafted, says Gustave Francq, secretary of the Quebec Federation of Labor, "the bill embodied the intention to destroy the international unions by creating the fear on the part of their members that being parties to a non-incorporated group would expose them, individually and collectively, to responsibility for damages caused by the group or any member thereof. An employer suing for damages on account of a strike or picketing, might have seized a union member's personal bank account or home." (The National Catholic Syndicates are incorporated.)

Individual Members Exempted.

As amended the act provides that the summoning of any non-incorporated group before the courts of the province may be effected by summoning one of the officers thereof and "that judgment rendered in any cause may be executed against all the movable or immovable property of such group." This removes the threat to individual members. Aside from the Bricklayers and Longshoremen, few international unions have immovable property in the province, and they do not have to keep their funds in the province.

Still the act, along with other acts, may be a mischievous weapon in the government's fight to undermine the internationals.

Union Funds Menaced.

In event of a strike, says Col. J. A. Calder, king's counsel, and legal adviser of the Quebec Civil Liberties union, a third party could start a suit to attach any funds being sent into Quebec to help the strikers.

U. S. Official Scores New Deal's Rich Foes

Nashville. — Wealthy American families who seek to "destroy, block and thwart the desires and wishes of the majority of the citizens" were assailed by Aubrey Williams, executive director of the National Youth administration.

Williams, speaking before the Tennessee Education association here, said the wealthy families are the bitterest enemies of the New Deal. He attributed most of the present "ill-feeling and ungraciousness" to the fact that their power had been thoroughly challenged by the national administration and in many local institutions, public and private.

These "are usually the most articulate members of their communities," Williams said. "They are usually the wealthiest; they frequently own or control the newspapers; they are on the school and church boards.

"They usually own a majority of the stock in the town's main industries . . . in the past these people have had things run their way," but "the past five years have been different."

Same, But Different.

The Ranee of Sarawak explains that a bush girl in Borneo doesn't think much of a suitor until he has brought her a new skull as a token of affection. Down there, it seems, when a chap falls in love, some other fellow loses his head.

By arrresting 34,000 people in Vienna alone, killing an unknown number of Jews and barring the rest from the polls, giving the general population a clear understanding of the wrath to come and escorting voters to the polls with soldiers, Mr. Hitler got a whopping majority in the Austrian election.

A.—Yes, but only the male crickets do so. They make the shrill sound by rubbing together the base of their wing covers.

IN THE NEWS

GEORGE M. HARRISON

George M. Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives' association and president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, is chief spokesman for the railroad workers in all the outburst of conferences and negotiations on railroad questions. He will be in the news until the railroad question is settled one way or another. He should be able to stand the strain. He is perhaps an inch sort of six feet, weighs 200, and has shoulders that would have fitted him for the wrestling mat if he had not chosen instead to go "workin' on the railroad."

His first rail job was valuation clerk in the car accountants' office on the Missouri Pacific. Old friends say that the Missouri Pacific went broke the first time immediately after George quit its employ; but he refuses to confirm this.

He has greenish gray eyes, usually good natured; though they can glitter unpleasantly in time of need. He is the choice of the workers but the managers like him, even though he threw their proposal for a wage cut in the nearest ash can. Perhaps the reason for their liking is that they know they cand depend on what he says.

Oh, So Dumb!

An Irishman's attic caught fire, and his wife, running for the nearest available water, seized the kettle from the fireplace. On her way up the stairs she was met by her husband. He stared aghast at the kettle in her hand.

"Mrs. O'Toole," he said, sadly, "but it's a regular fool ye are an' all. Fancy trying to put out a fire with hot water!"

Coopers Begin Drive In Big Apple Region

Halifax, N. S.—Organization of all coopers in the Annapolis valley, Nova Scotia, largest apple growing district of Canada, and also producing strawberries, blueberries, pears, plums and cherries, has been started by the Coopers' International Union of North America.

The first local of the international union in Canada was established recently at Berwick, N. S., in the midst of the Annapolis valley. The start was made with 25 charter members. Within three weeks, the membership was trebled and indications are that it will be completely full strength for the Berwick area in the very near future. At a general meeting held in Berwick, attended by 100 coopers, it was pointed out that "unity of idea and action and mutual protection and a living wage," were the objectives of the union.

By JOSEPH A. WISE

Chicago, Ill.—The performance staged in the Illinois political primary campaign by W. Z. Foster, Earl Browder and other leaders of the communist party of the United States constantly increases one's amazement as the facts are examined and appraised.

Of course one is not supposed to criticize anything the communists do. It makes them "mad" at you. They retort by saying that you are a "red baiter" if you point the finger of scorn at their "screwball" didoes.

Work With Political Crowd.

Nevertheless and notwithstanding, the comrades gave a splendid demonstration of their propensity to make complete monkeys of themselves as a result of their efforts to influence the course of events in the state of Illinois in the year 1938.

They got themselves all balled up with a lot of people whom they are wont to condemn in the severest terms. For example, just to mention a few of the more prominent fellows whom the reds have been accustomed to denounce as enemies of the people, there was Pat Nash, Illinois democratic national committeeman; Ed Kelly, mayor of Chicago, and Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Daily Tribune.

McCormick is publishing an alleged republican daily newspaper, but he has been a lifelong pal of Ed Kelly, the alleged democratic mayor of Chicago.

Tribune to the Rescue.

Kelly is rated as a millionaire, yet he has done nothing except to hold appointive political jobs up to the time that McCormick, through the influence of the Tribune, put Kelly in the Chicago mayor's chair as the successor o Anton J. Cermak.

When Foster and Browder got themselves in a jam over their support of Michael L. Igoe for the democratic nomination for United States senator, the Chicago Daily Tribune came to the rescue. Just to help out Mayor Kelly, presumably.

Congressman Scott W. Lucas, who was the leading contender against Igoe and won the nomination by about 61,000 votes, began filling the air with hoofs, horns, hide and hair, sand and gravel over the alliance between the Chicago city hall crowd and the communists.

Lucas Charges Denied.

The Tribune came to the rescue by publishing what purported to be a factual story of an alleged investigation which it said it had made. With its usual owlish solemnity, the Tribune declared that there was no truth in the charges being hurled by Lucas.

If the Tribune reporters had visited any news stand where the Tribune is sold, they could have purchased a copy of the Midwest Daily Record, official communist publication, which carried an official indorsement of Igoe and a paid political display advertisement for him four days ahead of the primary election, April 12.

Pat Nash, Ed Kelly and "Bertie" McCormick own oodles of money outright and command use of great gobs of it besides. How much of it did their communist playmates get ?

Report Reveals Huge Canadian Textile Profits

"While continually complaining of inadequate protection, the Dominion Textile company, on an original investment of $500,000 made in 1905, paid $14,837,500 in dividends up to 1936, or an average annual rate of 98.4 per cent, and today has a present additional value of $14,671,105. This is after charging off to profits $22,943,471 for depreciation, and $12,492,186 to equipment and repairs.

"But this is not the whole story. There appears to be a secret reserve of profits amounting to $17,256,728. . . This company has had profits of about one million dollars per year since 1920 other than those disclosed by its public statements. . . .

"It may be noted that during the depression years 1930 to 1936, on the shares issued for the original investment of $500,000, $4,312,600 were paid in dividends."

Housing Appropriation Nears Exhaustion

Washington.—Of the $500,000,000 made available for slum clearance and low rent housing by the United States housing act, $310,998,000 have been earmarked at the present writing. They are marked for 77 communities, located in 23 states and the territory of Hawaii.

Three states are approaching the deadline of $50,000,000, the most that can be allotted to any state. Ohio now has $45,550,000; Pennsylvania, $45,200,000, and New York, $43,330,000.

"If the demands of local housing authorities for earmarkings continue at the present rate, the entire $500,000,000 now available for earmarkings under the United States housing act of 1937 should be exhausted by June 1," Administrator Nathan Straus, of the U. S. housing authority, said.

Lumber Firm Signs A. F. of L. Union Pact

Ravensdale, Wash. — A splendid union contract was recently secured here with the Bakers & Sons Logging company, by Local 2894 of the Loggers' Department of the Oregon-Washington Council of Lumber and Sawmill Workers.

The agreement, regarded as one which may be used as a precedent for other negotiations, provides for a full union shop, including recognition of the union as the sole collective bargaining agent for the workers and otehr standard points specified in all Oregon-Washington Council agreements, including the five-day, 40-hour workweek, with time and a half for overtime. In addition to the usual holidays, the Baker agreement also allows all national and state election days.

A. F. of L. Counsel Accuses N. L. R. B. Of "Bias and Prejudice" in Administering Labor Act

Washington, D. C. — Appearing before the house judiciary subcommittee, Joseph A. Padway, counsel for the American Federation of Labor, accused the national labor relations board of "bias and prejudice" in administering the Wagner labor act.

Padway made his accusation in testifying on the Walsh-Healey bill which would require persons holding government contracts or obtaining government loans or grants to abide by the act.

"If you pass this act the way it is drawn," he warned, "all hell will break loose."

Padway demanded that the bill be amended to provide that federal courts, instead of the labor board, should determine whether a contractor was violating the labor act, and the contract should be revoked.

"We simply don't want the labor board to have jurisdiction over these contracts," Padway asserted. "It was never intended that it (the board) should invalidate contracts as they are doing now.

"We think their decisions are founded on economic bias to the detriment of our unions. We have burned our fingers, and we want to call a halt to it.

"We wouldn't want the Wagner act repealed, and we wouldn't want its substantive law changed, but we want the procedure changed and now."

Flint Welfare Authorities Plan To Move 12,000 Idle Men From City to Other Localities

Flint, Mich.—Welfare authorities here are considering moving from Genesee county to other localities more than 12,000 men who face a jobless future in General Motors plants here. The men's families would also be moved.

Faced with the prospect that all General Motors plants will close before July 1 for the summer, Welfare Administrator Lewis J. Ludington said the welfare department would be unable to care for the increased numbers of unemployed.

Ludington said that under the tentative plan each family would be given transportation to whatever new home it chose. No provision had been made for families with no choice, or those who would prefer to remain in Flint.

Employment at Low Level

"Officials of the companies have told us," Ludington said, "that all men with less than two years of seniority will be permanently out of work. They suggested that this plan of moving the men and their families to some other location was the only way to solve the situation."

Flint is the production center for Buick, Chevrolet, Fisher Body, A-C Spark Plug and other General Motors units. In normal times G. M. plants here employ 50,000 men, but employment recently has fallen to approximately 22,000.

Ludington said that with 12,700 families now on welfare roles, and with an anticipated increase of at least 12,300 more by July 1, both Flint and Genesee counties faced bankruptcy unless something could be done to alleviate the problem.

General Movement Planned

"We are going to institute a general movement," he said, "in which all the civic organizations will be asked to cooperate. Already the plan to move these families out of the city has received the support of the manufacturers, the chamber of commerce and other organizations." Transportation to a new home will be paid by the welfare department, Ludington said.

Asked whether officials of the United Automobile Workers union had been consulted on the plan, Ludington said several of them had expressed "personal approval," but that the official attitude of the union was not yet known.

Ludington said the city of Flint already had exceeded its 15 mill limit of indebtedness and that the county would have exceeded it by July 1.

Ala. Federation Convention Closes

Tuscaloosa, Ala. — The Alabama State Federation of Labor Convention, held here last week, maintained the record of growth and expansion that had been set earlier in the month by Florida, Louisana and Georgia. Both in affiliated local unions and in increased membership of locals and in new locals instituted during the past year, Secretary-Treasurer Hare's reports showed great gains.

The convention opened Monday morning of last week by President Murphy, of the Tuscaloosa Central Labor Union. Welcome addresses by the mayor and other city and civic officials were delivered, and the response was made by Holt Ross, of the powerful Hod Carriers, Common and Construction Laborers' International Union.

Mr. Ross' address was plain and to the point, and coming right at the opening hour of the convention was considered most significant in that the big delegation responded with an applause that left no room for doubt in the mind of anyone as to the loyalty of the assembled throng to the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Ross asserted that the CIO is on the way out, and that its chief support now is the apparent partiality shown the CIO by the National Labor Relations Board. The speaker declared in his characteristic emphatic manner that the National Labor Board must treat the American Federation fairly, or there will be a new personnel on the board that will be fair in its decisions and activities.

President Murphy turned the gavel over to Sam E. Roper, president of the State Federation of Labor, and the fighting president of the Alabama State Federation of Labor was given a great ovation when he assumed the chair and announced that the convention was officially opened for the transaction of business.

United States Senator Lister Hill, endorsed and supported by the State Federation of Labor in the recent campaign, thrilled the assembled delegates with an address that was declared by all who heard him to have been the most powerful speech ever heard in a labor convention in Alabama. In speaking of Labor, Senator Hill did not generalize. He spoke of the American Federation of Labor, and of President William Green, and of George L. Googe, and of the Alabama State Federation of Labor, and of Sam Roper, when speaking of Labor. His address was received with great pleasure.

International officers present were introduced to the convention, each making short, timely addresses. Commissioner of Labor R. R. Moore gave an account of the work of the Department of Labor.

Hon. C. V. McLaughlin, first assistant secertary of the United States Department of Labor, brought greetings from Secretary Perkins, and talked at length upon the great work that has been done by the department.

George L. Googe, southern representative of the American Federation of Labor, representing President Green at he convenient, delivered the principal address of the convention. He related the growth of the A. F. of L. in the South during the past, with especial emphasis upon the unprecedented growth during the past twelve months. Mr. Googe described the discouraging effects of the actions of the National Labor Relations Board in delaying, postponing and dragging out over long periods of time the cases wherein the American Federation of Labor unions are involved, and compared it with the dispatch and ready decisions in the cases where the CIO are involved.

Mr. Googe told of how the National Labor Board had, by its decisions and permissions, allowed the CIO to come into industries where the employers and the A. F. of L. unions are ,working under agreement, and order elections in these instances, thus defeating the very purpose of the Wagner Labor Relations Act. The speaker then turned to First Assistant Secretary McLaughlin, and asked him to carry this information back to the Department of Labor, and if possible, see that it gets to the White House. It was after Mr. Googe's great speech that the convention adopted a resolution notifying the National Labor Relations Board that if it continued in its course of denying the right of contract, and interferred with A. F. of L. unions in their contractual relations with their employers, that all the economic force of the A. F. of L. will be thrown to the assistance of the employership in their resistance of such dangerous course.

For more than a quarter of a century the federal government of the United States, through the engineers of the war department, has given consideration to the possibilities of harnessing the various rapids streams in Tennessee with a view of saving lives, property and our natural resources. The records show that I have been one of those who has actively and enthusiastically sponsored the development of the navigable waters of our state.

Originally, the fundamental purpose actuating those who promoted the enterprise was to control the waters of these navigable streams so that we might reduce the damages to life and to property occurring during flood periods. Other considerations in mind, of course, included the consideration of our natural resources, the elimination of soil erosion, increasing navigation and the furtherance of health and scientific planning. The flood control principle, while in no wise changed, has in recent years become secondary and the development of electricity has supplanted it as the chief motive for the construction of dams on the navigable streams of Tennessee. This is proven by the records of the war department made by the army engineers and the records of the Tennessee Valley Authority. For example, the engineers proposed the construction of a dam at Cove Creek at a cost of approximately seven millions of dollars with a reservoir capacity of 1,500,000 acre feet. This plan was disregarded by the Tennessee Valley Authority because they not only increased the height; of the dam now known as Norris, but in increasing it they extended the reservoir capacity to a third greater coverage than that recommended origin ally by the engineers of the war department. And of course the Tennessee Valley Authority's expenditures in the construction of the Norris dam are commensurate proportionately, and to an amount in excess of twice that recommended by the army engineers.

When consideration was being given the recommendations of the war department, a member of the United States senate offered a resolution to recommit the bill which carried with it the proposed "Cove" dam, which is now known as Norris. In his motion to recommit the bill and asked that the conferees representing the senate in the matter, the United States senator in question identified the two sections that these two sections be eliminated from the bill, and that the dam contemplated abandoning the dam. Text of Senator Berry's Speech

For more than a quarter of a century the federal government of the United States, through the engineers of the war department, has given consideration to the possibilities of harnessing the various navigable streams in Tennessee with a view of saving lives, private properties and our natural resources. The records show that I have been one of those who has actively and enthusiastically sponsored the government's development of the navigable waters of our state.

Originally, the fundamental purpose actuating those who pioneered the enterprise was to control the waters of these navigable streams so that we might reduce the damages to life and to property occurring during flood periods. Other considerations in mind, of course, embodied the consideration of our natural resources, the elimination of soil erosion, increasing navigation and the furtherance of health and scientific planning. The flood control principle, while in no wise changed, has in recent years become secondary and the development of electricity has supplanted it as the chief motive for the construction of dams on the navigable streams of Tennessee. This is proved by the records of the war department made by the army engineers and the records of the Tennessee Valley Authority. For example, the army engineers proposed the construction of a dam at Cove Creek at a cost of approximately seven millions of dollars with a reservoir capacity of 2,260,000 acre feet. This plan was disregarded by the Tennessee Valley Authority because they not only increased the height of the dam now known as Norris, but in increasing it they extended the reservoir capacity to a third greater coverage than that recommended originally by the engineers of the war department. And of course the Tennessee Valley Authority's expenditures in the construction of the dam increased proportionately, and to an amount in excess of twice the cost recommended by the army engineers.

When consideration was being given the recommendations of the war department, a member of the United States senate offered a motion to recommit the bill which carried with it the proposed "Cove Creek" dam, which is now known as Norris. In his motion to recommit, the United States senator in question identified the two sections in the bill and asked that the conferees representing the senate insist that these two sections be eliminated from the bill, and this demand contemplated abandoning the dam. Discussing the matter, the United States senator said: "It is proposed that the federal government shall go into my state and order the condemnation of lands, an area of which may be equal to that of an average county in Tennessee; that the federal government shall take away from the state and put into the hands of the government not only the lands themselves, but railroads, corporations and public utilities that may be on these lands; any electric light plants that may be on the lands; and all other properties including cities and towns, and anything else that may be on these lands. To take villages, farms and residences away from Tennessee. Here is a proposal to take this vast amount of property away from the state of Tennessee without any compensation—is it right to take Tennessee's property without due compensation?"

The effect as anticipated by the senator and as quoted in the foregoing has actually occurred, but the extent of the damages imposed upon the state through confiscation of properties is unquestionably greater as result of the dam built by the Tennessee Valley Authority than that proposed by the army engineers because of the greater coverage due to the greater size of the lake. Due to the increased height of such dam, a greater area of property back of the dam was covered, thus some of the most valuable farm lands and minerals were completely destroyed as economic factors.

To those who may be unfamiliar with the area which has been covered by the waters of the Norris lake, I would recommend their perusal of the report of the secretary of war submitted to the congress, and the findings of the engineers who gave very full and complete consideration to what would be the damages if a dam was built. In this report the army engineers cite such materials prevalent in this area as asphalt rock, cement materials, clays, copper, limestones, sandstones, manganese, phosphates, zinc, lead, iron ore and marble. And with reference to marble they pointed out the availability, the variety of colors in this district, and the enormous quantities. The report points out that a detailed examination of the marble belts will unquestionably uncover many other favorable quarrying sites, and that Tennessee marble ranks among the best. Of course we know that Knoxville has been and is now regarded as the capital of the marble industry of America.

In May, 1933, the congress of the United States enacted a law which is now known as the Tennessee Valley Authority statute. This law establishes a precedent in the life of the nation because it is an almost all inclusive statute. Many have gone so far as to say that it at least establishes a subsidiary or secondary government. There are those who have claimed it usurps the constitution of the United States. There is one phase, with which most of us are familiar, which obviously is questionable. That phase is the provision denying citizens the right of trial by jury as it relates to their properties coming within the due process provision of the constitution. Notwithstanding this abridgment of what many believe to be a violation of the constitutional right of our citizens, there still remains, of course, the right to appeal to the courts for redress by those who feel that they have been unjustly treated. But in this procedure we find the property owners, the injured persons, in the embarrassing position of being compelled to meet the expense of appeals to courts and to higher courts at the individual's expense, while the federal government collects money from all the people in the form of taxation, including the property holder who may be injured. And then this money, or the part necessary, is turned over to the Tennessee Valley Authority, who proceeds to prosecute.

Now, with this practically all inclusive authority under the statute, the Tennessee Valley Authority was entirely within its right in proceeding to disregard the recommendation of the engineers of the war department, and to proceed along lines of construction which they, the Authority, deemed best for the nation. There is no question about the right to do so under the law, and the Authority did proceed to build a dam at Cove Creek, now known as Norris, of approximately three times the cost and size to that recommended by the engineers of the war department. The construction of a dam of such height, of course, brought the Tennessee Valley into the electric power business to an extent that far exceeded the original purpose.

The building of this dam at Norris to embrace the generation of electricity raises the broad question not only of the constitutional right of the government to engage in business in competition to private industry but, likewise, the question as to whether such a course is in harmony with democratic philosophy. But quite aside from this fact the dam has been built. Unquestionably, it will prevent the loss of life and the loss of private property, which has heretofore occurred as result of floods. There is no question but that it will do much for the prevention of soil edosion and the protection of our natural resources in this area and will contribute very largely to making the Tennessee river navigable. But here is the current producing facilities —what shall we do with this current? No sensible person would for a minute suggest that since we have harnessed these waters that we should allow the current to be wasted.

That would be economically unsound and unthinkable. Therefore, the question arises as to whether it is sound economy for the government to say: "Here is the electric current, we offer it to the people. Those who are interested, come and get it. The price at the switchboard is so much, and we shall require the sale of the juice to the users, our citizens, at a government rate, giving you a legitimate profit for the transaction and the transmission of the current by whatever process you may decide to use." This latter is for the government to build transmission lines and distributing plants and go into direct competition with private industry, thus confiscating by competition on the properties of taxpayers. For my part, I select the former course because it is sounder, more logical, and is in harmony with our American traditions and our democratic form of government.

In the Tennessee Valley program, and referring specifically to the flooding of properties, I am in position to illustrate the effect of the dam built by the Tennessee Valley Authority as against the height of the dam proposed by the engineers of the war department. It certainly has meant something to hundreds and hundreds of farmers and property owners, as it has to me, because the dam built by the Tennessee Valley Authority upon its own initiative has, I repeat, covered properties that could not have possibly been affected by the type of dam proposed and recommended by the engineers of the war department.

You have heard of the Berry marble claim. It has gathered some political momentum. This property, which has been given wide political consideration and which has become the tender morsel for political discussions by the small man, would never have found the front page or the back page or attracted the whisperings of the politicians if the recommendations of the army engineers had been carried out. It is my desire that the people of Tennessee remember that fact for the reasons to which I shall make reference later.

Many of my fellow citizens have been led to believe that the politi... gossipers are correct in their assumption as it relates to my inter... in the marble business, and it is because of this that I wish to ... forth the facts in some detail. I shall do so in the following man...

There are those who have been convinced that in the condemna... proceedings brought by the Tennessee Valley Authority against ... perty owners in the Norris lake area, known as the "Marble Case," ... it is solely a Berry marble case, when the fact is that I am one ... many who have had their properties confiscated and, too, my inter... are small by comparison with others who have been damaged. Of ... se I have been selected from among all the men affected in this ... as the headliner because it gives the political gossipers some... to talk about. This alone is an indication of the smallness as ... as the unfairness of those who are engaged in attempting to ... this a Berry case for the purpose of leading the people to believe ... am opposed to the Tennessee Valley development, when the rec... or nearly a quarter of a century indicate the contrary to be the ...

...any have been persuaded that George Berry secured the leases ... properties now covered by the waters of the Norris lake after ... Tennessee Valley Authority statute had passed the congress and had received the approval of the president. Of course, this is just another example of misrepresentations and deliberately manufactured falsehoods. Let's get the records straight, and I should like you to remember the dates to which I shall refer later. My activities in developing zinc, lead and marble in the area now covered by the waters of Norris lake originated during the administration of former President Herbert Hoover. IN A WORD, I WAS DRILLING FOR ZINC AND LEAD, AND QUARRYING MARBLE BEFORE THE HONORABLE FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT WAS NOMINATED BY HIS PARTY FOR THE PRESIDENCY. As a matter of record to be found in the leases registered in Union county, the last lease taken was as of April, 1932. Mr. Roosevelt did not take office as president until 1933, and the Tennessee Valley Authority proposal did not become a law until May, 1933. These are facts—the attempt of the traducers to lead the people to a contrary conclusion notwithstanding.

Through the propaganda of the gossip mongers, many have been led to believe that George Berry sued the Tennessee Valley Authority, or the federal government, for the vast sums of money—millions and millions of dollars. This is just another deliberate, premeditated falsehood developed for the purpose of misleading the public, and in so doing to injure my candidacy for a seat in the United States senate. The records show that notwithstanding the tremendous damages sustained, George Berry has neither sued the government, the Tennessee Valley Authority, nor has he at any time up to this moment asked for any amount of damage. I have taken the position from the beginning that here are the facts and the records, and that under the statute the owners should be adequately compensated for the properties which have been confiscated by the federal government through its agent, the Tennessee Valley Authority, on the basis of its necessity for public welfare. Therefore, any statement that I have either sued or placed a value of any amount whatever on the properties which have been destroyed through the construction of the Norris dam by the Tennessee Valley Authority is untrue in toto.

The litigation, and the only litigation that has occurred, was precipitated by the Tennessee Valley Authority board. They, after four years of procrastination and delay, finally agreed among themselves to bring condemnation proceedings against all these properties, including the portion owned by me. You must understand that the condemnation proceedings took place after they had confiscated the properties by covering them with water and making them impossible of operation. The property owners and the holders of the leases, including myself, proposed arbitration, seeking to compose the matter equitably and justly. When this effort was thoroughly exhausted, there was no procedure open except for the Tennessee Valley Authority, through its directors, to bring condemnation proceedings, and the proceedings were brought in the latter part of the year 1937. It has been said by the gossip mongers that the decision of the board of citizens—not the court, because the matter has not yet been heard by the court—was that the property was declared worthless. This is likewise untrue because there isn't the use of this word at any place in the decision. The fact is that the board declared no award could be given because the properties could not be operated commercially at a profit due to distance from the fabricating plants in Knoxville, and due to overburden. If this principle should be accepted and allowed to become a precedent any property in the United States not paying a profit could be subject to confiscation by the government without payment of damages provided for under the constitution.

Many citizens of the state have been led to believe by the political gossipers that I am not now in the marble business, when, as a matter of fact, the Tennessee Valley Authority, in building the Norris dam, affected only a portion of the properties owned by me. Let it be said here so there can be no misunderstanding that I am not only in the marble business, and have been for a great many years, but I intend to continue in it. Moreover, I have recently disposed of a fourth of my remaining properties for a substantial control in one of the large fabricating plants of the United States. There would be no purpose for a marble fabricating plant to trade its valuable stock for a fourth of my marble holdings unless the marble had a value.

One of the amazing factors in all this political agitation about my personal business and the question as to whether or not I have the right to own property and to defend it; and as to whether or not I am in the marble business is answered in the extraordinary fact that the building which houses the general offices of the Tennessee Valley Authority at Knoxville, Tenn., built prior to the existence of the Tennessee Valley Authority, contains decorative marble which came from my quarries. I suppose the small politicians will rise and condemn me because I was engaged in the marble business and sold marble prior to the existence of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

It is reasonable to assume that had I not been a member of the United States senate little or nothing would have been said in connection with the condemnation proceedings brought by the Tennessee Valley Authority. You have not heard any other name mentioned and yet I am but one of approximately thirty persons involved in the condemnation proceedings. This alone should convince any fair-minded person of the motive that actuates those in giving life to the slanderous and unfair gossip. One naturally wonders if this is the price and the requisite that must be met if public office is sought. What is the competency required of a public official—must it be measured by one's experience and availability, or is it to be measured by the demagogues and the gossip mongers? Obviously, the facts in this marble case set aside the slightest justification for its injection into political matters. It is just as unfair and indecent as it would be if I should attack my opponents for their having gone into farming as a business. Because of this, I reaffirm my request that you please remember the following facts:

FIRST: That I was in the marble business before there was any Tennessee Valley Authority, and before Mr. Roosevelt became president. I was quarrying and selling marble during the administration of former President Herbert Hoover, which was before the Tennessee Valley act became a law.

SECOND: That I was drilling for zinc and lead on my properties, now covered by the Norris lake, more than a year before the Tennessee Valley Authority became a law.

THIRD: Remember that my leases were secured prior to April, 1932; that the Tennessee Valley act was passed in May, 1933, and that Mr. Roosevelt became president in 1933.

FOURTH: Please remember that I have not received any moneys from the Tennessee Valley Authority, nor have I asked for any amount for damages sustained as result of the confiscation of my properties. I have simply insisted that some board determine the value upon the basis of fact, whatever it may be.

FIFTH: Please remember that I have not brought suit nor taken any legal action against the Tennessee Valley Authority, or the federal government.

Now, my friends, with these facts stated, may I reaffirm my belief in the value of the construction of dams as the most scientific and practical manner for the control of navigable streams, thus preventing the loss of life and property by means of flood control. My record in support of the development of the Tennessee Valley and the navigable streams occurred before any of the political gossipers were ever heard to have said a favorable word for the development of these streams. My support of the development of the Tennessee Valley began when ... now occupy high positions in public affairs were condemning, attacking, and endeavoring to ... ment of the navigable streams of our state. During the course of the campaign I shall prove this beyond peradventure.

Because one may differ with the mode of procedure of another does not justify the conclusion that he is opposed to the principle involved. Principles are principles, and men are men; principles are eternal, but men are imperfect. If I object to confiscation of my property, does that raise a doubt as to my citizenship? If I hold to the fundamentals of the constitution of the United States and the due process provisions thereunder, does that make me opposed to the development of the navigable streams of our state? Of course not!

It is the intention—as already manifested—upon the part of the gossip mongers, the demagogues and that type of men who produce nothing but politics, who are the barnacles of our society, to mislead the people of our state. They are the people who are unaccustomed to productive work, who must originate political gossip. That is their status; that is all they know; it is their trade—just gossip mongers and demagogues. Thank God for the fact that they are in the hopeless minority in our great state!

The question as to the value of the portion of my marble, and that of others in a position similar to mine, is a matter that will be determined ultimately by the courts, and in the interest of the rights of private property owners as guaranteed by the constitution.

An investigation is now being made by the congress of the United States—not of the property owned by me or my associates—but an investigation that has for its purpose the determination of the responsibility for the differences that have developed waste and antagonisms between the directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority themselves. It was my privilege and pleasure to write Senator George W. Norris under date of Jan. 4, 1938, urging him to support an investigation of the conduct of the Tennessee Valley Authority. It was my pleasure and privilege to make a similar request of the president of the United States. I have asked for an investigation to cover the problems from A to Z because I believe the great possibilities of the Tennessee Valley Authority have been seriously abridged and handicapped because of the differences between the directors of the authority.

Somebody has said that bad faith was discovered in connection with the Berry marblle properties. Well, the board which was set up in Knoxville to hear the case of the condemnation proceedings brought by the Tennessee Valley Authority, and which was made up of lay members of the community, found no evidence of bad faith and challenged those who had raised the issue to produce evidence. They failed to present evidence of bad faith because there was no evidence. The president of the United States had the directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority before him for several days. He demanded proof of the statement that there was "probably bad faith" and "rumors of bad faith," but he was unable to get any member of the authority to produce evidence of bad faith. Senator Norris, father of the Tennessee Valley act, stated upon the floor of the senate that he had pleaded with his old friend, a member of the Tennessee Valley Authority, who has since been removed by the president, urging that he give him proof of the existence of bad faith, and he failed, as did the president, and as did the commission at Knoxville. So I think it reasonable to state here that any person who will persist in referring to, intimating or suggesting the presence of bad faith, is doing so for a malicious political purpose and ought to be denounced by every fair-thinking person in the state.

This statement I am making tonight will be put in printed form, it will be accompanied by the verbatim statement of Senator George W. Norris on the senate floor, sustaining my position in the matter. It will carry a letter addressed to Senator Norris my be, and other documents of equal importance. I invite those who seek to further fair dealing in business and in politics to write me at Pressmen's Home, Tennessee, and I shall be delighted to transmit a complete copy of this talk and of the records so there can be no misunderstanding.

Telegraphers Organize Western Union Locals

Green Saws Two Units Formed in Washington, Despite C. I. O. Opposition, Begins Drive, Backed by A. F. of L., to Unionize 50,000 W. U. Employes.

Washington.—Two large locals of employes of the Western Union Telegraph company in the nation's capital have been organized by the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of North America, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, announced in a statement here.

"This is the opening of a nation-wide drive to organize the 50,000 employes of the Western Union system," Mr. Green said. "The two Washington locals, with more than a hundred members each, were organized in the face of determined opposition from the existing company-dominated union and the C. I. O.

"Similar units will be formed as promptly as possible in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, Cleveland and Baltimore.

"The American Federation of Labor is lending full support to the Commercial Telegraphers' union in its campaign to organize the Western Union employes. Our organizers report that these employes are anxious to join our union and obtain the benefits of collective bargaining."

Despite telegrams circulated by the company union urging Western Union employes to stay away from C. T. U. organization meeting, a large and enthusiastic crowd attended the initial rally at Pythian Temple.

Temporary officers elected at the meeting were:

For the commercial department local: G. C. Cornwell, president; Edith Frank, secretary-treasurer.

For the traffic department local: Joe McClosky, president; J. M. Sobotka, secretary-treasurer.

A. F. OF L. ASKS COOPERATION OF LABOR AND INDUSTRY TO GIVE WORK TO IDLE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Co-operation of labor and industry to solve the problem of unemployment and give work to the jobless was advocated by the American Federation of Labor Executive Council, in a declaration of "basic aims and objectives." The statement was prepared by the Executive Council in spring session here.

"Unemployment can only be overcome through the creation of work opportunities for working men and women in private industry," the council said. "This is the real remedy for unemployment.

"The time has arrived when, through co-operation, understanding and a proper regard for the rights of all employers and employees, industry and labor should get together and seek to find a way by which this real remedy for idleness can be applied."

End of Warfare Asked

The council declared the Federation is "committed to the principle of private ownership, private initiative and the protection of private property", and called on industry in turn to recognize and respect the rights of labor.

"Labor invites industry to discard the weapons of industrial warfare directed against labor by employers' associations, both now and in the days gone by," said the council.

"Let us all have a new vision of the changed attitude between labor and capital. It means the substitution of co-operation and understanding for industrial strife.

"Labor and capital can co-operate, develop efficiency and production through labor organizations developed by the workers and through the organization of industry, as developed by industrial management," the statement continued.

Industrial Democracy Urged

"Through the establishment of contractual relationships, industrial peace can be promoted and industrial production stabilized. Contracts entered into between organized labor and industrial management must be regarded as sacred obligations. They must be religiously observed.

"The principle of industrial democracy through which labor and management may solve their common economic problems should be recognized and applied in all industrial relationships.

"Organizations of labor should be governed by democratic policies, rules and procedure. This is the American way. It is in conformity with modern requirements and democratic principles."

Labor Big Factor in Victories of Pepper and Hill—Two Anti-New Deal Senators Use Same Stuff in "Economy" Speeches.

BY GEORGE L. KNAPP

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, seeking a second term in the upper house at Washington and running on a straight, uncompromising new deal platform, got nearly 60 per cent. of the total vote at the primary. And that total vote is more than 75,000 greater than the one cas in he same state in the primary of the presidential year of 1936.

This is the first election since Florida abolished the poll tax. Before this, the would-be voter had to present his tax receipt to get his ballot. This year, they were free from that outworn piece of oligarchy. People long disfranchised for poverty swarmed to the polls, and friends of Senator Pepper who know Florida say that he got at least 80 per cent of that "new vote."

Why not? After all, who needs a new deal more than the citizens so poor that he is disfranchised by a poll tax?

This explains the total vote, and partly explains why Pepper got more than twice as many votes as his nearest opponent. There are other factors in that smashing victory, and the biggest of them was labor.

Labor went down the line for Senator Pepper. The State Federation of Labor indorsed him. So did the railroad unions; who also sent into Florida a special edition of their Washington paper, Labor. The CIO has a small membership in Florida, but evidently, most of those who were there cast their ballots for Pepper.

It should be noted here that Lister Hill, elected Senator from Alabama by a vote of more than two to one to fill the vacancy left by the appointment of Hugo L. Black to the Supreme Court, also ran on a straight new deal platform, and also had the united support of labor. The A. F. of L. unions were for him; the railroad unions were for him; the mine workers and the steel workers of the CIO were for him.

The victories of Hill and Pepper are two reasons why the wage-hour bill was taken out of the rules committee to a certain victory in the house and a very probable enactment at this session. Both CIO and A. F. of L. are behind this bill—and the news coming up from Alabama and Florida showed that even in the South, labor can deliver the goods.

There ought to be more teamwork among the anti-new deal senators. It is really a mistake for two of them to use exactly the same stuff from outside sources on the same day. The chaps who set up and read proof on the Congressional Record cannot help noticing it; and sooner or later, their information gets out.

On March 23, 1938, Senator Byrd of Virginia was giving one of his well-known economy speeches. At the bottom of the first column of pages 5222 in the Record comes this sentence:

"There are several thousand disbursing officers of the United States."

"There are several thousand disburing officers of the United States."

From this point on for a page, the two speeches are identical, except that Byrd used quotations from the U. S. Code while Burke merely referred to them. In one place, Byrd says "certain" and Burke read it "extreme"; and no can tell which was right.

Senators who specialize in hating the new deal really ought not to get their wires crossed that way. It is likely to start a horse laugh.

Picketing Is Upheld By California Judge

San Francisco, Cal.—Union picketing has again been upheld, this time in Superior court, by Judge C. J. Goodell, who refused an injunction applied for by the Envelope corporation against the Corrugated Fibre Products and Envelope Workers' Union No. 962. The court also refused to issue an injunction against the maintenance of the Envelope corporation on the unfair list of the San Francisco Labor Council.

It was brought out at the hearing that a strike had been called by the union, with the approval of the council, because the employer attempted to get members of the union to resign from the union and join a "company union," which the employer was helping the workers to organize in the plant. The firm had also refused to bargain with the union.

The important court victory maintains the right of a union to strike against an attempt by the employer to interfere with the membership and prospective members of a union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

A Story of Sugar

BY CECIL F. GALLOUP,
Department of Chemical Engineering.

This name applies to more than one hundred substances composed of varying proportions of carbon and water (one group of the carbohydrates). Among the most common sugars found in the world about us are: sucrose or cane sugar, dextrose or grape sugar, levulose or fruit sugar, lactose or milk sugar, and maltose or malt sugar, all varying in the quality of sweetness.

The ordinary sugar of commerce or sucrose (can sugar), as it is called, was known in India as far back as 500 A. D. and was for centuries connected with medicines. Its effectiveness in satisfying one of man's fundamental sensory wants, the sweet taste, caused it to be highly prized, and the exorbitant price which it commanded served to encourage its production.

Sugar Beet Developed

At the beginning of the eighteenth century all sugars came from the cane plantations of the tropics, and a large sugar trade had been built up between Europe and the tropical colonies. During the wars of Napoleon a blockade of European ports resulted in a scarcity of sugar with the result that Napoleon commanded work to be done on the refining of sugar from a variety of beet known to contain about one-twentieth of its weight of sugar. By careful plant breeding the sugar beet has been improved since that time so that it contains one-fifth of its weight of sugar as compared with about one-eighth for sugar cane.

The story of the development of processes for the refinement of sugar is full of failures and disappointments. Sugar is found in nature dissolved in the juices of plants along with large amounts of undesirable impurities. The problem of separating the sugar from these impurities to obtain the snow white, practically pure product that people now use has been effectively solved by the old and new technologists. Of all the industries of the world sugar refinement stands apart from them all in performing its function so extensively and so well.

Sugar From Trees

Most of the sugar (sucrose) produced in the world is obtained from the sugar cane and the sugar beet, but large amounts also come from the sap of certain varieties of date-palm and maple trees. Other sources are of little commercial importance.

The crystal size of sugar is determined by the manufacturer, large [illegible] a mixed small grain for cube sugar. Brown and yellow sugar, some having delicious flavors, are not completely refined and so contain small amounts of molasses.

Question Box

Q.—Who are the Tennessee congressmen in Washington?

A.—First district, B. Carroll Reese, of Johnson City; Second, J. Will Taylor, of LaFollette; Third, S. D. McReynolds, of Chattanooga; Fourth, J. Ridley Mitchell, of Cookeville; Fifth, Richard M. Atkinson, of Nashville; Sixth, Clarence W. Turner, of Waverly; Seventh, Herron Pearson, of Jackson; Eighth, Jere Cooper, of Dyersburg; Ninth, Walter Chandler, of Memphis.

Q.—What is the size and population of Czechoslovakia? What form of government has the country?

A.—Czechoslovakia covers an area of 54,207 square miles, about the size of the state of Illinois. It has a population of around 14,700,000 persons, which is nearly six times as much as Tennessee's. The nation is a republic, electing its president as does the United States.

U. S. LABOR WILL DEFEND DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLES, GREEN TELLS BRITAIN

Washington.—Speaking over the short wave radio under the auspices of the British Broadcasting system, William Green, president of the A. F. of L., gave British Labor his understanding of the present labor situation in America.

"In the name of the American Federation of Labor," he said, "with the united voice of its four million devoted members, I transmit to you the positive assurance that no matter what has happened in dictator-controlled countries, this great army of working men and women will never abandon their purpose to establish and maintain industrial and political democracy in the United States. We stand with the working people of the British Empire in a common cause for world decency and in defense of economic, racial, religious and political freedom."

Mr. Green laid to the CIO and to John L. Lewis by name the blame for the divided councils of American labor at this time. He said that the National Labor Relations Act was "being badly administered," but yet had "given labor a new birth of freedom." He declared that the recovery efforts of the national government were constructive; and pointed out that this country had spent the equivalent of four billion British pounds on relief.

By GEORGE L. KNAPP

Washington.—When Senator La Follette put in a resolution calling for $60,000 more for the Civil Liberties investigation, it was referred to the committee to audit and control the contingent expenses of the Senate.

Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana, immediately arose, asked and got unanimous consent to have printed in the Congressional Record and referred to the same committee four telegrams from four separate unions in his state, calling for the passage of a bill giving the Civil Liberties committee $100,000.

Which looks like a high grade of teamwork, not only on Senator Minton's part, but decidedly on the part of the unions.

The pending Wagner-Healy bill provides that all industrial goods bought by the U. S. government must be made under the collective bargaining rules laid down in the Labor Relations Act; and that work done on contract for the government must be performed under the same conditions. Labor made a strong plea for this bill at the hearings before a Senate committee, and should make a stronger plea at the hearings about due in the House.

For this bill, important enough when introduced, has become doubly important by reason of the "pump-priming" campaign of the administration, in which public works and works financed in part by public funds are expected to pull the country out of the recession.

Speaking before the Senate committee, Senator Wagner said:

"This bill is not an amendment to the Labor Relations Act. It is designed simply to make certain that the national public policy regarding collective bargaining shall be recognized and effectuated by those awarded federal contracts, loans or grants. . . .

"The bill would eliminate the instances, which have been all too frequent, when the government found itself giving aid and comfort to the very persons and corporations that were openly defying the law of the United States."

"All too frequent," indeed. For example:

The Bethlehem Steel corporation, king-pin of labor baiters, through the Bethlehem Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., has government contracts approaching $100,000,000.

The Electric Boat Co. has about $23,000,000 of Uncle Sam's contracts.

These are just samples, picked out of the hearings before the Senate committee. The Bureau of Labor Statistics is said to be compiling a complete list.

If—or rather, when—the bill passes, nearly all observers agree that the loudest and most penetrating howl will come from Henry Ford.

10,000 UNION MEMBERS ARE READING THE LABOR WORLD

Three Essentials of a Profitable Advertising Medium

1 It must reach a group of people who are ABLE to buy your goods. Craft unions represent the highest paid labor in the Chattanooga area. Readers of THE LABOR WORLD not only are ABLE to buy, but they DO BUY things they want.

2 It must have the interest of its readers, so that they will read the paper thoroughly and, therefore, are likely to SEE YOUR ADVERTISEMENT. No other publication has such intense reader interest as THE LABOR WORLD. It is the authoritative voice of Labor in Chattanooga.

3 Readers must have confidence in the paper. THE LABOR WORLD is owned and operated by the Chattanooga Central Labor Union and goes automatically to all its union members. They know that the business man who is not reliable, or is unfair to organized labor, cannot buy an advertisement in THE LABOR WORLD.

The readers, who are the owners of THE LABOR WORLD, are loyal to business men who use the paper. An advertisement establishes a background of friendliness among union people as no other publication can.

THIS BLANKETS the Labor Movement in Chattanooga—goes right to the heart of the most responsive and best buying group in this area. THE LABOR WORLD is the most effective approach to this trade. When you are in THE LABOR WORLD it is just like being introduced and sponsored by a friend of the readers.

After repeated tests, PRINTERS INK, the recognized authority on advertising media, gives this verdict: "A labor paper is a far better advertising medium than any ordinary newspaper in comparison with circulation A labor paper having 2,000 subscribers is of more value to the business man who advertises in it than the ordinary newspaper with 12,000."

International Ladies' Garment Workers To Put on Style Show At AFL Union Label Exhibition

TEN BEAUTIFUL MODELS . . . HUNDREDS OF GORGEOUS GOWNS CHIC AND THRILLING COSTUMES

One of the most spectacular features of the entertainment program of the coming A. F. of L. Union Label and Industrial Exhibition will be the mammoth style show to be sponsored and produced by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union.

Bringing ten beautiful and charming models, the sponsors of the style show will be on hand for the opening session at the Music hall, 7:00 p.m., Monday evening, May 16.

With the grace and rhythm of the trained Mannequin, these beauties from the ranks of the blondes, brunettes and red heads will don and parade alluring costumes at each session of the day, showing apparel for the latest season.

House dresses, afternoon and tea gowns, evening wraps and shimmering creations of gossamer and silk will be paraded for audience approval at this unusual entertainment schedule.

Many friends of organized labor will be rather surprised to note that this spectacular and scintillating style show event is being brought to the A. F. of L. Union Label and Industrial Exhibition by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union.

It will be remembered that President Dubinsky, the officers and members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union have constantly cooperated with the Union Label Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor in developing the union label consciousness among the wage-earners, particularly among the members of the American Federation of Women's Auxiliaries of Labor.

WAGE-HOUR BILL MAIN PROVISIONS OUTLINED

Washington.—Here are the major provisions of the wages and hours bill taken by the house of representatives through a petition signed by 218 members from the custody of the rules committee, which by a vote of 8 to 6 had refused to report a special rule enabling the house to consider the measure, and placed directly before the house for consideration not later than May 23:

A nationwide minimum rate of pay of 25 cents per hour with a provision that it shall be increased to 40 cents within a period of three years.

A maximum work week starting at 44 hours with a provision that it shall be reduced to 40 hours within a period of two years.

The measure would apply only to industries engaged in or affecting interstate commerce. The secretary of labor would designate industries falling within these categories. When the secretary of labor has declared that an industry is subject to the act, the functions of the secretary of labor have been discharged and thereafter the wage-and-hour provisions operate automatically on all employers in the industry who are engaged in commerce, with provision for review in the U. S. circuit courts of appeal of an order of the secretary on complaint of any person aggrieved by such order.

It would not apply to employes engaged in any executive, administrative, professional capacity or agriculture, nor would it affect local retailers or outside salesmen, seamen, railroad and motor vehicle employes subject to provision of the interstate commerce act, air transport employes subject to the railway labor act, and employes engaged in the taking of fish, sea foods or sponges.

There are two fundamental necessities for a happy life, namely, a useful occupation for mind and body and an outlet for unselfish affection.—Henry D. Chapin.

for Women only

CARDUI is a special medicine for the relief of some of the suffering which results from a woman's weakened condition. It has been found to make monthly periods less disagreeable, and, when its use has been kept up awhile, has helped many poorly nourished women to get more strength from their food. This medicine (pronounced "Card-u-i") has been used and recommended by women for many, many years. Find out whether it will help you by giving it a fair trial. Of course, if not benefited, consult a physician.

Pay Increase Is Won By Asbestos Workers

Chicago.—A union shop, an 8-hour day and a 40-hour week, time and one-half for overtime, Sundays and holidays, and a substantial increase in pay, were among the provisions of a contract entered into by the Johns-Manville corporation, manufacturers of asbestos products of all descriptions, and Federal Labor Union No. 19508, of Waukegan, Ill., affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The boost in pay was obtained despite a general demand by employers for a reduction in the earnings of an estimated 2,300 workers covered by the contract, which is for one year.

The Johns-Manville corporation owns and operates factories in other parts of the country and employs about 35,000 workers. The A. F. of L. is to extend its organization efforts in all plants.

Auto Plants Closed by Union Dues Collecting

Flint, Mich.—Militant tactics by the United Automobile Workers of America to force workers to pay union dues resulted in the temporary closing of Fisher Body plant No. 1 and the final assembly line of the Buick Motor company, subsidiaries of General Motors corporation. Union pickets turned away all workers who tried to enter the plants unless they could show a paid-up union receipt.

Company officials, claiming the agreement with the union had been observed, said the picketing tactics to enforce dues payment was deliberately planned "to obtain a closed shop by coercive methods," and added that "men can work in our plants whether they belong to a union or not." Union officials countered with the charge that the auto plants were closed "in an attempt to club down the union."

Uncle Sam has boosted his naval outlay, Britain and France have levied tremendous taxes for defense, even Scandinavian countries are arming. All because of the devilments of two international gangsters, each of whom has earned a hanging a day for years.

ILO TO CONSIDER WORLD REGULATION OF WORK HOURS IN MOTOR TRANSPORT

Geneva. — Advisability of adopting international regulations governing hours of work of bus and truck drivers will be considered by the International Labor conference, meeting here in June.

Proposals to be taken up include:

Limitation of the period of uninterrupted driving;

Limitation of total normal driving time;

Limitation of normal weekly hours of duty; and

The fixing in each country of the maximum spread of the working day, through stipulation of the number of hours permissible between the beginning and the end of duty.

Since 1926 a number of appeals have been made to the International Labor organization for international regulations governing motor transport. It has been pointed out that while this industry has grown up largely since the World war, it is already in many countries a serious competitor of the railroads.

But while, almost everywhere, the railroads are subject to strict regulation, such legislation as has been adopted for motor transport is largely in the experimental stage. The result is that working conditions in motor transport are far below those on railroads.

In the United States alone, National Safety council estimates show, fatigue is responsible for about 20,000 road accidents per year. Trade union officials point out that such accidents may have very serious consequences for the driver and may prejudice his chances of future employment.

Reds Now Seek to "Help" Democrats Name Candidates in Indiana Primary

By JOSEPH A. WISE

Chicago. — Following their disastrous foray into Illinois politics which came to a climax April 12, the national leaders of the Communist party have hightailed it to the banks of the Wabash, where they have gone to "help" the Democrats to select a list of candidates in the Sixth (Terre Haute) Indiana Congressional district at the primary election to be held May 3.

The Communist leaders are as funny as a cageful of monkeys in their latest chosen role as "helpers." They have abandoned the idea of putting a ticket of their own in the field, and are now butting in on Democratic and Republican primary elections, with the major part of their efforts being given to the Democrats.

Communist "Help" Fatal.

"The fellow who gets the "help" of the Communists needs lots of sympathy," said a prominent Chicago trade unionist the other day. "The Red kiss is the kiss of death," he said.

While I was in Indianapolis a few weeks ago I asked several trade union acquaintances what the Communists were doing in Indiana.

"Oh, they are not bothering us any," was the answer. "We scarcely ever hear anything out of them."

Well, they certainly are in the important trade union center of Terre Haute and the highly industrialized surrounding territory now, and they have a daily newspaper to give them support.

Publicity Reds' Strong Point.

Publicity is the backbone of the Communist movement. Without it they would not be able to organize a good dog fight. Their three daily newspapers—one at New York, another at Chicago and the third one at San Francisco — together with their scores of lesser publications, give the Communists mediums through which to exploit the thoughts of W. Z. Foster, Earl Browder, Joseph Stalin and the other leaders of the party of world

A. F. L. SHOE WORKERS WIN

NEW YORK CITY.—The National Labor Relations Board has announced certification of the Boot and Shoe Workers Union, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, as the erclusive collective bargaining agency for employes at the Novelty Slipper Company, New York City, following an election held February 27, 1938, which gave the Boot and Shoe Workers 104 votes as against 79 for the United Shoe Workers of America of the CIO.

IMPUDENT SUGGESTING

(From California Oil Worker, Long Beach.)

Lewis Gilbert, a minority stockholder of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, put Charlie Schwab on a hot spot at the annual meeting held at Wilmington, Del., recently. Mr. Gilbert fearlessly approached the mighty steel master and suggested that Mr. Schwab, who has amassed an immense fortune and world-fame as the first big executive to receive a salary of $1,000,000 a year, serve without pay during the depression. Charlie grew splutteringly indignant and squelched all the dissenters.

Here is a new idea and it will doubtless embarrass many stuffed shirts in the days to come. Some people who like the idea of wage reductions have never before been told that a good place to start the slash would be on all salaries over $10,000 a year. Voluntary action of that sort would indicate good faith in the movement. Hundred thousand dollar men feel the pinch of poverty if they are reduced a dime below that figure, if one may judge from their actions.

CY KOLOGY, EDITOR

The sales tax, it seems, is always with us.

Pronounced dead many times, it is in reality very much alive and flourishing in various guises.

A general national sales tax has thus far been successfully opposed by labor and other forces. But the sales tax idea has sneaked in piecemeal by back and side doors and annually takes an enormous toll of money from the masses.

Special sales taxes do the dirty work.

Aside from these, some 23 states have sales taxes on many kinds of products, including food and other necessities in some states.

The gasoline tax is universal and has been so long with us people that we take it as a matter of course and never think of it as a sales tax.

But a sales tax it is and how!

* * *

Then there are other taxes, mostly of the state species, punitive and regulatory, and which add to the wage earner's burden.

Such as the heavy tax on chain stores, often frankly discriminatory and regulatory, though with an alleged social purpose.

Taxes of this kind, akin to the sales tax, tend to increase the cost of living and hit employment, much of it growing unio.. employment.

Labor is beginning to look askance at this kind of taxation, as a survey by the Florida Federation of Labor is revealing.

A general sales tax has recently gone into effect there and the people don't like it.

Before it became a law, there were big popular demonstrations against it. But the city council put it across.

Agitation against the tax is continuing, with the Philadelphia Record taking a leading part in the fight to end it.

Other cities have the sales tax.

New York has had it for years, for the benefit of the unemployed.

Imposed as an emergency measure, the tax has lasted because the emergency has lasted.

"Emergency" has been and still is, the excuse for continuing a lot of unpopular things.

Looks as if the sales tax had created an "emergency" calling for labor action.

Certainly if labor doesn't want the sales tax, it had better bestir itself.

As said before, it is coming in by the back door and side doors, creeping in whenever it sees a chance.

Something like the Federal judiciary, which Thomas Jefferson said was always on the march to take in more territory, or words to that effect.

So the sales tax, going under different names, seeks to enlarge its power and dominions and dig its hand deeper and deeper into the pockets of the people.

Peacetime Heroes

By DR. CHARLES STELZLE,
Executive Director, Good Neighbor League.

For millions of years the forces of nature have been working to create the products which constitute the domains of King Coal and the Barons of other Minerals. To capture these products and put them to practical use requires the greatest army of wage earners employed in any single American industry.

Light, heat, power, and manufacture are dependent upon them. Without their use our modern civilization would practically vanish. But in order to secure these products many of the wage earners sacrifice their lives or are seriously injured. In coal mines alone an average of over 2,000 workers are killed annually and for every death there are 14 accidents, or about 28,000 per year. These figures indicate the average over a long period of years. The maning industry is the most hazardous of any industry of magnitude.

It is gratifying, therefore, that through leaders in the Bureau of Mines of the Department of the Interior of our government, and their associates, the Joseph A. Holmes Safety Association—named in honor of the first director of the Bureau of Mines—has been working to reduce the terrible loss of life in the mining industry, and to honor those workers who have themselves rendered conspicuous service in this direction.

At the recent annual meeting of the association 13 medals and 32 certificates of merit were awarded to employes in the mineral and allied industries who had helped to save other workers from disaster. Also, for outstanding records in safety achievement 65 mining companies or other organizations of the mineral industries were awarded certificates of honor, and 45 certificates of honor were given to individuals for notable safety records.

These awards carry with them great prestige and are highly prized. To those mining concerns which are guilty of lagging in safety of operation, they stand as a rebuke—or, let us hope, as a stimulus to provide methods of safeguarding the lives of the workers. It is a dishonor to any industry to have its workers suffer the loss of their limbs, to have their eyes shot out, to have their backs broken, and to have their bodies mashed into pulp, because the directors are unwilling to furnish safety methods, for fear of reducing profits.

All honor to the heroes whose deeds of valor were performed when profit was no consideration—when the only motive was the saving of the life of a fellow worker. Those heroes have fulfilled the promise of the Great Teacher—who came that men might have life—when He declared that "he that saveth his life shall lose it, and he that loseth his life for my sake, shall find it."

Q.—Are persons still able to sign up for the old-age pension?

A.—Yes. There is no limit to the time persons can apply for a pension. However, each county is not allowed to give over a certain quota, and late applicants may have to wait their turn before receiving a pension.

* * *

Q.—What causes dew to form?

A.—Water vapor in the air condenses and forms dew when the air is cooled below the point of complete saturation. Warm air holds much more water vapor than cold air, and the cooling raises the relative humidity above 100 per cent and forces the air to give up the surplus water.

A. F. of L. Executive Council Studies Recovery Program

Washington.—Consideration of a program for increasing employment and restoring industrial activity was one of the big matters before the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, as it met in spring session at A. F. of L. headquarters here. Legislative proposals and the administration's recovery program were also due for consideration.

With campaigns for local and congressional elections under way, the council planned to take up means of strengthening the A. F. of L. non-partisan political policy. Non-partisan committees have been organized already in many cities to make effective the Federation's traditional policy of supporting its friends and defeating its enemies at the polls.

Advisability of further action against suspended unions affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization was on the council's program of business. At its winter meeting, the council revoked the charters of three of the suspended unions — the United Mine Workers of America, the Federation of Flat Glass Workers of America and the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers. At the end of the first day's session, President William Green expressed the opinion that there was no hope for peace with the CIO.

As President Green has resigned as a member of the United Mine Workers, reporters asked him what union he had joined. He replied he was a member in good standing of an A. F. of L. union and added: "Further dependent sayeth not."

Sheep Shearers Strike For Closed Shop Pact

Willows, Calif.—The A. F. of L. Sheep Shearers' Union, several hundred of whose members went on strike recently on many California ranches, declared that it is prepared for a "fight to the finish."

Several hundred men came out in the San Joaquin valley alone, with over 100 here voting to join the strike. It is contended by the union that sheep raisers at Sacramento, Woodland and Dixon had "locked out" union shearers. At Bakersfield, the Kern County Wool Growers' association voted to employ non-union shearers, it was announced, if necessary to get the wool from 100,000 unshorn sheep. Two hundred shearers went on strike in Kern county. The Butte-Glenn County Growers' association promptly called a meeting to discuss the situation.

The principle union demands were a closed shop contract, providing for a uniform wage scale and permission to place union label on wool bags.

With all the splendid work of curbing tuberculosis which had been done in the last 40 years, 56 colleges which make tests for this disease on all who enter find that one-third of these new students have some degree and form of tuberculosis infection. The fight for health is a war that never ends.

Union label buying is the only method for the organized worker to uphold his own wages and also the wages of all American workers.

Seattle Court Issues Broad Picketing Rule

Seattle, Wash.—Picketing of an establishment that has no employes, but is operated by a partnership, was upheld in the King county superior court here, in a decision rendered by Judge H. C. Todd. The case is believed to be the first of its kind.

When a union contract expired last October 1, between Boot and Shoe Workers' Union No. 437 and the Sewart Shoe Repair Shop, the shop owner refused to sign a new agreement and announced that he had taken the union member formerly employed into the business as a partner.

After going through the customary processes of attempted negotiations and reference to the Seattle Central Labor Council, pickets were established, and a court action to prevent the picketing followed. The partners contended there was no labor dispute because no employes were involved.

The court found from the evidence that "partners" were working from 10 to 14 hours a day and the former union members between $12.50 and $15 a week, or less than half the union wage for an eight-hour day. The court held that there was a labor dispute and that the partnership agreement was a subterfuge to accomplish what the union termed a "sweatshop" condition.

The court declared it legal to picket the establishment by displaying banners declaring that the Stewart Shoe Repair Shop is "unfair to organized labor, the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union and the Central Labor Council." While a small case in the number of people involved, it gains wide importance due to the important principle which the King county superior court upheld.

Portland Dock Workers Favor A. F. of L. Union

Portland, Ore.—The most spectacular of the CIO attempts to raid the A. F. of L. International Longshoremen's Union here has been decisively beaten by the men themselves, who voted five to one in favor of remaining in I. L. A. supercargoes and checkers' locals.

Of the reported total of 154 members of I. L. A. union 38-78A, 142 cast their ballots in the recent 60-day open referendum on the question of affiliating with the CIO or remaining with the A. F. of L. and only 24 for CIO affiliation.

Following this decisive victory, the union unanimously passed a motion precluding any further CIO discussion, thus completely rebuffing the few individuals who had attempted the "raid" on the I. L. A. local.

Higher Wage Pacts Won By Little Rock Bakers

Little Rock, Ark. — Wage increases ranging from 15 to 50 per cent., with a closed shop and standard union conditions, were won by Bakers' Local Union No. 422 here.

Union closed shop contracts were recently signed with the Continental Baking company and the American Bakery, while a tentative agreement was reached with the Colonial Baking company, where complete unionization was expected promptly.

The union contracts establish the 44-hour maximum and 40-hour minimum workweek, with time and a third for overtime, and provide for mutual protection.

There may be human joy in doing good with definite purpose, but they who do good expecting nothing in return know a joy that is divine.—Maeterlinck.

Big Rayon Company Moves to Escape Health Law, Governor Charges

Easton, Pa.—Gov. Earle charged the American Viscose Co., big rayon manufacturer, with building its new plant in Virginia, not to escape high taxes, but to get away from the new occupational disease law of Pennsylvania.

"The company's state taxes are too low to pay for the relief of the human wreckage which it discharges from its payrolls," he declared.

Quoting investigators, Gov. Earle said, in substance, that the fumes from viscose are seriously damaging to health in general, and make many workers blind. The company has to maintain a "labor pool" much larger than its regular working force, because its people cannot work steadily. The Viscose is purely an English company, and came to Pennsylvania to get away from the factory health laws of England. Now it is moving to Virginia to get away from the revised laws of Pennsylvania.

He stated that on an original investment of $250,000, the company has earned net profits of $300,000,000.

Thanks to Louise Tinker, I have at last found out where you can get children's shoes with the union label. She ran across some in the basement at Miller Bros. The two boys will be pleased—they have been trying to find union-made shoes since they could talk.

Just can't wait to tell you about my new find. Grant-Patten is putting out a new product that gets my okeh. It is an ice-cream mixture that you buy in a milk bottle. It costs 15 cents a pint and all you have to do is to add the flavoring, whip it up and put it in the tray to freeze. It makes almost a quart of the best ice-cream, and it is just no trouble at all. The man (union, of course) who delivers our milk told me that it just went on the market Saturday and is going like hot-cakes. Think of the convenience of having a good dessert in the refrigerator whenever you need it these hot summer days.

Comment On World Events

Economies in the use of coal, combined with increasing displacement of mining labor by machinery, are creating a problem of steadily growing seriousness for coal miners throughout the world.

Light on the coal economy phase of the problem is given in a report on the world coal industry prepared by the International Labor Office. The report emphasizes that since the end of the World war, fuel economies have enabled the world's industries to produce progressively greater quantities of goods and services with a total coal consumption almost unchanged.

The report analyzes statistics for three of the most important industrial countries — the United States, Great Britain and Japan—and points out that the analyses disclose "an unbroken movement throughout the post-war years toward higher levels of fuel efficiency in the consumption of coal." This movement, it notes, continued from 1929 to 1936.

As regards the United States, the report shows that from 1902 to 1929 thermo-electric public utilities multiplied their output of energy sixteenfold, while only quadrupling their intake of coal; and that from 1917 to 1927, manufacturing industries increased production by one-fourth, but decreased the consumption of energy (mainly coal, by one-third.

The report also notes that from 1914 to 1929, railroads in the United States tended to operate a larger number of ton-miles with ever smaller tonnages of locomotive fuel; while from 1904 to 1929 blast furnaces, steel works and rolling mills were steadily obtaining a larger sum of output with a lesser consumption of coal and coke.

"In short," it says, "the average fuel efficiency of industrial manufacturing and railroad transportation had risen between 1909 and 1929 by approximately 33 per cent."

As regards Great Britain, it says, fuel efficiency in blast furnaces ... per cent. and during the last ... years alone more than 12 per cent: and it cites important economies in fuel consumption by steam railways.

As regards Japan, the report notes a considerable advancement in fuel economies in recent years. It points out, for example, that coal consumption at a steam-power plant was reduced by one-third between 1914 and 1932, and that between 1920 and 1932, consumption of fuel by railway locomotives showed a saving of about 40 per cent. A similar saving in fuel consumption in the steel industry also is noted.

Spokane Labor Settles Hotel Laundry Dispute

Spokane, Wash.—When attorneys for the Spokane hotel agreed in Superior court here that the laundry would not be operated in the future union representatives agreed that pickets would be withdrawn. Thus the union won the basic point of the seven-month-old controversy, in that an operating laundry must have an agreement with the Laundry Workers' Union.

An application for an injunction and a damage action filed by the hotel management were dismissed and similar action was anticipated in the case of the Davenport hotel. With a final working out of an arrangement satisfactory to labor, it was hoped that Spokane will soon have a major hotel available for conventions and similar gatherings of organized labor.

A. F. OF L. UNION PICKETS N. Y. GIANTS' GAME

New York. — The first baseball game of the season between the New York Giants and the Boston Bees, at the Polo Grounds here, struck a snag in the form of a profound labor trouble involving the notorious Burns Detective agency. Hours before the game opened the special police who have policed the grounds for years surrounded the park with a picket line that would evidently have paraded all day had it not been for the arrival of Mayor LaGuardia whose function it was to throw the first ball. Aware of the mayor's disinclination to break through the picket lines, the guards withdrew for twenty minutes to permit him to enter the stadium. After he entered the picketing was resumed.

According to both William Haggerty, business agent of the Ball Parks, Stadiums and Sporting Centers Employes Union, Local 90, of the A. F. of L. Building Service Employes Union, and Leo J. Bundy, vice-president of the National Exhibition company, owners of the Giants, the trouble arose from the fact that the company recently contracted with the William J. Burns Detective agency to supply the special police for the stadium, and that the erstwhile guards, being union members, refused to join the Burns agency because of its strike-breaking activities.

In explaining the company's position, Mr. Bundy said the Burns outfit supplies the uniforms for the guards and takes care of social security accounts. He stated that last year the company had to "collect this tax daily from the guards and employ a staff of bookkeepers to keep the records straight."

For the union, Mr. Haggerty pointed out that the guards were not seeking any change in wages, hours or work conditions. "All we want is to be organized," he said. He stated that the case had been referred to the State Labor Relations Board.

Phoenix Retail Clerks Sign Up Three Stores

Phoenix, Ariz. — The Retail Clerks' Union here reports excellent progress in its campaign to organize food store workers, union agreements having already been secured with three important concerns.

The well-known Union Store Card now adorns the Market Wholesale Grocery, O'Conner's Grocery and the A. & B. Food Market, and others are expected to be displayed soon, as additional stores are signed up.

Hostile Interests Use "Secret" Ballot To Reveal Friends of Organized Labor

A ballot containing a series of plainly hostile questions was circulated in Kern county a short time ago among organized workers and others. Each person getting these ballots was told that his vote would be entirely secret; that no one would know how he voted. The Union Labor Journal got suspicious, and found—

This may be called lie No. 1; and a meaner trick to catch workers at a disadvantage it would be hard to find. But the Los Angeles Times, in a recent issue, published a story claiming that a cross section poll of Kern county showed from 88 to 97 per cent. of the people opposed to unions. Yet in the first paragraph of this very story, the Times says:

"Bakersfield and Kern County, WHERE UNION LEADERS LONG HAVE EXERCISED POWER."

Obviously, if union leaders have power in Kern county, the people are not and cannot be from 88 to 97 per cent. opposed to unions.

The "cross section poll" was conducted with these secretly marked ballots. All were sent through the mails, so the sender could keep a list and know just who got each number. The ballot itself is phrased to be hostile to unions, and the accompanying letter is equally so.

There is no man that teaches us to be gentle better than Joseph Addison; gentle in our bearing through life, gentle and courteous to our neighbor, gentle in dealing with his follies and weaknesses, gentle in treating his oppistion, deferential to the old, and kindly to the poor.—Thackeray.

Brewery Workers Sign Up Plant In Lenoir City

First Out-of-Town Closed Shop Secured by Local 79 Through Erskine Fisher

Erskine Fisher, secretary for Local 79, Brewery Workers, reported to The Labor World this week that he had visited a bottling plant in Lenoir City, Tennessee, and was back with a closed shop agreement.

According to Mr. Fisher, this is the first signed contract secured from an out-of-town distributor and bottler whose products are sold here. Just as soon as a new drink on the streets of Chattanooga, local 79 gets busy to keep up its one hundred per cent. record for strong Chattanooga union as far as its craft is concerned.

Chatta. Stamping and Enamel Co. Signs With AFL

Announcement is made that the 9-day strike in the plant of the Chattanooga Stamping and Enameling Company has been settled. An agreement was signed between the company and the local union of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers, providing for a union shop, increased wages and improved working conditions. Representative Everhart assisted the local union members in negotiations.

Q.—What is the meaning of "catch-crop"?

A.—A crop grown between the rows of other crops, as after early potatoes and before winter wheat. Until 1883 all cover-crops were called catch-crops, but now there is a distinction.

Union labor employers of Cincinnati were all represented, of course; though no one could have guessed that they would be so very well represented. But that was just a start. This house-cleaning business is something else. For just about one day our house looks clean. All this week we have been taking out and throwing away and washing woodwork and waxing floors.

Did get one nice surprise when we bought one of those indirect student lamps and found out that the globe had a nice big Flint Glass Workers' union label on it.

Had those basement steps fixed, too. John Bowman and Mr. Lonnie Carpenter did that for us. It's a good thing they were fixed, too, because we have had to jump the last four steps for three months.

Comment On World Events

Economies in the use of coal, combined with increasing displacement of mining labor by machinery, are creating a problem of steadily growing seriousness for coal miners throughout the world.

Light on the coal economy phase of the problem is given in a report on the world coal industry prepared by the International Labor Office. The report emphasizes that since the end of the World war, fuel economies have enabled the world's industries to produce progressively greater quantities of goods and services with a total coal consumption almost unchanged.

The report analyzes statistics for three of the most important industrial countries — the United States, Great Britain and Japan—and points out that the analyses disclose "an unbroken movement throughout the post-war years toward higher levels of fuel efficiency in the consumption of coal." This movement, it notes, continued from 1929 to 1936.

As regards the United States, the report shows that from 1902 to 1929 thermo-electric public utilities multiplied their output of energy sixteenfold, while only quadrupling their intake of coal; and that from 1917 to 1927, manufacturing industries increased production by one-fourth, but decreased the consumption of energy (mainly coal, by one-third.

The report also notes that from 1914 to 1929, railroads in the United States tended to operate a larger number of ton-miles with ever smaller tonnages of locomotive fuel; while from 1904 to 1929 blast furnaces, steel works and rolling mills were steadily obtaining a larger sum of output with a lesser consumption of coal and coke.

"In short," it says, "the average fuel efficiency of industrial manufacturing and railroad transportation had risen between 1909 and 1929 by approximately 33 per cent."

Spokane Labor Settles Hotel Laundry Dispute

Spokane, Wash.—When attorneys for the Spokane hotel agreed in Superior court here that the laundry would not be operated in the future union representatives agreed that pickets would be withdrawn. Thus the union won the basic point of the seven-month-old controversy, in that an operating laundry must have an agreement with the Laundry Workers' Union.

An application for an injunction and a damage action filed by the hotel management were dismissed and similar action was anticipated in the case of the Davenport hotel. With a final working out of an arrangement satisfactory to labor, it was hoped that Spokane will soon have a major hotel available for conventions and similar gatherings of organized labor.

New York. — The first baseball game of the season between the New York Giants and the Boston Bees, at the Polo Grounds here, struck a snag in the form of a profound labor trouble involving the notorious Burns Detective agency. Hours before the game opened the special police who have policed the grounds for years surrounded the park with a picket line that would evidently have paraded all day had it not been for the arrival of Mayor LaGuardia whose function it was to throw the first ball. Aware of the mayor's disinclination to break through the picket lines, the guards withdrew for twenty minutes to permit him to enter the stadium. After he entered the picketing was resumed.

According to both William Haggerty, business agent of the Ball Parks, Stadiums and Sporting Centers Employes Union, Local 90, of the A. F. of L. Building Service Employes Union, and Leo J. Bundy, vice-president of the National Exhibition company, owners of the Giants, the trouble arose from the fact that the company recently contracted with the William J. Burns Detective agency to supply the special police for the stadium, and that the erstwhile guards, being union members, refused to join the Burns agency because of its strike-breaking activities.

In explaining the company's position, Mr. Bundy said the Burns outfit supplies the uniforms for the guards and takes care of social security accounts. He stated that last year the company had to "collect this tax daily from the guards and employ a staff of bookkeepers to keep the records straight."

For the union, Mr. Haggerty pointed out that the guards were not seeking any change in wages, hours or work conditions. "All we want is to be organized," he said. He stated that the case had been referred to the State Labor Relations Board.

Phoenix Retail Clerks Sign Up Three Stores

Phoenix, Ariz. — The Retail Clerks' Union here reports excellent progress in its campaign to organize food store workers, union agreements having already been secured with three important concerns.

The well-known Union Store Card now adorns the Market Wholesale Grocery, O'Conner's Grocery and the A. & B. Food Market, and others are expected to be displayed soon, as additional stores are signed up.

Hostile Interests Use "Secret" Ballot To Reveal Friends of Organized Labor

A ballot containing a series of plainly hostile questions was circulated in Kern county a short time ago among organized workers and others Each person getting these ballots was told that his vote would be entirely secret; that no one would know how he voted. The Union Labor Journal got suspicious, and found—

This may be called lie No. 1; and a meaner trick to catch workers at a disadvantage it would be hard to find. But the Los Angeles Times, in a recent issue, published a story claiming that a cross section poll of Kern county showed from 88 to 97 per cent. of the people opposed to unions. Yet in the first paragraph of this very story, the Times says:

"Bakersfield and Kern County, WHERE UNION LEADERS LONG HAVE EXERCISED POWER."

Obviously, if union leaders have power in Kern county, the people are not and cannot be from 88 to 97 per cent. opposed to unions.

The "cross section poll" was conducted with these secretly marked ballots. All were sent through the mails, so the sender could keep a list and know just who got each number. The ballot itself is phrased to be hostile to unions, and the accompanying letter is equally so.

Brewery Workers Sign Up Plant In Lenoir City

First Out-of-Town Closed Shop Secured by Local 79 Through Erskine Fisher

Erskine Fisher, secretary for Local 79, Brewery Workers, reported to The Labor World this week that he had visited a bottling plant in Lenoir City, Tennessee, and came back with a closed shop agreement.

According to Mr. Fisher, this is the first signed contract secured from an out-of-town distributor and bottler whose products are sold here. Just as soon as a new drink hits the streets of Chattanooga, Local 79 gets busy to keep up its one hundred per cent. record for keeping Chattanooga union as far as its craft is concerned.

Chatta. Stamping and Enamel Co. Signs With AFL

Announcement is made that the 10-day strike in the plant of the Chattanooga Stamping and Engraving Company has been settled. An agreement was signed between the company and the local union of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers, providing for a union shop, increased wages and improved working conditions. Representative Everhart assisted the local union members in negotiations.

How Do You Like This Size Labor World?

The Labor World is constantly on the watch for opportunity to give a better service to its readers and to its advertisers. Due to the many compliments on the make-up of our Spring Edition issued May 6, we have decided to try out a regular weekly tabloid size paper.

We believe that this form of paper will give the advertiser a better display position, making it more unlikely to accidentally "bury" an advertisement in a larger page.

On the other hand, a smaller size page makes it easier to read and to handle. We ask that criticism for or against the new make-up be given us so that we can be governed accordingly.

BIG UNION LABEL EXHIBITION IS GREAT, SMASHING SUCCESS

UNIONS AND FAIR EMPLOYERS COOPERATE TO DRAMATIZE LABEL BUYING

Exhibits Make Plain Benefits of Purchasing Union Products and Show "Buy Union Label" Is Easy Rule to Follow in Wide and Varied Field of Goods and Services.

Cincinnati.—The A. F. of L. Union Label and Industrial Exhibition here, first national exhibition of its kind, was a tremendous success. Opening on May 16, it ran through the week, delighting exhibitors by the size and interest of the audiences which came to see and delighting visitors by the quality and quantity of the exhibits.

I. M. Ornburn, the real daddy of the show, was greatly pleased—though the major part of his mind was already occupied with plans to make the next show even better.

It was a cooperative show; the members and officers of American Federation of Labor unions cooperating with business firms and corporations which employ members of the A. F. of L. unions. As William Green put it:

"Members of labor unions are always glad to cooperate with business men who recognize the rights of workers to organize and who adhere to the principles of collective bargaining. Those fair-minded and highest standard manufacturers deserve and should be awarded the billions of union earned dollars which the families of these A. F. of L. type unions annually spend for their living requirements.

"Organized labor wants to reciprocate."

Union Plants Well Represented.

Union labor employers of Cincinnati were all represented, of course; though no one could have guessed that they would be so very well represented. But that was just a start. Brown and Williamson were there, and Axton Fisher, both from Louisville, to show that a union man need not buy non-union tobacco; but can always get a union smoke. Carnation, of Milwaukee—"milk from contented cows," made it clear that you do not need to patronize anti-union industries to feed the baby.

Outstanding exhibits were presented by many union groups, including the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America; Journeymen Barbers' International union; Retail Clerks' International Protective association; Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union of North America; Associates for Government Service; Allied Printing Trades association; International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen

National Conference Urged to End Depression

Atlantic City, N. J.—Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, called on President Roosevelt to call a national conference "to lead the nation out of the economic wilderness in which it finds itself."

Murray's address was delivered before the biennial convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. The conference which he called for was to be composed of the leaders of business, labor, finance, agriculture and government; and it should be held in the open where the cards could be put on the table.

"The trade unions have saved America," declared Murray. "Had it not been for them, our wage earners would be down in the mire of economic degradation. But we are confronted by a serious situation. There are eleven million people out of work. If they remain long in that status, they will constitute a menace to our free institutions.

"The solution of this problem is one that calls for absolute unselfishness by every decent force in the United States."

Murray said that in recent months, he had met industrialists who truly represented their industries, and who thought of the welfare of the nation as a whole.

Q.—What is a "coup d'etat?"

A.—It is a French phrase usually used in indicating the sudden overthrow of a government by surprise and force.

Penn. Headquarters Battle Won by AFL

Judge Hargest Orders Phillips, State C. I. O. Head, to Vacate Harrisburg Building.

Harrisburg, Pa. — A court order issued here gave the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor, A. F. of L. affiliate, possession of the headquarters building which the former State Federation of Labor officials refused to surrender when President Green, of the A. F. of L., revoked the charter of the State Federation because of the refusal of its officers to drop C. I. O. unions from affiliation.

At the conclusion of the case here brought by the American Federation of Labor to oust the C. I. O. groups from the headquarters, President Judge William M. Hargest, of Dauphin County Court, restrained John A. Phillips, former president of the State Federation of Labor and now president of the C. I. O. Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council, from continuing in possession of the buildings and withholding possession of it from the State Federation of Labor "until further order of the court."

In issuing the restraining order Judge Hargest said that Phillips after the old State Federation of Labor charter was revoked because its officials refused to oust C. I. O. unions, "organized a new and hostile organization, of which he became president, and now attempts to divert the property to the uses and purposes of his new organization."

Q.—Did Betsy Ross design the Stars and Stripes?

The contract was secured from management of WDOD through a series of friendly conferences, assisted by Representative Gordon Freeman, of the IBEW.

Although one of the youngster locals in the community, Local 662 has performed like veterans, and it deserves the congratulations of the labor movement.

SLUM CLEARANCE

The proposed housing project for Chattanooga, which will amount to two or three million dollars, will be a fine thing from several angles. First, it will create a needed source of employment, both in actual construction as well as the manufacturing of material and supplies which will go into the making of the new homes or apartments. Purchasing of these supplies would also pep up the business of our material and supply houses.

Secondly, a badly run-down section of our city might be eliminated and replaced by nice-looking property which might be rented by citizens at a reasonable figure.

However, we fear that in the enthusiasm for clearing of slums we are overlooking the cause of slums. Replacing old shacks with nice new homes will not eliminate slums. It will only remove the slum from that particular point, and might cause another slum to spring up at another location.

Present dwellers in slums live there from necessity. They do not buy or rent nice liveable homes today for the reason that they do not receive wages that can afford such desirable homes.

The only way in the world to eliminate such housing conditions is by helping such tenants to improve their earning power. When that is done, slums will disappear, except for that minute percentage of humanity who never work at any time, and who drift back to the bottom even with the Lord sending manna from heaven to them.

The thirty or forty dollar per month family cannot rent these pretty and modern new homes, no matter if given to them. They could not even furnish them and keep them up on those wages.

We approve of the project that would replace practically worthless property into valuable, attractive homes that could be rented for a very low figure. Let's also help the present tenants of our slums by allowing them to secure a wage in whatever they may be employed that would allow them to live in these homes.

It seems that the only way to help them is for them to first help themselves by organizing into unions, and thereupon notify their employers that two to ten dollars per week is not enough for anyone to live on.

Do not try to cure a boil by covering it with a salve that hides the inflamed sore from outside view. Purify the blood stream and the boil will go away forever. Purify the wage blood stream, and slums will disappear.

Points of View Picked Up From Various Sources
CY KOLOGY, EDITOR

The "economic recession" — so called for politeness sake — has "probably reached the bottom," Secretary of Commerce Roper thinks.

Well, here's hoping.

If the bottom has really been reached, then the next move must be upward.

If the bottom has not been reached, lower levels are to come.

Secretary Roper is cagey on the future.

He says there has been as yet no substantial up-grade and that a survey of business conditions merely indicates there has been relative stability in industrial activity in the four months of this year ending in April, in contrast to the precipitous decline in the last four months of 1937.

It called the recovery bill for short.

Recovery bill aims to get business and industry going by spending lending money.

In other words, "pump priming."

Seemed to be the only thing they could do in the circumstances, though there are grave misgivings about the success of the move.

Last pump priming spree didn't bring lasting recovery.

Lots of people think there was no real recovery at all, only the appearance of it.

* * *

One thing seems certain as regards the present situation.

The pending recovery program is probably the last possible experiment of the kind the nation can try in this generation.

If it doesn't work, we shall have to face a "completely new orientation in our thinking and actions," one commentator says.

That is a fancy way of saying we shall have to adopt a different course of action and way of looking at things economic.

That might mean one of two things:

Returning to the old way of letting the economic system alone, with a minimum of government control or interference.

Setting up a system of production and distribution in which profit is subordinate to use.

Nation may have to make a choice before many years have passed.

Agencies of Russia's communist government send out glowing accounts of cultural, recreational and other things being done for the people.

Such as a description of how one of the most feared and dreaded of the old Czarist prisons, once noted for its dungeons, torture chamber and execution gallery, has been converted into an art museum.

But the government agencies don't say anything about converting the present-day prisons, with their torture and execution chambers.

Those are reserved for enemies, real and imagined, of the Russian dictatorship.

The dictatorship is getting on dangerous ground when it begins to talk about prisons.

It might be asked in what respect its prisons, and what they signify, are any advance over those of the days of the tyrannical rule of the Czars.

BAKERY WORKERS END CINCINNATI STRIKE

Cincinnati. — Signing of a compromise agreement ended a seven-weeks' strike of warehouse and manufacturing employes of the Kroger Grocery and Baking Co. here. Almost 400 employes returned to work.

The agreement, ratified by an overwhelming vote at a meeting of the Candy and Food Workers Union, an affiliate of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union, provided continuation of wages and terms in an expired contract, company and union officials said.

200 Witnesses Guarded for Harlan Trial in Labor Act Criminal Case

Eight Deputy Marshalls Sworn to Protect Miners from Violence in Kentucky Town—Twenty Coal Executives Named in Indictment Charging Intimidation Against Union Members.

London, Ky., May 16.—The first criminal prosecution under the National Labor Relations Act began in the Federal District Court here today with 200 witnesses called by the United States government.

The federal government charges 22 coal corporations, 24 coal mine executives and 23 former or present law enforcement officers of Harlan County with conspiring to deprive coal mine workers of their legal right to join unions and bargain collectively with mine operators to determine wages, hours and work conditions.

Charles L. Dawson, a former federal judge in this area, is chief counsel for the defense.

Following reports of attempts to intimidate government witnesses, mainly miners in Harlan County, received at Mr. McMahon's headquarters, eighty deputy marshalls were sworn in to protect the men who will swear that the coal operators waged a determined war to prevent unionization in Harlan County.

In addition, two Federal Bureau of Investigation men have been assigned to Harlan County, where most of the witnesses live, and ten F. I. B. men are on duty in and around London.

In preparing its indictment the government made use of the testimony given in Washington a year ago before Senator La Follette's Civil Liberties Committee, when several witnesses testified that they had been discharged, threatened or intimidated because of their affiliation with the United Mine Workers of America.

Following the testimony before the La Follette committee as independent investigation was ordered by Attorney General Cummings, and special agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, a department of Justice unit, spent several months in Harlan County investigating the origin, development and circumstances affecting organized labor among the coal miners and the actions of mine companies, mine officials, and Harlan County officers in connection therewith.

One of the high points in the government's indictment is the charge that former Sheriff Middleton, of Harlan County, used "the power of his office to appoint the other said law officer dependants as deputy sheriffs, thereby giving them greater authority and power to threaten, beat and kill," and that he used his office to protect his co-defendants from "legal punishment."

A. F. of L. Unions Mobilized to Promote Unionization of White Collar Workers

President Green, Praising the Union-Made Goods Show Opening at Cincinnati May 16, Says the American Federation of Labor Is Going Into Merchandising and Plans to "Deliver the Union Market to Worthy American Business Men Who Employ Members of Unions Affiliated With the A. F. of L."

Washington. — William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a statement here, declared that the Union Label and Industrial Exhibition, opening May 16 in Cincinnati, Ohio, and continuing through the week, will afford the entire nation an outstanding and concrete example of how labor is co-operating with business in promoting a larger market for goods made and services rendered by working men and women employed under the high standards secured by trade unions.

"The four million members of the American Federation of Labor," he said, "are always glad to co-operate with business men who recognize the right of workers to organize and who adhere to the principles of collective bargaining. We fully appreciate the support we receive from unionized industries and other business establishments that recognize the A. F. of L. type of unionism.

"Organized labor wants to reciprocate. Specifically, its members and their families and friends plan to do this by spending their money only with firms that have a right to display the union label — the trademark of American labor.

"The American Federation of Labor is going into the merchandising business. We propose to deliver the union market to worthy American business men who employ members of unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. We expect to educate the American public to use union-labeled products and union-conducted services."

To the Cincinnati exhibition will come delegates from the American Federation of Women's Auxiliaries of Labor, a mighty army of 2,000,000 wives, sisters, daughters and friends of A. F. of L. members; delegates from the 104 international and national unions of the A. F. of L.; delegates from its 800 central labor unions, 822 department councils, 33,000 local unions, 300,000 members of co-operating railroad unions and more than a million co-operating farmers. It is estimated that the union labor market these delegates represent spend mor than six billion dollars of union-earned money a year for living needs.

In addition to labor delegates, hundreds of representatives of union label industries will attend the exhibition. President William Green will deliver a nationally broadcast address from the exhibi-

Short Ballot Needed In Reforming County Government in State

Knoxville, May 16.—Tennessee's system of county government fails to meet the needs of 20th century society, a University of Tennessee graduate student concluded after an intensive study of the organization of Tennessee counties. The two reforms most needed today are an executive head and a "short ballot," he declared.

The graduate student, Roy Bell, of Tazewell, made the study in writing his thesis for a Master's degree, for which he is a candidate this June. He formerly was a teacher of social sciences, and became interested in county organization while gathering material for his classes, he said in the thesis.

"After a great deal of investigation and study I became impressed by the need for reform in the Tennessee county," he wrote. "Several defects were obvious: (1) the lack of any centralized authority, (2) the loose financial methods; (3) the lack of statistics and reports, and (4) the complete absence of checks and balances throughout the entire system."

The form and system of government of a Tennessee county in 1938 has as its base the same organization and functions as of 100 years ago, Mr. Bell pointed out. The system has attempted to care for a vast number of additional services without changing the basic form as established then.

"Tennessee has a great number of counties than the wealth and population can economically afford to support," the thesis continues. "The wide variation of the counties of the state in area, population, character and wealth make a uniform system of local government well nigh impossible; yet the constitution of the state imposes the same restrictions and limitations on all counties alike."

Because it is so difficult to amend the state constitution, county organization "remains static and perpetuates a system of government long out of date," he said. "Even with this handicap, progress might be accomplished if there were a more enlightened public opinion and less pressure from vested interests and local office holders interested in maintaining the status quo."

Authorities on local government in Tennessee are well agreed that the county as a political entity belongs on the self alongside the dodo bird, wrote Mr. Bell.

Arguing against the "long ballot," Mr. Bell declares that such a large number of elected officials confuses the voter and reduces the opportunity for intelligent selection, and that "many incompetents ride into office on the popularity of a state or national candidate." The use of a short ballot would tend to concentrate authority and responsibility, and would result in an improved personnel, he added.

"The long ballot renders it difficult to place responsibility on any one official, as each officer will 'pass the buck' to a colleague by offering as an excuse the lack of co-operation on the part of some allied officeholder," believes Mr. Bell. "County government can never be raised to a high level of efficiency so long as administrative and clerical offices are filled by popular election."

What Next?

It is now possible to rubberize paper for wrapping salt, cocoa and candy and similar commodities by coating it with a derivative of crepe rubber to make it moisture and vapor resistent. The paper is tasteless, odorless and has a high gloss. The rubber coating is supplied in the form of an emulsion.

BRITISH SPINSTERS ASK STATE PENSIONS AT 55

More than 10,000 of Great Britain's unmarried women recently marched on London to attend a rally of their National Spinsters' Pensions Association, which claims a membership of 125,000. The Association demands government pensions for every unmarried women at 55 years. The government has already appointed a committee to study the spinsters' pension problem. Major H. A. Proctor, a member of Parliament, who addressed the meeting, said that "over 1,000,000 men lost their lives in the World War who otherwise would have been mates and breadwinners of many of the spinsters of today."

The effort to be always cheerful, kind, considerate, and gentle, no matter what wars may be rankling in the heart, has a great influence in transforming the life. —Marden.

Tennessee Grammar Schools Neglected Says U-T Professor

Knoxville. — Tennessee's elementary schools are being sacrificed to the advancement of the high schools, declared B. O. Duggan, professor of rural education at the University of Tennessee, in a radio address recently. He was speaker on one of the university's semi-weekly broadcasts over Station WSM.

"High school education has been emphasized and glorified in Tennessee to the distinct advantage of elementary education," said Prof. Duggan. "Salaries paid high school teachers and the deference accorded them have not only attracted to the high school the best of the teachers trained in our higher institutions, but have begotten the assumption that teaching in the high school is more honorable and desirable professionally than teaching in the elementary schools."

Elementary education is "the foundation on which all succeeding education must be built;" hence the elementary teachers should be as well trained, as efficient, and as well paid as the high school teacher, Prof. Duggan said. He also believes the eight months' minimum elementary school term should be extended to nine months, the same as the high school term.

While 94 per cent. of the teachers in Tennessee high schools are college graduates, only 13 per cent. of the elementary school teachers are graduates, he pointed out, recommending that every elementary teacher be required to have a college diploma in addition to special training in the course he teaches.

Prof. Duggan also advocated special state aid for rural counties not able to provide adequately for the support of their schools. "It is manifestly unfair for a weak county to levy a property tax of 50 cents and be unable with this revenue to maintain schools for as long a session as a wealthy county with a 25 cent levy."

Organization Drive Has Already Increased to Seventy-Five the Number of Locals Affiliated With Office Employes International Council, President Weikel Says.

Washington.—As a vital part of the work undertaken by the American Federation of Labor to bring the many thousands of unorganized white collar workers into affiliation with the organized labor movement, Frank Weikel, president of the American Federation of Office Employes International Council, requested the eight hundred central labor unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor to inaugurate office employes union membership campaigns in every community.

"The American Federation of Labor is engaged in an intensive organizing drive among white collar workers employed in private industry," Mr. Weikel said in a letter addressed to the secretaries of the central labor unions.

"If such a local union is in existence in your city, the purpose of this communication is to request the co-operation and assistance of your Central Body in endeavoring to bring within the A. F. of L. those among this vast army of white collar workers who are out side the fold. Many Central Bodies, through their organization committees, have materially assisted these local unions in increasing their membership by co-operation in organizing drives and collective bargaining negotiations. This valuable assistance on the part of Central Bodies affiliated with the A. F. of L. is deeply appreciated.

"On the other hand, if no such local union of office employes affiliated with the A. F. of L. is in existence in your city, your Central Body can lend valuable assistance in initiating an organization drive at the present time.

"Many requests are coming in daily to A. F. of L. headquarters for information and literature that may be used in conducting a drive for organization of white collar workers. We have on hand at headquarters an ample supply of such literature which will be gladly sent upon request.

"The assistance of your Central Body in bringing within the fold of the A. F. of L. the unorganized whtie collar workers in your community will be of tremendous mutual benefit."

SENATE PASSES MEASURE FOR MARINE LABOR BOARD

Washington.—The Senate, without a record vote, passed an amendment to the Merchant Marine act, creating a labor board of the sea. The board provided for will be composed of three persons. It is given only feeble and uncertain powers of arbitration and mediation. It is required to make recommendations by March 1, 1940, for a permanent merchant marine policy; and when that day arrives, the board goes out of existence.

Hershey Employes Won By A. F. of L. Union

Bakery and Confectionery Workers Organizing Chocolate Company's Big Plant After C. I. O. Fiasco; Over Two Thousand Involved.

Washington. — The destructive tendencies of the Committee for Industrial Organization and the absolutely sound practices of unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor are well illustrated in the information contained in the following telegram received by President William Green, of the A. F. of L. from A. A. Myrup, secretary-treasurer of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers, International Union of America, from the union's national headquarters in Chicago:

"We are pleased to advise you that after a year's experience with irresponsible and raiding C. I. O. leadership and inexperienced company union leadership the employes of the Hershey Chocolate Company have turned to the A. F. of L. and are now being organized by our International Union. Approximately 3,000 workers are involved. Again it is proven that dual unionism and raiding tactics do not pay."

Information supplied by officials of the Bakery and Confectionery Union revealed that following a deep seated disgust with extreme company and employer paternalism but moved by a desire for self-help a number of the Hershey employes applied for a charter from the Bakers Union in February, 1937. But before the union was firmly established the C. I. O. broke into Hershey and with "high sounding phrases" and "irresponsible promises raided and captured this group of workers," whereupon the bona fide A. F. of L. Bakers Union withdrew from Hershey and left them to the C. I. O. crowd.

But after one whole year's experience with the irresponsible C. I. O. leadership and equally inexperienced company union leadership the Hershey employes eventually turned to responsible and constructive A. F. of L. leadership under the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union with the certainty that a majority of the company's employes will very soon be carrying union cards.

The developments leading up to the successful organization campaign among the Hershey Company employes have been under the direct supervision of International Secretary-Treasurer A. A. Myrup, of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union, assisted by special International Representative Charles McClosky, Business Representative of Local No. 118.

GOVERNMENT COLLECTS BIG GAS TAX

Washington. — The Federal Bureau of Public Roads reports that operators of motor vehicles paid $761,998,000 in gasoline taxes and inspection fees to the U. S. government in 1937. The taxes and fees collected in 1936 amounted to $691,420,000. Evidently the gasoline tax is one of the most capacious sources of revenue the federal government can tap.

Battle Creek Cereal Workers Wage Firm Fight Against Anti-Union Post Company

Battle Creek, Mich.—The struggle of A. F. of L. Federal Labor Union No. 20977, Cereal Workers and Allied Industries, affiliated with the National Council of Grain processors, against the anti-union policy of the Post Company here, a subsidiary of General Foods Corporation, is receiving such wholehearted support from organized labor generally that union members are confident of ultimate victory for justice for the employes of the company.

Following long continued opposition of the Post Company to enter into an agreement that would safeguard the rights of the employes, Federal Union No. 20977 announced on January 27 that it had placed the company on the unfair list and urged other A. F. of L. unions to assist them in their fight. The action of the Federal Labor Union was endorsed by the Battle Creek Federation of Labor and the National Grain Processors Council.

According to Meyer L. Lewis, president of the Grain Processors Council, General Foods Corporation, which it is alleged has manifested unwillingness to favor the unionization of its subsidiary, manufactures the following products: Post Toasties, Bakers Cocoanut, Bakers Chocolate, Minute Tapioca, Swans Down Cake Flour, Calumet Baking Powder, Log Cabin Syrup, Whole Brain Flakes, Grape Nuts, Grape Nut Flakes, Post's 40% Bran Flakes, Instant Postum, Sanka, Maxwell House Coffee, Jell-O, Certo, LaFrance, Satina, Diamond Salt, Huskies, and other products.

Mr. Lewis pointed out that the products of W. K. Kellogg, General Mills, and Ralston Purina, covering much the same field as those of General Foods Corporation and its subsidiary, the Post Company, are union-made in accordance with A. F. of L. standards.

Hours, Wages, Seniority, Sunday Closing and Exclusive Bargaining Agent Provision Are Included in Largest Blanket Union Contract Ever Negotiated in the "Eldorado State."

Positive assurance of labor peace in northern and central California's great fruit and canning industry has been realized by the blanket agreement between representatives of the American Federation of Labor Cannery Workers' Unions and the California Processors and Growers, Inc.

Negotiations which resulted in the agreement were conducted for the American Federation of Labor unions by Edward D. Vandeleur, secretary of the California State Federation of Labor; James A. Glenn, attorney for the American Federation of Labor, and a committee representing the various local unions. The California cannery operators were represented by the California Processors and Growers Association, together with J. Paul St. Sure and Harrison Robinson, Oakland attorneys.

The unions affected are A. F. of L. Cannery Workers Unions in San Francisco, northern Almeda County (Oakland), southern Alameda County (Hayward), Santa Clara County, Sacramento area, Stockton area, Yuba and Sutter Counties, including Marysville, Richmond, Benecia, Rio Vista, Modesto and Kingsburg.

The blanket agreement, covering 60,000 cannery workers, is said to be the largest union contract ever negotiated in California. It recognizes the union (which is defined as meaning "the California State Federation of Labor and the Cannery Workers union which has adopted this agreement") as exclusive bargaining agent for the employes.

Hours are limited to a basic ten-hour day with an exception that on perishable products not more than 12 hours can be worked in any one day or not more than 66 hours in any one week without the payment of time and one-half for overtime.

Time and one-half will also be paid for all work done on Sunday, except in processing peas and asparagus which are short season crops and highly perishable.

There are also provisions for equitable rules governing seniority which in the main provide for preference to older, regular employes. The seniority rules do not apply to certain key employes, with regard to whom the management retains freedom of choice.

There is also a provision for the daily rotation of piece work among the employes when such rotation will not interfere with the efficiency of operation.

The wage cut was continued as in the previous year, with the provision that a wage differential for rural plants would be given further consideration.

The new agreement, effective May 1, was signed in behalf of the California State Federation of Edward D. Vandeleur, secretary, for the unions, and by William H. Hudson, secretary, for the California Processors and Growers, Inc., in behalf of the 91 canneries affiliated therewith.

Cause and Effect of Smoke

By F. L. WILKINSON, JR.

Professor Mechanical Engineering

Webster's unabridged dictionary defines smoke as, "The gaseous products of burning materials, especially of organic materials, as wood, coal, peat, etc., made visible by carrying small particles of carbon, which finally settle as soot."

The gaseous products of combustion, such as carbon dioxide and water vapor, need not worry us in the least as far as becoming a public nuisance is concerned. Neither should the more harmful carbon monoxide gas, formed in many furnaces due to incomplete combustion, as it quickly diffuses with the air at an elevation that prevents its settling to the breathing zone.

Therefore, most gaseous vapors, or true smoke, issuing from a chimney or stack are relatively invisible and have little or no effect on the vegetation or the inhabitants of a community.

Smoke—Water Form Acid

There is one distinct exception to this statement in cases where the gas formed contains large quantities of sulphur dioxide, which is the gaseous product, or smoke, from the burning of sulphur. Some coals or other organic matter are relatively high in sulphur, and the gases from their stacks will contain fairly large percentages of sulphur dioxide. The gas itself will cause little worry, but when it comes in contact with water sulphuric acid is formed, and the precipitation of this acid may result in harm to vegetation and the materials of construction. Unless this gas appears in large quantities, as in the unscrubbed gases from copper smelters, it must have some solid particles upon which it can precipitate and fall to the ground.

The common conception of smoke consists of harmless, or practically harmless, gases laden with unburned carbon in solid particles. The presence of carbon in the gases, indicates a financial loss to the user of coal as well as a potential hazard to the inhabitants of the surrounding area.

Hazards of Smoke.

These economic and physical hazards may be enumerated briefly as follows:

1. Loss of heat because of the unburned particles of carbon escaping to the air.

2. Precipitation of the soft carbon residue as soot, coating and smearing everything with which it comes in contact, adding untold sums to living costs.

3. Breathed into the lungs of individuals, it forms a hard coating, accelerating the diseases of the lungs, nose and throat.

4. Forming a splendid surface for the precipitation of the highly corrosive sulphuric acid; shortening the useful life of all materials with which it comes in contact.

These are only a few of the greater hazards to economy and human health. Untold millions are wasted, not in the gases of combustion, but in the solid particles of carbon carried by these more or less harmless gases.

Space does not permit suggesting methods of producing invisible gases from the combustion of the organic materials burned in furnaces. However, it must be realized that the only true remedy is to completely burn the carbon, hydrogen and sulphur in the coal, omitting to the atmosphere no visible smoke. No panaceas, such as so-called "smoke consumers" will do the trick. The suspended carbon must not be allowed to exist, if we expect clean air and a healthful climate in a coal-burning area.

SEPTEMBER 1

Honoring the Seventy-Fifth Anni rsa
Missionary Ridge and Lookout Mou
Anniversary of Removal of Cherokee I

Centennial of

With the President of the United States, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Mrs. Roosevelt, as our chief guests, the gigantic nine-day celebration here next September, honoring the 75th anniversary of the Battles of Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge and Lookout Mountain, will undoubtedly be the greatest civic enterprise Chattanooga has ever undertaken.

Filled with enthusiasm for the vast project, I therefore, as Mayor of Chattanooga, call upon the entire citizenship of this community — young and old, high and low, all classes and conditions—to unite their efforts into one great civic force for the promotion of its success.

Besides honoring the memory of the brave men, both of the Union and the Confederate armies, who fought so bravely on the battlefields here, the September program, built around the anniversary dates of the Battle of Chickamauga, is designed also to celebrate the seventy-five years of peace and re-united brotherhood among the states which came out of that great conflict.

Moreover, by historical coincidence, we have the opportunity at the same time to celebrate two other interesting events—the 100th anniversary of the removal of the Cherokee Indians from the region to the west by the treaty of 1838, and the centennial birthday of our beloved city of Chattanooga.

That the significance of the celebration is far more important than we here in Chattanooga realize is indicated by the fact that the President of the United States himself has agreed to honor the occasion with his presence; the national congress has passed a bill to appropriate $35,000 toward the expense of the affair; the United States War Department is making arrangements to furnish federal troops to co-operate with National Guard units in re-enacting some phase of the Battle of Chickamauga; and governors of the twenty-eight states, north and south, whose sons fought on our battlefields, have accepted invitations to serve on the national committee and attend the celebration.

The possibilities of this celebration for bringing prosperity to Chattanooga are almost without limit. The experts in affairs of this kind who have been called into consultation estimate that no less than 500,000 visitors should be attracted here who will bring in upwards of $1,000,000 of new money to flow through the channels of trade. We think of how Chicago, at the bottom of the depression, had civic courage to stage the Century of Progress Exposition, which put that city out of the red, we can but lift our chins and say let Chattanooga do likewise. Without such spunk we cannot hope to go forward.

The civic leaders who have conceived this great project and done all the work so far in getting the movement started are business men who have the confidence of the entire community. At the head is Col. R. L. Moore, who serves as chairman. Associated with him in official capacities are Eugene J. Hall, Vice-Chairman; Will Shepherd, Chairman; Lawrence H. Callaway, Secretary, and H. Clay Evans Jones, Treasurer. Included in the general committee are O. K. LeBron, Hirsheimer, L. J. Wilhoite, Sansky, C. D. Little, Rev. John A. Adolph Shelby Ochs, W. G. J. Charles Poe, V. D. L. Robins E. Biggers, Miss Zella Armstrong, H. P. Dunlap, Mrs. E. O. Miss Katherine Montague, Ral bliss, Joe W. Engel, J. W. and Theodore Montague, Jr.

To bring all interests in the city, large into a working partnership in the great enterprise, a general city-wide sponsorship campaign is being launched Tuesday morning, May 17, under the directorship of Charles D. Little, as Financial Chairman, assisted by Hal Hirsheimer and Will Shepherd, as Majors.

Already many institutions have signed up for the maximum amounts sought and the campaign opening this morning is to bring all others into participation.

Under the sponsorship plan, a concern is asked to sign a pledge for an amount within its reach. Of this amount, 30% is payable at once in cash. The other 70% will be payable on call.

However, a professional organization with more than 30 years of successful experience has been retained to handle the production of the big celebration so that it may be carried out in a businesslike manner. Many pay events have been arranged, and the experience of this concern is such that there is every reason to believe that not one dollar of the unpaid 70% of the pledge will ever be called for, and there is the further reason to believe that the returns from the pay events staged will enable the committee in charge to repay to the sponsors the 30% paid in cash.

With such a set-up as this, Chattanooga can well afford to undertake this venture in civic prosperity.

With our world-famous scenic wonders and our historic attractions, which already bring thousands of visitors here annually, the great historical significance of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Battles of Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge and Lookout Mountain constitutes what show people are wont to term "a natural," and this leads us to believe that we can make the coming celebration a tremendous success.

Aside from the direct monetary return of the venture, there is also to be gained nation-wide publicity on a vast scale, the benefits of which will continue to be felt long after the celebration is over.

This great undertaking is something which will mean much to the prosperity and glory of the city; therefore, as Mayor of Chattanooga, I hereby proclaim the nine days of September 17th - 25th Celebration Week, and call upon every man, woman and child in the city to give the event his full support and co-operation.

E. D. BASS, Mayor.

OHIO CITIES FACING GRAVE RELIEF CRISIS

Cleveland.—The industrial cities in this state are facing the gravest crisis in relief that they have met since the depression began. The Ohio General Assembly made no adequate provision for relief at the last session, and Governor Davey held off on calling a special session as long as he could. That session began May 16, which means that the cities will get no new state help before June 1, at the earliest.

Cleveland is in the worst plight of all. Mayor Burton vows that no one will be allowed to starve; but the fact is that 25,000 Cleveland families whose breadwinners, for one reason or another, are not eligible for WPA, are facing starvation at the present time.

Aid from Many Sources.

The mayor has persuaded landlords to give shelter to the poor until funds are found for rent. Gas, light and water companies are furnishing service in the hope of payment later. But the city already owes $2,000,000 to food vendors, and they complain that their own credit is strained to the breaking point.

The Federal Surplus Foods Corporation, headed by Harry Hopkins, is helping out, but the situation is almost desperate. Police and fire appropriations have been diverted to relief, the mayor is willing to turn rubbish disposal funds to the same purpose. But Cleveland unemployed climbed from 90,000 in October to 183,000 now.

Cleveland has 75 per cent of the population of Cuyahoga county, and 93 per cent of the reliefers. Other counties have levied county taxes for urban relief; but the courts have stopped this county from doing so. One observer sums up the situation as follows:

Wealthy Residents Aided.

"The effect of it all has been to relieve the wealthy residents of Cleveland's exclusive suburbs of any share in the responsibility of caring for the city's unemployables."

One bright star of hope is shining, not on all but on some, of the unemployed of Cleveland. The old Union Trust Company in this city had $38,000,000 deposits of 118,000 depositors when it went broke in the depression. Its successors, the Union Bank of Commerce, is paying these debts. Since $20,000,000 of the total sum were in savings, it goes without saying that a large number of those depositors are now unemployed.

RAILROADS SERVE NOTICE OF PROPOSED WAGE SLASH

Washington. — Railroads have served notice on their employes that rail wages will be cut 15 per cent July 1. The action was taken by a carriers' committee, represented by a carriers' committee, representing all railroads. The committee declared that conditions now confronting the roads compel a reduction of wages. It lays these conditions to reduced traffic, low freight rates, high taxes and high wages. It blames the ICC for not granting larger increases of freight rates.

The railroad unions, speaking through George M. Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives' Association, have refused all suggestions for wage cuts.

That does not mean that there will be a strike at once or at all. It merely sets in motion the machinery set up by the Railway Labor Act. First, men and management hold conferences. If these fail, the National Mediation Board will be invoked. Failure there brings up the question of arbitration; and if that fails, the President can appoint an emergency committee, and there will be no strike until 30 days after the committee makes its report.

This machinery has averted all serious rail strikes for 11 years.

Comment On World Events

"Ted" Dewey, New York's famous prosecutor, recently told the Legal Aid Society of that city that the poor man arrested on criminal charges seldom got decent legal services, and outlined a plan to bring betterment.

Next day, Charles Evans Hughes, Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, told the American Law Institute that the administrative agencies of government must be extremely careful to see that the spirit in which they work is "the spirit of the just judge."

Both gentlemen are entirely right in what they said; and both refrained from mentioning the greatest blot on America's administration of law. What the poor man arrested on a criminal charge in most cities has most to fear is that the police will give him the "third degree" to get a confession out of him.

The star villainy of the lot probably is the action of the Denver police some years ago, when they beat and bedevilled a man into confessing to a double murder that never was committed. It was proved beyond all question at the trial that the deaths were due to a faulty gas heater, with which the man who confessed had nothing to do.

Dewey is right, and Chief Justice Hughes is right—though it must be admitted that the New York prosecutor picked a flaw infinitely more important to the mass of the American people than the one which engaged the attention of the Chief Justice. Most of our administrative agencies deal with corporations — and no corporation in trouble lacks legal services, whatever the plight of its exchequer. But isn't it about time that someone to whom the country must listen goes after the third degree?

In a statement of considerable length and studiously moderate language, Premier Hirota of Japan recently told the world that what Japan is working for now is a united China, under a government that will be friendly to Japan. He admitted that the difficulties in the way were large. The context showed that what Hirota meant by "friendly government" is a government of China which will do the will of Japan in all things.

If China were a corproation with stock on the market, that should have boomed when Hirota's statement was published. For what Hirota really said is that China has become so thoroughly united that Japan no longer has any hope of dividing it. In the early days of the war, as everyone remembers, Japan was aiming to have the five northern provinces of China under a puppet pro-Japanese government. That time is past. Hirota admits, apparently without quite knowing it, that the case has come to be all or nothing so far as Japan is concerned.

Why, if the Chinese are united past division in all the fighting regions and nearby territory, should the Japanese be striking at southern China, which hitherto has had little experience of this war? The answer must be that Japan is absolutely under the domination of her army and navy; and that history shows that the military mind seldom thinks. The Japanese raid on Amoy probably will put 250,000 southern Chinese into active war service who would not have been in that service before.

Maryville, Tenn., May 16.—With unanimous election of Carl K. Greene as president, the second annual convention of the International Aluminum Workers Council was held here Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week. Mr. Greene is a native of this city, a former employe of the Aluminum Company of American in the Alcoa plant, and is a member of the local union of Aluminum Workers. For the past year he has been an organizer for the American Federation of Labor, assigned to the aluminum industry. During that time he has been subjected to severe misrepresentation and heaps of abuse by the CIO leaders in this section, and his elevation to head of the International Council was the answer of the aluminum workers to those who have been trying to destroy the organization.

Eighteen local unions were represented in the council meeting here, some of the delegates traveling as far as eight and nine hundred miles to attend the convention. The business sessions were held in the Union hall of Local Union No. 19104, while the Farragut Hotel in Knoxville was designated as convention headquarters. During the three days sessions officers elected, in addition to President Greene, were Frank Myers, of Messena, N. Y., as vice-president, and Edwin Stahal, of East St. Louis, secretary-treasurer. The executive board is composed of one member from each of the seventeen affiliated local unions which had delegates present at the convention.

David Williams, of Pittsburgh, former president of the International Council, has been made secretary-treasurer of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor, and because of the pressing work in connection with his office could not leave Pennsylvania to attend the convention, but sent a message pledging his continued support to the aluminum workers. The sessions adjourned Saturday afternoon with an open meeting on the court house lawn, where each of the 29 visiting delegates representing the 18 local unions in the council were introduced to the large crowd which assembled to greet the visitors. C. E. Bundy, A. F. of L. organizer in Cincinnati, closed the session with an eloquent address. He came as the personal representative of Lewis G. Hines, director of Organization for the American Federation of Labor.

Women in Convention.

Delegates to the American Federation of Women's Auxiliaries of Labor held their convention in Cincinnati the same week, and of course they attended the exhibition. Since in 99 homes out of 100, the woman of the house is the chief purchasing agent of the family, this circumstance has an added value over its natural interest. It may be added that the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union, the only organization which joined the CIO and has not been expelled from the A. F. of L., was also present.

Coming back to local industries, the labor sponsors of the exhibition never will forget the help they got from the Crosley Radio corporation. On five nights before the show opened, A. F. of L. speakers were given fifteen minutes, without charge, to boom the coming show over the air. William Green, president of the A. F. of L., led off. Next, several evenings later, came Matthew Woll, head of the Union Label Trades Department. Later still, I. M. Ornburn spoke; he is, as said before, the real originator of the show. Then came George M. Harrison, president of the Railway Clerks, and then Ornburn, who was director-general of the exhibition as well as secretary-treasurer of the A. F. of L. Union Label Trades Department, again used the radio shortly before the opening.

Radio Programs Popular.

As if this were not enough, the Crosley people furnished five radio programs at the Music Hall, where the exhibition was held, on the first five days of the show. There was nothing more popular in the exhibition than the radio programs and the use of the radio in general.

Another popular and educational feature was a complete house and lot, even to the lawn mower, in the north wing.

A union buying guide, a catalogue of union firms and companies clear across the United States, was published by the sponsors of the exhibition.

Label Parade in Gotham.

New York City.—Police estimated that 30,000 trade unionists participated in a parade here which was held to focus attention on Union Label week, and to emphasize the importance of buying goods marked by the union label —American commodities produced under fair working conditions.

Employers also were represented in the parade by about 500 floats, cars and trucks. Among them were motion-picture and theatrical organizations, fuel, milk, trucking and construction companies.

Labor Throughout Nation Alarmed By Special State Taxes Imposing Ever-Growing Burden on Consumers

Survey by Florida Federation of Labor Reveals Punitive and Regulatory Taxation Is Increasing Menace to Workers' Incomes, Facing Further Reductions If Depression Continues.

Miami, Fla.—Increasing alarm over special punitive and regulatory tax laws that have invaded the statutes of 22 states and are definitely in prospect in six others, with three additional states expecting such proposals may come up, is reflected in a preliminary digest of replies received by a special committee of the Florida Federation of Labor which was instructed to canvass all other state federations during April.

A resolution passed by the state convention of the Florida Federation April 4 created a committee to make a survey among officials of all state federations "to learn more of the progress and the economic consequences of the growing campaign against organized selling and direct distribution; and whatever steps are being taken elsewhere to secure a full and fair consideration of the facts." Walter Hoyt, of Miami, secretary-treasurer of the Florida Federation and president of Miami Central Labor Union, was named chairman of the special tax committee. He is being assisted by C. E. Silva, of Tampa, first vice-president of the Florida Federation, and M. D. Lambert, of Pensacola, third vice-president.

"Problem Worse Than Expected"

"Our job is far from complete," said Chairman Hoyt, "but we have already learned enough from reports from 27 state federations to realize this tax problem is worse than we expected. There's every sign it will get worse much faster from here on unless labor wakes up to the basic fact that its members are consumers as well as producers.

"For every worker we are trying to help on wages or working conditions there are at least three others in his family; and all four of them eat and wear clothes and have to have shelter. Taxes not fairly distributed hit all four of them, beside hurting the business of employers so badly the chance for a job for the family earner is also reduced."

Tax Burden Heavy

"Tax collections needed for 1938 by the federal, state and local governments are estimated to average $466.30 for each family in the United States," Chairman Hoyt continued. "Annual income for each family in the nation in 1938 will average $1,163 at the most, according to the most reliable figures we can find, but if this depression continues past July it won't be as high as that.

"It was shown in Providence, R. I., last year that a family with two members working and with its living cost expenditures totaling $1,292.51 for the year, had to pay direct and hidden taxes equal to one-eighth of all they spent.

"In days of work, this means the two workers donated their labor for 26.3 days each to pay taxes. In dollars the tax bill was $160.71, of which $77.99 represented taxes hidden in the retail price of goods or services purchased.

"Our survey thus far shows labor as a whole has a well-balanced appreciation of the problems of taxing authorities, as costs of government rise in ratio to new demands for public service, but it also shows a determination to continue the fight to keep taxes as low as possible, to analyze these new demands and see whether they are justified, whether public officials are taxing for new revenues, or for revenge, and especially whether they have tried to cut present governing costs by eliminating obsolete or duplicating services. Labor wants to know if they are spreading tax levies evenly, according to ability to pay, we are finding."

Labor's Awakening Shown

Facts are piling up to show labor's awakening to the tax dangers of this and coming years. Oklahoma, Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, North Carolina, South Dakota, Utah, Florida, Oregon and New Hampshire expect tax measures of one kind or another before their next legislatures, most of which meet in January of 1939. Nine others are checking up to see what is brewing, according to information collected by the committee.

In New York state representatives of the Union Label Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor gave active support in killing in committee punitive tax law aimed at chain stores. In Georgia a destructive chain-store tax bill was rationalized through the force of labor speaking for the consumers.

PREVAILING RATES OF PAY WON FOR BUILDING TRADES WORKERS ON ALL WPA JOBS

Hopkins Agrees to Bring Contractors Under WPA Labor Standards, President McInerney, of A. F. of L. Building Trades Department, Says; Assigning of Unskilled Workers to do Work of Skilled Mechanics Will Also Be Stopped.

Washington.—Hereafter contractors on Works Progress Administration projects will not be permitted to cut wage rates for building trades workers below prevailing standards, nor will skilled building mechanics be discriminated against by having their work performed by unskilled workers. These two grievances of organized labor against practices that have developed in many WPA projects have been definitely ended as the result of conferences between representatives of the Building and Construction Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor and Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator.

This justice for unemployed building trades workers was outlined by Joseph A. McInerney, president of the A. F. of L. Building and Construction Trades Department, in his testimony before the subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee in support of President Roosevelt's $4,512,000,000 spending-lending program, which includes $1,250,000,000 for the Works Progress Administration to be used during the first seven months of the fiscal year beginning July 1.

In discussing the new understanding with the Works Progress Administration, Mr. McInerney said.

"Representatives of the Building Trades Department, keenly aware of the destructive effect of these practices upon the labor standards established in the industry, discussed this problem with Works Progress Administrator Hopkins in a series of conferences last week. As a result of these conferences, Mr. Hopkins pledged the Works Progress Administration to correct these practices and rectify these abuses by means of new administrative regulations.

"According to Mr. Hopkins these regulations will provide that on all projects where sponsors have made contributions, the prevailing rates established by WPA shall be paid.

"It was also agreed to establish an effective procedure for the determination of prevailing wages in the locality in which the project is undertaken and to provide a satisfactory method for proper classification and determination of qualifications of those employed on projects at various trades."

A. F. of L. Pact Speeds Federal Housing Program

Washington.—The Building and Department of the American Federation of Labor and the United States Housing Authority finalized a plan to speed up the billion dollar low-rent housing and slum clearance program which the Housing Authority is administering with the signing of an agreement designed to prevent work stoppages and pay reductions on the projects.

The Executive Council of the A. F. of L. department approved two resolutions providing that there shall be no cessation of work in jurisdictional disputes until the unions involved and the federal and local housing authorities have full opportunity to adjust the differences; and second, wage rates established when a project is begun shall remain effective until it is completed.

The finalizing of the agreement was announced by Walter Price, acting director of the labor relations division of the United States Housing Authority, and Herbert Rivers, secretary-treasurer of the A. F. of L. Building and Construction Trades Department.

Radium Poisoning Danger Minimized

New York City.—Danger of radium poisoning in the luminous paint industry in New York state has been minimized in the last few years, Elmer F. Andrews, state industrial commissioner, declared in revealing that not one compensation insurance claim based on exposure to radium or radioactive substances has been filed with the department of labor since 1934.

Andrews based his optimistic statement on information supplied by members of his staff after receipt of alarming reports of widespread deaths and disabilities among luminous dial painters in Illinois. A quick survey of conditions in the plants operating here indicates that all reasonable safeguards are being enforced, he said.

While stressing the fact that the industry is comparatively small, the commissioner conceded that there has been some recent expansion because of the demand for luminous airplane dials and scientific instruments.

LISTER HILL

Lister Hill, elected to the Senate by Alabama to fill the vacancy caused by the appointment of Hugo L. Black to the Supreme Court, is 43 years old; but he doesn't look it, except in the eroded districts of his hair. He has a springy walk not too common in the thirties; he stands about five feet, eleven inches above sea-level; his face is not lined, his light gray eyes appear to need no spectacles, he has not made even a start toward getting fat. His whole manner is that of a young man who finds life a doggoned interesting affair.

He graduated from the University of Alabama in 1914. He served with the Seventeenth and Seventy-first U. S. Infantry in the World War. He was elected to the Sixty-eighth Congress to fill the vacancy caused by the death of John R. Tyson. And here comes a fact rather unusual, even in the deep South—he was renominated and re-elected, without opposition, seven times.

Evidently, his district was pretty well satisfied with Lister Hill. His election to the Senate by more than two to one, shows that the state is pretty well satisfied, too. He made a vigorous New Deal campaign, upholding Roosevelt on the stump as in the House.

While he was still Senator, Hugo Black was heard to say: "There's a lot more liberalism in the South than most people believe." Hill's experience seems to justify his predecessor's words.

Shorter Day Is Urged To Save Miners' Jobs

Geneva.—Mechanization of mines threatens to cost the jobs of 98,000 coal miners within a few years, A. D. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers of America, told the World Coal Conference convoked here by the International Labor Organization. Lewis advocated the six-hour day, 30-hour week to solve the problem.

Lewis told the conference adoption of the shorter workweek would add about $95,000,000 annually to the coal operators' payroll, an increase of approximately 5 per cent in the cost of production.

"Cotton Ed" Smith will have a real contest at last. Gov. Olin D. Johnston will enter South Carolina primaries for the U. S. senate nomination, running on a new deal platform.

Roosevelt Hails Union Label Goods Exhibition

Visions Cincinnati Show as Means to Impress the Public With the "Tremendous Influence" of Wise Buying Power.

Washington.—The first national American Federation of Labor Union Label and Industrial Exhibition, which opened at Cincinnati, O., May 16, was indorsed by President Roosevelt.

In a letter to Matthew Woll, president of the A. F. of L. Union Label Trades Department, which is the sponsor of the Cincinnati show, the Chief Executive said:

"Please accept sincere thanks for the kind invitation to attend the first national Union Label and Industrial Exhibition. I regret that I am unable to accept, but I desire to send you hearty good wishes for the success of this undertaking.

"I have long been convinced that the consumer wields a great power which, if consciously used to support fair labor standards, would be of great benefit to workers and to those employers who co-operate in the maintenance of such standards. I trust that the Union Label Exhibition and the work of the Women's Auxiliaries will help to make the public aware of the tremendous influence it can exercise through wisely directed buying power."

JOBS FOR FIVE MILLION VISIONED FROM THREE BILLION RECOVERY BILL

Measure Passed by House of Representatives Includes $1,250,000,000 for Works Progress Administration and $1,465,000,000 for Public Works Administration.

Washington.—The House of Representatives passed by a vote of 328 to 70 the President's spending-lending relief bill carrying $2,519,425,000 in direct expenditures and $660,000,000 in loans and authorizations, making a total of $3,179,425,000.

Friendly observers claim the bill, which has yet to pass the Senate, will directly and indirectly provide employment for five million jobless.

In addition to an appropriation of $1,250,000,000 for the Works Progress Administration, $965,000,000 for the Public Works Administration and $500,000,000 for the PWA revolving fund, the major items in the bill are: National Youth Administration, $75,000,000; Farm Security Administration, $175,000,000; Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration, $6,000,000; Employes' Compensation Commission, $3,500,000; Rural Electrification Administration, $100,000,000. The WPA and PWA appropriations were specifically recommended by the American Federation of Labor.

A number of amendments designed to fix flat minimum WPA wages were defeated on the plea of Representative Clinton A. Woodrum, of Virginia, in charge of the bill, that it was a "relief and recovery" bill, not the wage-and-hour bill, which the House would consider later.

The House included in the bill the amendment offered by Representative Jones, of Texas, providing that needy farmers not on relief rolls may receive work relief, and the amendment offered by Representative Boileau, of Wisconsin, eliminating the basis of neediness among farmers to whom the WPA will distribute lime for soil improvement.

The big relief bill was sent to the Senate and referred to an appropriations subcommittee headed by Senator Adams, of Colorado. The principle witnesses summoned by Mr. Adams were Public Works Administrator Ickes, Works Progress Administrator Hopkins and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Observers predict that the Senate will not change the principles of the relief measure, but that the amounts appropriated by the House under the various items may be altered.

Labor Heads Urge Speedy Action On President's Recovery Program

Washington.—The subcommittee of the House Committee on Appropriations, studying the President's recovery program, has heard united support for it from labor leaders opposed to each other on many things.

"The gravity of the economic situation we are facing today exceeds our worst expectations," said William Green, of the A. F. of L. He estimated that 3,700,000 persons have been added to the unemployed rolls since last September, and went on:

"The proposals you are considering are an essential part of the action which must be taken without delay, for even more important than the measures designed to stimulate business revival are those which serve to relieve the distress of unemployment brought about by this new crisis."

John L. Lewis, of the CIO, estimated the unemployed now at 13,713,000; and urged that provision be made to give jobs by the government to 3,700,000, instead of the 2,800,000 which Harry Hopkins said could be kept at work for seven months by the President's plan.

At the close of the hearings, Chairman Woodrum announced that his committee would start drafting a bill at once, but doubted whether it could get to debate on the floor before May 12—if then.

GOOGE LEAVES FOR GENEVA TO ATTEND WORLD CONFERENCE

Southern Representative of A. F. of L. Chosen as Delegate to International Conference, in Switzerland, on Vocational Guidance; Paul Aymon Will Manage Office in Interim.

George L. Googe, southern representative of the American Federation of Labor and general chairman of organization in the area, sailed Wednesday from New York for Geneva, Switzerland, where he will attend the international convention called by the International Labor Office for conferences on vocational education, opening June 2.

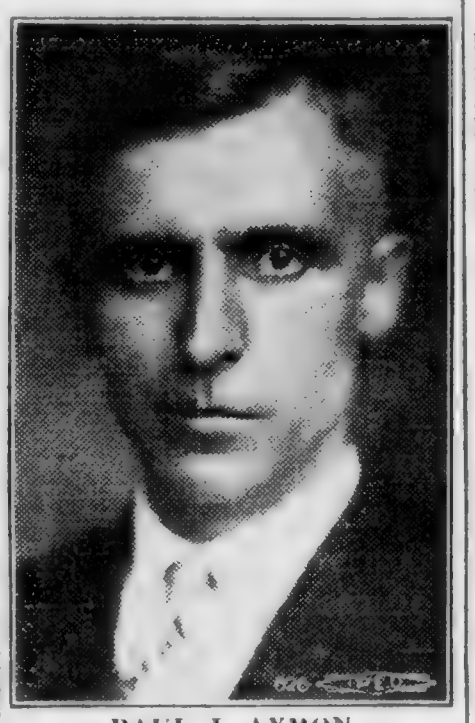
Mr. Googe, in addition to his representation of the American Federation of Labor in the south, is a member of the United States Commission on Vocational Guidance, and is attending the Geneva conference both as a member of the committee and as the representative of the federation.

In the absence of Mr. Googe from the southern territory, Paul J. Aymon, former president of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, and now serving as organizing director of the A. F. of L. in North and South Carolina, will be in charge of the southern offices at Atlanta, Ga.

The departure of Mr. Googe for Europe means that, for the first time in several years he will be forced to miss one of the conventions of Southern States Federation of Labor—the Tennessee convention, which opens at Johnson City, June 6.

Selection of Mr. Googe as the representative of the federation represents a fine tribute to his worth by the officers and executive council of the organization. Native of Savannah, Ga., and member of the Pressmen's union of that city, he has been identified with the labor movement for nearly a score of years, rising to the highest office in the gift of the federation, southern representative, with jurisdiction over eleven states in a few short years.

The Geneva conference will develop a worldwide program with respect to vocational guidance and Mr. Googe is regarded as eminently qualified to participate in the development of such a plan.



PAUL J. AYMON

Aymon Takes Googe's Office During Absence

Atlanta, Ga., May 23.—Paul J. Aymon, dean of A. F. of L. organizers in the south, former president of the Tennessee State Federation of Labor, and for the past year director of organization in the Carolinas, is in charge of activities for the A. F. of L. in the south during the absence of Geo. L. Googe, who is at Geneva, Switzerland, attending the International Labor Congress. Mr. Aymon is resident of Chattanooga, Tenn., and is one of the most widely known and highly respected representatives of the American Federation of Labor in the south.

Mr. Aymon will be in the Atlanta headquarters of the American Federation of Labor throughout the six weeks' absence of Mr. Googe.

Berry Supports Amendments To Housing Bill

In reply to a telegram sent to both the Tennessee senators, urging them to support the Wagner-Steagall amendment to the national housing act now in congress, Senator George L. Berry wrote the secretary of the Tennessee Federation of Labor as follows:

> "This is to acknowledge your telegram of the 11th in which you urge my support to the Wagner-Stegall amendments to the United States housing act now under consideration. I shall be delighted to do so."

Senator McKellar pledged his earnest and careful consideration of the amendments which are approved by the American Federation of Labor.

"Insure Cabs" Central Body Ask City Dads

Plea Made That Public Be Protected While Using Cabs

Central Body requested the city commissioners last Tuesday to put into operation the city ordinance already passed which requires that taxicab companies either be bonded or carry liability insurance.

As it is now if a patron of a cab becomes injured while riding a cab there is no way of receiving compensation for the injuries. If the injured persons sues for damages and gets a judgment, it is usually the case that collection of damages is impossible. With every company carrying liability insurance, the public will be protected, according to Central Body and the taxicab local.

The matter will be settled definitely at the next meeting of the city commission.

NLRB TO ANNOUNCE DATE OF ELECTION IN TEPCO IN FEW DAYS

Employes Will Say If They Want IBEW to Represent Them—Ballot to Be "Yes" or "No"—No Disagreement With Company

It has been announced that Director Charles N. Feidelson, of the National Labor Relations Board, will within a few days set a definite day for starting the vote in the Tennessee Electric Power system to determine whether the employes shall be represented by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, an American Federation of Labor affiliate.

The notice of the election will be sent out in plenty of time before the election so that employes will understand all the rules of voting. With the notice will be a sample copy of the ballot to be used.

In an interview with International Representative O. A. Walker, he says: "This election is not the result of an disagreement with the company. It is simply for the purpose of seeing wether the IBEW shall be the bargaining agency in the system. The company has agreed to co-operate with the board by locating the eligible employes on the system so that they may vote."

Showing that his organization is the logical one for public utility workers, Mr. Walker says: "Some 129 agreements are today in force with operating utilities companies, many of which are strictly closed shops. Three of these companies are Commonwealth & Southern properties. Many of these agreements have been in effect for over 25 years, and it has been our pride in knowing that so well have our relations been that it is rare that grave disputes arise to such a degree that strikes or lockouts have occurred.

"Through the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, being 47 years of age, with its 300,000 members, working conditions for our members have been advanced astonishingly. Our membership determines the conditions under which it operates. We are a democratic organization, having no dictatorial policies which interferes with self-government by the membership."

The election was ordered by the National Labor Board after a hearing caused by attempts of an outlaw organization attempting to chisel into the company system, according to A. F. Wright, representing the IBEW. The board ruled that the outlaw group would not go on the ballot, but that the employes would simply say whether they wanted the IBEW.

Not Running Law School, Says Shepherd

"Drown 'Em" T. Pope Shepherd Tells Bus Drivers Cannot Recognize Union

T. Pope Shepherd, county attorney, who several years ago said that labor organizers and other "agitators" should all be put into a sack and thrown into the river, told a committee from Central Body and the local bus drivers union that the law would not allow the county to sign a contract with the union.

When asked to cite the law in question, Mr. Shepherd, with his usual blunt attitude toward those disagreeing with him, said, "I am not running a law school. I'm just telling you."

Adopting the advice of Mr. Shepherd, a sub-committee of the county school board, composed of Messrs. Brown, Forbes and Allen, presented an individual agreement for each bus driver which said that they could join any organization they might wish but which must not be "obnoxious" to the board.

Mr. Shepherd and the board's committee held forth a promise of a $14,000 increase for the drivers —without the union.

Union Pays Out $75,000 To Idle Members

New York City.—Local 117 of the Cloak Operators' union, affiliated with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union, is paying out about $75,000 to 1,400 of its unemployed members who have had less than $300 in wages this year. It is the first time anything quite like this has happened in the union. The fund was raised by contributions from the 10,000 members who are at work.

Those who have earned no wages this year get $85 each; those earning up to $100, $65; those receiving between $100 and $200, $55, and those from $200 to $300 get $45.

The sick benefits of the union are $10 a week for not more than ten weeks.

Senator George L. Berry, who is also president of an international labor union, fired the opening gun of his campaign for election to the United States senate last Saturday in Hawkins county, his home.

The occasion was a barbecue given by the Hawkins County Berry-for-Senate club, and it is estimated that approximately eight thousand well-wishers were on hand from Carter to Shelby county.

Seventeen carloads of Berry boosters traveled from Chattanooga early Saturday morning to start the senator off on his campaign with their acclaim ringing in his ears.

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL CHATTANOOGA

FRIDAY, MAY 27, 1938

The Power Company Election

Employes of the Tennessee Electric Power company will go to the ballot box within a few weeks to participate in an election held under the auspices of the National Labor Relations Board. This election will be a "Yes or No" vote. That is, employes will say whether they wish the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, to represent them.

This election is not the result of a fight between the power company and the union. The only way in which the company enters into the election at all will be to co-operate with the board in informing the board where employes are located who are eligible to vote.

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, usually designated as the IBEW, is an old established organization of 47 years. It is composed of workers in the electrical field, and it can well be proud of the successful manner in which it has improved conditions for members of the organization. These improvements, as they are made, have in many cases caused better benefits for unorganized workers to lesser degrees because many employers have been forced to keep within shouting distance of the union conditions. Otherwise, their employes might themselves form a union.

The IBEW has become so respected that some 129 agreements are today in effect with operating utilities companies, three of which are Commonwealth and Southern properties.

Some of these 129 contracts have been in operation for 25 years or more, and it is rare that strikes or lockouts have occurred after companies have negotiated agreements with this responsible union. In these 129 places conditions have been so far advanced that compared to some unorganized localities it looks like the promised land.

Employes of the Tennessee Electric Power Company have the opportunity now to designate a responsible and business like union such as the IBEW to bargain collectively for them. With its 300,000 members, its record of living up to agreements as well as to ability to enforce them, power company employes should embrace this chance of insuring to themselves and to their employes the opportunity of dealing with the IBEW rather than facing maybe at a later date skirmishes with outlaw and irresponsible groups who might attempt to wedge their disturbing way into their lives.

Members of the IBEW, through their dues, receive pensions amounting to $40 per month, as well as paid-up life insurance after a period of membership.

Should the power company at any time decide to sell or transfer its properties, with membership in the IBEW the worker would have some feeling of safety that in the transfer his job would not be washed out but would be protected.

To sum it up to the employes of the Tennessee Electric Power company: When you select the IBEW as your collective bargaining agency you insure to your company the opportunity of dealing with a responsible, established and successful labor union. You also close the door to any irresponsible, unsafe and unsuccessful group in the future. You make possible to yourselves an opportunity of benefiting your working conditions the same as 300,000 others in the same industry.

Take this opportunity.

The facts and opinions given are based on the monthly reports of Consumers' Union, 55 Vandam Street, New York City, a non-profit membership organization whose object is to safeguard buyers by testing and reporting on consumer goods. Note especially the information on labor conditions under which products are manufactured.

Blade costs are higher if you use a Gem type razor instead of a Gillette type, Consumers Union's latest study on razors and razor blades shows. Most of the Gem type cost no more than the Gillette type, but lasted only about half as long. The only exception found was the Gem single-edge blade. This bladegave about twice as many shaves as other single-edge blades, but its cost was also double.

CU's shaving squad found that a slightly closer shave could be obtained with the Gem type razors, but the Gem showed a greater tendency to cut the face.

The most economical single-edge blade was found to be the Duro Edge, sold by Montgomery Ward (Cat. No. 3534) at five for 10c. This brand also gave the best shaves of all blades tested. Among the other acceptable blades were Star, Rialto and Gem.

Insurance Agents Organize.

Life insurance policy holders throughout the United States are unwittingly financing the big insurance companies' fight against unionization of agents and office workers. Despite this campaign, agents of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in the New York area have voted (1,728 to 1,242) for representation by the Industrial Insurance Agents' Union, a local of the United Office and Professional Workers, and the union has built up a national membership of more than 50,000 in barely one year.

There are excellent reasons for unionization. Managers have driven industrial insurance agents to sell dime-a-week policies to families who cannot afford to meet even small weekly payments; salesmen who cannot maintain the stiff pace are discharged or forced to resign in wholesale numbers. About one agent out of every three loses his job every year.

Although the companies' books show weekly salaries of as much as $50 or $60 for the industrial agents, actually the men seldom earn more than $25 or $30, and many are paid even less. Under a legalized system of kickbacks, the weekly pay is whittled down for policies that have lapsed. Salaries—based on commissions—are fixed every three months. The loss of a $1 weekly premium may mean a $10 weekly pay cut for 13 weeks. Agents regularly pay premiums for needy policy holders rather than suffer heavy cuts.

Paternalism has long been the keynote of the companies' labor policy. Free lunches are provided for office workers, but the quality of the food and service varies with the position of the employee. When section heads eat steak, the clerks dine on hamburger.

The story is different in the case of the Union Labor Life Insurance Company, an official offspring of the American Federation of Labor. All employees are unionized; office workers receive a minimum of $18 and an average of $27.65 a week. Agents earn an average of $43.50, and all employees enjoy the 35-hour week.

Canned Peas

Although canned peas of Grade C rating have as much food value as Grade A peas, there is a great difference in taste and tenderness. Consumers Union has found that many of the poorer quality cost just as much as those of the highest grade. The A. & P. brand (one of the few labeled as A, B or C) ranks as a Best Buy; almost as good are Blue & White, Del Monte and IGA.

Poison—by Mistake

Government graders testing a number of brands of canned peas for Consumers Union reported that one can was "illegal." Mixed with the peas were five buds of nightshade, the poisonous plant known as belladonna. This amount is enough to cause death. The can had been packed by Libby's and purchased by Consumers Union in a San Francisco store. Although there is no indication that other cans of Libby's peas contain poison, the Food and Drug Administration is taking steps to seize any remaining part of the shipment. Fortunately, the taste of belladonna is easily recognized by its bitterness.

Canned Apricots

Of the 56 cans of apricots included in CU tests, 40 were below the government standard for drained weight of fruit. Prices in the Grade A category varied from 19c for a 30-ounce can of IGA apricots to 43c for the same size can of Richelieu. In addition to the IGA, the good and inexpensive brands included Libby's, Marco and Country Club.

SOUTHERN LABOR "SPOTS"

Birmingham, Ala.—A closed shop agreement was signed here last week between the local union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and the Ideal Laundry. Representative Lo Petre, of the Birmingham A. F. of L. office, assisted the workers in obtaining the agreement.

Baton Rouge, La.—A local union of the International Association of Firefighters has been organized here, and the charter was installed last Monday. Officers have been elected and have assumed their duties. C. M. Fox, of the organizing staff of the American Federation of Labor, assisted the firemen in organizing the union.

Atlanta, Ga.—Cicero Kendrick, associate editor of the Journal of Labor, has been indorsed by the organized labor movement here as labor's candidate for the legislature. Fulton county is entitled to three representatives in the general assembly and it has long been the rule that one of the three be selected from the ranks of labor. Two years ago this honor went to Mr. Kendrick, and labor's action in a mass meeting called for that purpose in which Mr. Kendrick was selected for another term speaks highly and eloquently of his services as legislator.

The mass meeting was attended by delegates from seventy-three labor organizations affiliated with the Atlanta Federation of Trades, and from the Big Four Railroad Brotherhoods, all giving Mr. Kendrick unanimous indorsement as labor's member of the general assembly, to be nominated in the September primaries and elected in the general election in November.

Baton Rouge, La.—E. H. Williams, president of the Louisiana State Federation of Labor and representative of the American Federation of Labor, announced here that a charter has been ordered for a local union of truck drivers, and will be installed upon its receipt. A large number of charter members were signed to the application, and it is believed that this union will soon become one of the strongest locals in the state.

Augusta, Ga.—The Central Labor union Wednesday voiced its disapproval at the present set-up of the local housing commission, alleging that labor was not given representation on the board. Delegates from the Carpenters' and Joiners' union presented resolutions requesting that such recognition be accorded. The resolutions were unanimously adopted. President F. J. Pritchard was directed to appoint a committee of three to confer with Mayor R. E. Allen with a view of securing two additional members on the housing commission, who are members of local trade unions.

Johnson City, Tenn.—Local union officials are planning for the entertainment of the Tennessee State Federation of Labor convention which meets here in annual session on June 6. President Gerald Foley, of the state body, has been in this city frequently during past weeks assisting in making adequate arrangements for what he is convinced will be the most largely attended state convention ever held by the Tennessee Fedration of Labor.

Augusta, Ga.—F. J. Pritchard, president of the Central Labor union, has recently been appointed as inspector for the state revenue department in charge of wine, beer and cigaret inspection in Richmond county. He began active service May 1.

Copperhillhill, Tenn.—Final adjustment of the question of representation for workers in the copper basin is expected next Monday. The American Federation of Labor union here, it will be recalled, petitioned the labor board for an election to determine the bargaining agency. On March 18, the election was held, and the A. F. of L. won the election. Then the CIO protested the result of the election, claiming the labor board, the company and the A. F. of L. membership with unfair methods in conducting the election.

Hearing was set for last Thursday by the labor board, Trial Examiner Lohm being assigned to the case, which was heard in the federal building in Chattanooga. The labor board was represented by Attorney Nicoson; Reid Robinson, president of the CIO International union, assisted by R. P. Brown, an attorney, represented the CIO unions; Paul J. Aymon and James F. Barrett represented the A. F. of L. union. Attorney Robert McConnell, of Knoxville, represented the Tennessee Copper company.

Nineteen witnesses were introduced by the CIO on Thursday and Friday. At the conclusion of the CIO's evidence, motion was made for dismissal because of lack of evidence that unfairness was resorted to in the conduct of the election. Examiner Lohm withheld ruling on the motion for dismissal for the time being, and recessed the hearing until Monday, May 30, when the company, the labor board and the A. F. of L. will introduce witnesses to tell the other side of the story, in event the case is not settled before that date through granting of motion for dismissal.

Stage Is Set for Lengthy Struggle Over Proposed Cuts in Pay Of Rail Workers

Washington. — The stage is set for a long, hard but orderly struggle over railroad wages. Managements of 139 railroads, meeting in Chicago, voted overwhelmingly to ask their employes to take a 15 per cent wage cut, beginning July 1, estimated to reduce the railroad wage bill $250,000,000 a year. Every head of a railroad union who has said anything at all has declared that the cut will be resisted to the limit.

The railroad managements base their demand on the claim that the plight of the roads is "desperate." They are worse off now, they say, than they were in 1932, when the railroad unions accepted a 10 per cent wage "deduction." In October, November and December, 1931, and January, 1932, the net operating income of the roads was $13,710,000 higher than for the last three months of 1937 and January of this year. They lay this drop partly to decline in traffic, partly to refusal of the ICC to give sufficient freight rate increases; and partly to increased costs, which was summarized by the conservative New York Times as follows:

"The necessity of having continually to oppose state and federal legislation that would increase operating costs; tax increases, municipal, county, state and federal; the Railroad Retirement Act, Social Security Act, and state unemployment taxes."

Workers Cite Job Losses

In a short clause of a long sentence, they mentioned the increased cost of materials.

To which the railroad workers reply that they have taken more than their share of the burden of the terrific cuts in railroad employment. Excluding switching and terminal companies, the average rail employment through 1937 was 1,115,077; and this despite the slash in working forces in the latter part of that year. The number employed in February of this year was 939,017; a drop of 174,060 from the average of last year. And the loss is continuing; preliminary figures for March are 927,308.

Labor Firm Against Cuts

D. B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, estimates that the wage bills of the carriers have been cut $40,000,000 a month since last October. "There will be no wage reductions agreed to by railroad employes," he said.

George M. Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives Association, said, in part:

"Railroad labor does not propose to permit the railroads to sabotage the President's recovery program. Railroad labor will resist every effort to further dry up the already too low purchasing power."

Congressman Demands Hague Quit Democratic National Committee

Washington. — Jerry O'Connell, Congressman from Montana, who, with Representative John G. Bernard, of Minnesota, was refused permission to speak in Jersey City by Mayor Frank Hague, has written a scorching letter to President Roosevelt, denouncing Hague as a crook and tyrant, who planned another "Memorial Day Massacre" if the forbidden speakers tried to deliver their addresses. After brief mention of Hague's constant violations of civil liberties, and of the Philadelphia Record's exposure of the graft and corruption in Jersey City, O'Connell says of Hague's plans for suppressing the meeting scheduled for May 7:

"The Jersey City police ordered all buildings and stores facing Journal Square to be closed at 6 p.m., and that windows be boarded up. Jersey City police were ordered out for duty in overseas caps that night. Tin hat brigades with machine guns were ordered out for duty. Even as early as 4 p.m. on Saturday afternoon, newspaper cameras were smashed in Jersey City and camera men brutally attacked when they attempted to photograph the beating of an anti-Hague man by Hague henchmen.

"I call upon you, Mr. President, as the head of our Democratic party, to demand the immediate resignation of Frank Hague from the vice-chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee. . . .

"In addition to this, I think it is high time that something definite be done about the Hague fascist regime in Jersey City. I hope it will not take violence and bloodshed to move you to take such action."

Mr. O'Connell announces his intention to speak in Jersey City on May 21.

EQUAL RIGHTS TO ~~ALL~~ none
SPECIAL PRIVILEGES TO ~~NONE~~ a favored few

If railroads are to survive — indeed, if ordered liberty under law is to survive — then public authority must give more than lip service to the democratic shibboleth of

"Equal rights to all, special privileges to none."

Yet the railroads are denied equal rights and their competitors are given special privileges—hence the "railroad problem."

If rate restrictions, for example the long-and-short-haul clause, be sound for railroads, then they are equally sound for other forms of transportation.

If taxing cars moving on railroad tracks be sound, it is equally sound to similarly tax boats, barges, airplanes, and motor vehicles.

If it be sound public policy for the taxpayers to furnish airports and beacon lights for airplanes; canalized rivers and locks and dams for boats and barges; and highways for motor vehicles free of charge, or for inadequate charges, then it is equally fair for the taxpayers to furnish terminals and maintain railroad tracks for railroads.

If it be sound for the federal government to finance and operate the Federal Barge Line in competition with privately owned transportation agencies, then it is equally sound for it to operate grocery stores, department stores, factories, filling stations, etc.

Neither railroads, nor any business, including agriculture, can prosper if our own government plays favorites—if the favored few get privileges denied the rest of us.

Many, perhaps most of our problems would fade like mist before the midday sun if we, the people, simply demanded of our public servants a good faith observance of that fundamental principle

"Equal rights to all, special privileges to none."

That is all the NC&StL asks—that is all it is entitled to—but that is now being denied—and, so long as equality of treatment and simple justice is denied, just so long will the "railroad problem" go unsolved.

Which shall it be — "Equal Rights" or "Special Privileges"?

The Value of a Will

By W. RAYMOND BLACKARD

Associate Professor of Law

The power to make a will, that is, to direct to whom one's property shall be given after one's death, though taken for granted by us, is, in fact, a great privilege. Good health is said to be most appreciated after its loss; so, if the legislature should today abolish the power to make a will, which it could legally do, there is no doubt but that the public sentiment would immediately demand its restoration.

If a person dies without executing a will, the law has provided a scheme for the distribution of his property. This "will" made by the law may perhaps do justice in most cases, but it may mean in your case, for some one reason or another, that persons inherit your property whom you would not wish to have it. For this reason, every person should make his own "will."

Keep Will Up-to-Date

Not only should every person make a will, but he should periodically revise it—keep it "up to date." More than one reason can be given for this. First, there is the simple fact that changes may take place in his family relations. Children may be born and they, as well as relatives and friends, may die. Charitable corporations to which gifts have been made may cease to exist.

Further, economic conditions may change rapidly. A gift of stock or bonds of a certain organization may today seem a handsome provision. But tomorrow. these securities may prove totally inadequate to provide for a loved one. The recent depression, of course, brought this idea home to laymen and lawyers alike.

No Revision by Law

Still another reason—the law will not revise your will for you. Though a will can be revoked at any time, yet once made, unless revoked, it stands until one's death (save for one or two exceptions). For example, if a man makes a will when he is 21 years old, becomes insane and continues so until his death, say 45 years later, this will stands regardless of the changed conditions in his family and estate.

So realize that you are given a great privilege when the law allows you to control property even after death. Exercise this privilege, not by xecuting a will, and then forgetting all about it, but by making a will and from time to time reading it over to make sure that it expresses your present wishes. If it does not, consult your lawyer.

W. U. Unions Formed in Capital, Breaking Company Union Hold On Big Telegraph Company

Washington. — Organization of two strong local unions of Western Union Telegraph Company employes here constitutes a smashing blow at company unionism and marks the start of an aggressive American Federation of Labor national organization drive in the communications field.

Organization of Western Union employes into bona fide unions has broken the hold of a long established company union of the Western Union, a stronghold of company unionism in American industry. The drive to organize Western Union employes will be the spearhead of an A. F. of L. attack on company unionism and will enlist the active support of A. F. of L. unions throughout the nation.

A. F. of L. Support Pledged

At a big mass meeting, charters were granted to the unions by the Commercial Telegraphers Union, A. F. of L. affiliate. Temporary officers were named and plans made for continuing the campaign until the Washington district is thoroughly organized under the banner of the CTU. One of the new locals is composed of commercial employes and the other of traffic employes.

President William Green, of the A. F. of L., sent a letter to the meeting welcoming the new members and pledging whole hearted support of the Federation to the drive, which is to be nation-wide and cover New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit and other big centers.

Lewis Hines, chief organizer of the A. F. of L., who read President Green's letter, delivered a stirring organization speech, in which he reiterated the Federation's promise of support, pledging 100 per cent co-operation.

Labor Act Explained

Rose S. Sullivan and John Schrier, A. F. of L. general organizers, who have been at work two months in the Washington territory, expressed gratification that their efforts had helped in bringing organization of the Western Union workers and outlined plans for continuation of their efforts.

Patrick J. Taft, legal counsel for the CTU and authority on the National Labor Relations Act, told the workers of their rights and privileges under the law and congratulated them on their success in forming strong unions.

The Washington meeting climaxed the organization campaign of the last three years directed by International President Frank R. Powers, of the CTU, who has been untiring in his efforts to organize Western Union and other telegraph employes.

HARCOURT A. MORGAN

Harcourt A. Morgan, vice-chairman of the TVA, is an imported citizen. He was born and schooled in Canada; but has worked, married and developed in the United States. He is in the news now, like everyone else in the TVA; but his services to agriculture entitled him to be in the news many years ago.

He is one of the (perhaps) dozen top men in the research which has almost wiped out the cattle tick in the south. He has done equally good work in charting the migrations and proper ways of dealing with the cotton boll weevil. He was prominent in agricultural research almost from his arrival in this country, dean of the Tennessee College of Agriculture in 1913, food administrator of the state during the World war, president of the University of Tennessee from 1919 till called to the TVA.

Wages-Hours Bill Seen Certain To Pass House; Green Hails Success of Petition Move

Washington. — One of the most interesting facts about the yanking of the wage-hour bill out of the House Rules Committee by petition is that the friends of the bill had quite a sizable surplus of signatures which did not have to be used. The 218 signatures required did not complete the roll call of those who were ready to sign, if necessary.

"I commend the House of Representatives for the prompt signing of the petition which brings the wage-hour bill out on the floor for a vote. By their action the signers of the petition showed themselves responsible to public opinion. It is now up to the Congress to pass this measure which carries out the fundamental principles espoused by the American Federation of Labor and has the overwhelming support of the American people."

House Victory Sure

No one doubts any longer that the bill will pass the House, probably with few and slight amendments. Representative Ramspeck, of Georgia, has not said whether he will introduce any amendments or not—probably he will. McReynolds, of Tennessee, is expected to bring in an amendment to cut out wage provisions, and regulate hours alone. The universal opinion is that "it won't pass." Attempts to improve the bill may fare the same. Apparently, Mead, of New York, one of labor's longest standing friends, expressed the feelings of a very large number of his fellows.

"Liberals in Congress could write a stronger bill," he said. "But there is general satisfaction with the present effort.

Bill Will Help

"While this bill begins at the almost shameful minimum rate of $11 per week, let us not forget that even this sum is greater than that being paid in many factories of the country. According to the Department of Labor, employes in many garment factories today receive wages as low as $6 or $7 a week.

"Low wages areas have attracted industries, ruined markets, undermined decent competition, bogged down buying power and created widespread unemployment."

The real hurdle which the bill still has to leap is in the conference committee between House and Senate. Chairman Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, of the Senate Education and Labor Committee, thinks that a "terrific job" lies ahead the conferees; but also thinks that the job can be done.

NATION-WIDE STRIKE CERTAIN IF RAILROADS INSIST ON PAY CUT, LABOR WARNS

Washington.—The Railway Labor Executives' association has issued a statement on the proposed railroad wage cut that speaks for itself, and is utterly impossible to misunderstand. Here is the larger part of it:

"If the railroad managements insist on going through with their attempt to cut employes' wages 15 per cent, the only ultimate result will be a nationwide strike.

"The railroad workers of America, already grossly underpaid, simply will not accept a wage reduction of any kind. They have already been heavy sufferers from the railroads' policy of putting the payment of interest to wealthy bondholders above decent living standards for their employes.

Strike May Be Necessary.

"The workers will not submit to any further victimization along that line. Any further attempt to injure their living standards will mean a fight.

"The railroads have served formal notice of their intention to reduce railroad workers' buying power $250,000,000 a year. The standard railroad labor organizations will, of course, observe, as they always have, the railway labor act in their effort to prevent this unjustified raid on railroad employes' pay envelopes. But if the railroads cannot be convinced that a wage reduction is not only unjustified, but is absolutely dangerous to the economic structure of this nation, it will be necessary for the railroad employes to use their economic strength to save the railroad industry from committing social suicide and dragging other industries along with it.

Won't Be Goat.

"Railroad labor to cooperate with management in solving the industry's problem, but the workers will not stand for being the goat.

"While the government is launching a four and one-half billion dollar spending program to increase buying power, the railroads are launching a movement to decrease buying power by $250,000,000. This is poor cooperation in face of the fact that the railroads have recently received authority from a governmental agency to increase their freight rates by $275,000,000 per year."

Obvious

Mother (trying to give a lesson)—Now, dear, what would happen if you broke one of the Ten Commandments?

Child (cheerful, but not very interested)—Then there'd be nine!

COMPROMISE TAX PASSES CONGRESS; GOES TO PRESIDENT

Washington. — The House has passed the compromise tax bill workedout in the conference committee between House and Senate. As the Senate passed the bill first, the compromise measure goes to the President. The subcommittee of the House Ways and Means Committee began work on the measure Nov. 4, last year.

The bill modifies provisions in the present law for taxes on undistributed profits and capital gains. The American Federation of Labor Executive Council is on record as favoring modification or repeal of these taxes, as steps to help business and employment.

Naturally, the measure is complex and not easy to set forth in detail. But a summary which gives a fair picture can be given in short space.

Income Taxes Unchanged.

First, the bill makes no changes in personal income taxes.

Second, it makes no changes of importance in gift and estate taxes.

Third, all major changes from the 1936 law are in the taxes on corporations and on capital gains.

The 1936 law imposed a penalty surtax on undistributed profits of corporations. The House exempted from this surtax corporations with incomes of less than $25,000 a year; but retained the rest, with some changes. The Senate wipes out the tax on undistributed profits altogether.

The compromise bill retains the surtax, but limits it to two years and fixes it at 2½ per cent, instead of a maximum of 27 per cent as in the House bill. It raises the standard corporation tax 1½ per cent.

Gains Tax Changed.

The compromise bill modifies the tax on capital gains to the decided advantage of the successful speculator; but keeps the principle, and does not very gently reduce the levy.

Fred M. Vinson, of Kentucky, chairman of the subcommittee which drafted the bill, attended his last session when the House passed the compromise. He has helped to draw ten tax bills in the last 14 years. He is acclaimed by nearly all experienced members as knowing more about taxes than any other member of the House. He answered all questions in that last session without pause and without consulting any notes; and the House stood up to applaud him when he said goodbye and left.

He was appointed by President Roosevelt to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, and was sworn in the day after the tax bill passed.

The labor government in France has given the workers a forty-hour week, collective labor contracts, paid vacations, ample damages for discharge, compulsory arbitration, governmentally supervised minimum wages, recognition of workers' rights to organize and the right to strike.

WHO WANTS TIPPING?

(From the Hartford Courant)

The bad practice of tipping continues because tipping is a social custom, and social customs are hard to change. Certainly few, if any, organized labor groups favor a practice that does not provide standard wages, that in fact puts the responsibility for a living wage on the whim of the customer. And few, if any, customers like the idea of paying for service in this indirect fashion as if the employment of waiters, Pullman car porters, hat check girls, servants and countless others were their responsibility. Rather let the actual employer pay a decent wage to those whose services are essential to the proper operation of his business, and, if necessary, charge the customer a little more to cover the added expense.

Worse Still

Two men had a cheery "night out," and when they met a few days later, they compared notes.

"That was a night and no mistake," said one of them. "Do you know, I finished up in the police station?"

Phenomenal Gains Made By Meat Workers' Union In Last Few Years

Chicago.—The Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America has made progress little less than phenomenal in recent years, information made public at international union headquarters here shows. This old affiliate of the American Federation of Labor has marched steadily onward, despite great obstacles and an effective program of organization has brought marked gains in both the slaughtering and retail branches of the meat industry.

Membership of the international union in February, 1938, passed the 120,000 mark and is still pointed upward, with substantial gains in prospect in coming months.

Eighty-five per cent of the total national membership of the Amalgamated are now working under strictly union agreements. The bitter opposition of the so-called "Big Four" packers has been broken down. The Swift, Armour and Cudahy companies, in all of their plants on the West coast, have strictly union agreements with the Amalgamated. All of the large packers at Pittsburgh are 100 per cent organized. The largest independent packer of the nation, Kingan & Company, has signed agreements with the Amalgamated covering their 7,000 employes in their six major plants.

Chicago Packers in Line.

Every packing plant affiliated with the Chicago Packers' Association is being operated under an agreement with the Amalgamated with the union shop and check-off systems included.

Every Butcher workman in association plants of Philadelphia, Richmond, Boston, Sioux Falls, S. D., San Francisco, Seattle, Portland, Tacoma, Butte, Mont., Salt Lake City, St. Louis, Detroit, Toledo, Cleveland, Cincinnati and 19 plants in Buffalo, New York, is either working under strictly closed shop contracts or with understandings with the employers that created better wages and better working conditions for all.

The Amalgamated drive in New York City has gained such momentum that large concerns like Goebel & Company and Stahl-Meyer have been brought into line under union shop conditions.

Nation-Wide Retail Pact.

In the retail field the Butcher Workmen accomplished in late 1937 the almost impossible in that they secured a nation-wide agreement with the United Retail Meat Dealers Association of the United States, covering all of the stores of the more than 30,000 members of this employers' organization.

They also negotiated a national agreement with Safeway stores, the second largest chain outfit in the nation, which guarantees union shop conditions for all of the 7,000 meat cutters employed by the Safeway Company.

The large Eastern and Midwest chain outfits of B. H. Kroger & Company has been successfully organized and agreements negotiated.

A union shop agreement has been secured with the First National Stores that operate in New England 2,700 units.

The large Sanitary Stores system operating in Washington, D. C., and vicinity has been thoroughly organized and union shop agreements signed.

A. & P. Chain Contract Expected

Thorough organization of the large Midwest division of the Atlantic & Pacific chain has been accomplished. Union shop contracts have been signed with the Atlantic & Pacific by the Amalgamated to cover all of the meat cutters employed by this concern at Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Milwaukee, Kansas City and scores of other cities. The Butcher Workmen have made contacts with the Atlantic & Pacific high officials that will, in all probability within a short time, result in the thorough unionization of the company from coast to coast.

IN THE NEWS

WILLIAM C. ROBERTS

William C. Roberts, chairman of the legislative committee of the A. F. of L., has been a union man longer than most of us have lived. He "j'ined" in 1875, and he is there yet.

He was born in Mount Vernon, Ohio, in 1856. He went through the grammar and high schools of the town; and in vacations and after graduation, he was "picking up" the printer's trade. He worked on a local paper for a time; then went to Fort Wayne, Indiana, where he joined the union at the age of 19.

For more than a dozen years thereafter, Roberts was a journeyman printer in the old sense of the word. He travelled. Travelling is believed by all to be a source of education; but travelling without spending money for it, which a journeyman printer used to do, gives a schooling in getting over the rails which is not down in the text books. Then he settled in Chicago; and, five years later, left the composing room to become a reporter. In 1900, he went on the staff of the Hearst paper in Chicago, doing labor and politics; and stayed there 18 years.

Then, in 1918, Sam Gompers wired him to take six months off and come to Washington to help get out a yearbook. He came, and he is here yet. He did not stop with the yearbook, but compiled the A. F. of L. History and Encyclopedia, first printed in 1919.

He is married, has three married daughters and five grandchildren.

Why Dance?

By MISS DOROTHY S. KOCH

Instructor of Physical Education

As long as man has existed he has danced. We are told that early primitive tribes greeted each other with the question, "What do you dance?" The dance was the tribesmen's medium of communication. The tribes understood it for it was an emotional expression of ideas.

Dance originated out of man's relation to his environment. He danced to pacify the evil spirits of the mysterious elements. He danced to reveal his happiness and to give thanks to his gods for the goodness bestowed upon him. Somewhat later, but centuries ago, the dance persisted as an important part of the ceremonial ritual of the early churches.

Modern education recognized the need for physical and emotional as well as mental expression. Traditionally dance has held an important place in physical education programs.

Elements of Dance

What music does with sound, what painting does with color, what sculpture does with mass, dance does with movements. First, locomotor, made up of the fundamental movements of walking, running, skipping, hopping, leaping and sliding. Second, non-locomotor or axial movements, executed on a fixed base, such as pushing, striking, lifting, advancing, retreating and pulling. And third, combined locomotor and axial movements. The three elements of movement are force, time and space. By changing any one of those the quality of the movement may be altered.

Dance is rightfully an art form involving creative processes. Fundamentally it is rhythmic. Response to rhythm may be conceived as a universal human experience, for life itself is rhythmic. Whether one speaks of dance, music, drama, sculpture, architecture or painting one finds the common element of rhythm present in each.

Importance of Rhythm

Practically all persons are conscious of rhythm to some degree, but many are unable to use it deliberately for they lack an understanding of its elements and laws.

Thus the conscious experiencing of a keen discriminating sense of rhythm represents one approach to motor-learning. This opens an avenue for the development of integrated mental, emotional and physical powers that should result in augmented pleasure. When rhythmic activities are properly selected and presented, they appeal to adults and children today just as they did throughout ancient times.

No one type of dance alone will meet the needs of all individuals because of the great variety of social conditions. Emphasis should be placed on the development of personality and individuality rather than on the development of a specialized dancer.

Thus dancing furnishes an individual with an outlet with which he will be enabled to counteract the strains of the hectic, hurried and exacting tasks of modern civilization. Its potentialities and possibilities may lead to a greater enjoyment throughout life. It offers a genuine appreciation that may well lead to worthwhile leisure activity. In this way dancing actually becomes related to life situations for it is a true recreation as well as a creative experience.

"The Noblest Roman"

A "Poetical" Classic, Rededicated to Emmett Rogers and Vic Hallmark with Humble Apologies to the Author.

For many years there reposed in the personal files of the editor of The Labor World a classic in the form of a "poem" on baseball. Old-timers will remember the "Letters of a Japanese Schoolboy," by Wallace Irwin, which ran in the newspapers and magazines. The editor, an avid reader of Mr. Erwin's classics, and, incidentally, a "wildly" baseball fan, considered the story of "Ichy-Ban" the best thing of its character which had ever come under his observation, and prized the clipping accordingly.

Recently, however, the copy was lost, and in order to "replenish the records" as well as to indicate the baseball spirit in Chattanooga at the present time, the tragic story of the "antique root" is printed below, as well as this writer can remember it:

FAN-AT-I-KAL POEM
About Ichy-Ban
An Antique Root.

ICHY-BAN, of Old Japan,
He were a famous Base-Ball Fan.
He used to screech, he used to preach,
And set for hours upon the bleach,
With howels and growels,
And when the Home Team missed a play
Them swaring words he used to say
Was very noted in his day
From Fujiyama to Cathay.

He knowed the score, and something more,
Of every team what pennants bore.
He knowed the batting records, too,
Of Hokasai and Tinkapoo.
O San, O San, a wildly fan
Was Ichy-Ban of Old Japan.
Now Ichy-Ban, them famous root,
He stay at Base-Ball Ground so long
His wife she fear there something wrong.

Because her husband been away
For 60-night and 60-day
She very cross. And so, of course,
She go and buy a nice divorce
And runny way from Ichy-Ban
With Kokomo, a Railroad Man.

So K. Batsu, a neighbor true,
To Base-Ball Ground he straightly go,
For tell poor Ichy-Ban what-so.
But Ichy-Ban, who still was there,
He gave ahead with fixy stare,
Sometime a snort, sometime a sware,
But otherwise what do he care?

"Your wife," say Batsu, "run away"—
But Ichy-Ban just snuff and say,
"The Pitcher very punk today."
Say Batsu, "Worser news I got,
Your wife has stole your house and lot.
It are a very wrong disgrace."
Say Ichy-Ban, with fixy face,
"That nothing; man just stole third base."

* * *

"I sorry, friend, what grief have come."
"Cut out," say Itch, "you spoil the game."

So Batsu, for them heartless speech,
Leave Ichy-Ban upon the Bleach,
To howly, growly, sporty croak,
To hooty, tooty, rooty squawk,
In latest style of baseball talk.

Until one day the home team won,
He got such banzais in his tongue
He die shouting up a lung.

* * *

And so today for sight to see
Some tourists find his repartee:
"Ichy-Ban, of Old Japan,
Were just a average Base-Ball Fan."

Cooks' and Waiters' Scraps

Louise Tinker, Correspondent

We have a good story for you this week, but honestly we are afraid to tell it. When this is printed we may lose one if not both of our ears, but we will take a chance. It concerns one of our waitresses. It was on Friday afternoon about 2 o'clock that she called me and suggested that I meet her as usual to go to school. I asked her to meet me at Tenth and Market streets. I got the next bus, but when I arrived at the appointed place the popular culinary worker was absent. I began looking everywhere for her. Very soon I heard that familiar voice, "Tinker, here I am." I searched until I discovered the waitress standing in the door of a nearby restaurant. I questioned her as to why she was in this restaurant when they do not have a card. I soon learned that she thought this restaurant was one in the black further north. She was so embarrassed over the incident that we will not divulge her identity.

If we make an error we are glad to apologize. We are not at all mistaken when we tell you that Paul and Reginald Stagmaier, Glenn L. Taylor and James Bowser, of the Archer Paper company, daily patronize the Glasgow Tavern. To further prove this statement let us say that on Tuesday of this week Reginald Stagmaier and Glenn Taylor came to eat at 11 minutes of 11 o'clock while 4 minutes later Paul Stagmaier and James Bowser appeared on the scene.

Hurrah! And another union house serves that good union-made Grant-Patten ice cream — Lowe's cafe, we mean.

We had a nice little visit with one of our out-of-town bakers one day this week—Kenneth Henley — from Tracy City. Kenneth really has that old union spirit and if all those bakers from Tracy City are as much interested in the promotion of organized labor as this one is some day they will make history.

Mead Declares Pay-Hour Bill Necessary for Protection Of Fair Wage Districts

Washington.—Congressman Jas. M. Mead, of New York, declares that a federal wage-hour bill is absolutely necessary, not only for justice to the workers, but also to stop the turmoil caused by the migration of industry to low wage states and sections.

"New York industries have striven to maintain fair wage levels but competition with products manufactured in low wage areas have made the effort difficult and, in some cases, impossible of accomplishment," Mr. Mead says.

"As a result, there has been a steady departure of factories from our state to the lower wage sections of the country. In every industrial community between Buffalo and Albany, we can today view the devastating results of this exodus of industry. Rochester, Utica, Oswego and Troy are but examples of the hundreds of smaller communities suffering from unemployment occasioned by the closing down of manufacturing plants. New York City, likewise, has suffered from this economic plague.

Uniform Law Is Vital.

"How can New York industry pay twice the wage scale paid in some other states and hope to compete with those products of cheap labor? Of course, the answer is—it cannot be done. If this is true then, we are badly in need of a uniform minimum wage law to protect our own industries. Unless we do so, and do it quickly, our industrial centers are doomed.

"Let us look at one of New York's typical industries and see the existing situation. New York manufactures approximately 70% of women's clothing. Most of the workers in this industry enjoy a 35-hour week. In the cloak industry, wages average from $1.10 to $1.65 per hour. In the dress industry, wages average from 75c to 90c an hour. These wages run fully twice as high as wages in many other states, making the same articles Specifically, in the neckwear, skirt and underwear industry, New York industries pay an average wage of 56c an hour. The same class of worker in Texas receives 31.8c, or 56.8% of the New York wage. In Maryland that same worker receives 33.3c per hour and in North Carolina, he receives 32c per hour.

North Offends, Too.

"A Mississippi cotton dress factory pays $10.68 for 105 hours of work and $15.39 for 137 hours work. This means that employes in that factory work from 50 to 70 hours per week for a pittance of from $5 to $7 per week. In New York state, the employe would receive triple that wage for one-half the time.

"It should not be said, however, that New York and its adjoining industrial states are without offenders in this direction. A belt factory in New Jersey pays $10 a week for 48 hours of work. A Boston curtain factory pays full-time wages of from $7 to $10 a week.

"In connecticut, piece-work is done in homes at starvation pay. It seems incredible, but home workers are being paid as little as 5c an hour for the most exacting and tedious type of sewing work. As home work laws have been tightened in New York state, it is found that some of our industries are sending industrial home work into North Carolina, where it is being done at a wage so low that it is shocking.

"The remedy for these evils will begin with the passage of the hours and wages bill, and we cannot afford to delay in its accomplishment."

WORKERS' RIGHTS ARE UPHELD IN SUPREME COURT DECISION

Ruling in Mackay Radio Case Involving Labor Relations Act Affirms Principle That Workers Who Strike Retain Their Status as Employes.

Washington.—The following review of the decision of the Supreme Court in the Mackay Radio and Telegraph Company case, involving the National Labor Relations Act, was prepared by Joseph A. Padway, counsel for the American Federation of Labor:

The United States Supreme Court in the recent case of Mackay Radio & Telegraph Company vs. National Labor Relations Board, decided Monday, May 16th, has affirmed a principle of vital importance to the employe.

The principle long contended for by labor is that the employe by going out on strike against his employer does not lose his status as such employe, but on the contrary, retains all his rights and is entitled to all of the benefits of such status. The principle has been set forth in the Wagner Act, and the dicision of the Supreme Court represents an important affirmation of labor's rights in this respect.

In a unanimous opinion the court upheld an order of the National Labor Relations Board requiring reinstatement of five strikers whom the company had refused to take back after the strike because of their union affiliation and activity. In answer to the contention of the company that the men were no longer employes and therefore not entitled to the requirements of the Wagner Act that no discrimination be exercised against them because of their union membership the court stated:

"The plain meaning of the act is that if men strike in connection with a current labor dispute their action is not to be construed as a renunciation of the employment relation and they remain employes for the remedial purposes specified in the act."

In this decision the working man need not fear the loss of all his rights as an employe or the sacrifice of privileges built up perhaps over a long period of years, solely because of the fact that he has struck against certain abuses. The decision affirming and clarifying the principles established in the Wagner Act marks a distinct advance in the protection of the rights of the worker.

It should be noticed, however, that there is in the opinion language to the effect that if the strike was not called because of some violation of the Wagner Act and the employer was not guilty of an unfair labor practice, that the employer is privileged to hire other workers to take the place of the strikers, and if these workers are hired under promise of a long term employment the company is under no obligation to discharge them to reinstate the strikers when the strike is over and they seek to return to work. Were the strike called because of unfair labor practice, such as refusal to bargain on the part of the employer, then workers hired to take the place of the strikers would have to be dismissed regardless of the length of time for which the employer had agreed to keep them in his employ.

Another principle of interest to labor established in the decision is that no technical objections to the procedure of the Labor Board in connection with complaints against the employer will be permitted. After the decision in the Kansas City Stock Yards case (Morgan vs. Wallace, decided May 9th, 1938) it was feared that the efforts of the Board to protect the rights of the worker would be seriously hampered because of procedural requirements. In the McKay case it was made clear that the decision in the stock yards case will not be construed as a technical limitation to any particular form of procedure. All that is necessary is that the parties be fully informed of the charges against them and given an opportunity to be heard concerning them.

Under the Wagner Act Congress had prescribed no particular detailed mode of procedure. In this case the court said all that the board must do is fulfill the substantial requirements of appraising the parties what they are being charged with and giving the parties an opportunity to be heard and review any such charges.

Uncertain Times

Rarely or never was the future more uncertain than at the present time. Politically, no one can estimate what is likely to happen either nationally or internationally. There are few governments that are certain of remaining in power, or nations that are free from the anxiety of war or of revolution. Many nations are arming themselves with feverish haste in order to be prepared for eventualities either internal or external. But what these eventualities are likely to be no one can foresee.

Economically, no nation can be sure of continued well-being. Indeed every nation is very much concerned aobut its economic or financial future. Political uncertainty is creating economic and financial uncertainty, and economic and financial uncertainty is creating political uncertainty. Unfortunately, the vicious circle is growing wider and wider, and the world is approaching a state of political, economic and financial collapse.

Mr. Roosevelt's decision to resume his pump-priming by immense government credit expenditures has for the moment reduced the prospect of an almost complete collapse of the world's business machine, and has reduced the immediate danger of national and international political complications in consequence of acute economic and financial distress. But no one can gauge how long these huge American credit expenditures will or can continue.

No Doubt of It

Two small boys were discussing the capabilities of their mothers, who were active club members.

"My mother can talk on just about any subject," one lad declared proudly.

"Aw, shucks," retorted the other, "my mother can talk without any subject at all."

Trade Commission To Investigate Bread Prices

Washington.—The American people are going to have another inquiry—and perhaps something stronger than an inquiry—on the price of bread. D. E. Montgomery, consumers' counsel of the AAA, has made a preliminary study of the matter and reported on it to Secretary Wallace of agriculture, and Wallace has passed that report on to the federal trade commission and the department of justice.

Briefly, the price of bread has held tight—"with extraordinary rigidity," Mr. Montgomery calls it, while the prices of the ingredients of bread are going down. And this cannot be laid to labor. The report says:

"Changes in labor costs and in taxes during recent months do not appear to explain the need for an increase of the margin (between costs and price) of white bread. Labor costs of baking and delivering bread comprise slightly less than 50 per cent of the margin between ingredient costs and the wholesale price of bread; taxes comprise around 2 per cent of the margin between ingredient costs and wholesale prices."

The FTC conducted an nivestigation on this line many years ago, and found that the price of bread changed very much less than the price of its ingredients, particularly of wheat.

ENACTMENT OF WAGE BILL ASKED BY MISS ANDERSON

Women's Bureau Head Visions Benefits to Working Women from Blanket Minimum Pay Provisions Applicable to All Workers.

Washington.—Miss Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor, in a statement asking Congress to pass the federal wage and hour bill during the present session, emphasized the importance of the bill to women employes.

She said that industries with low wage standards are the ones which will be most largely affected by the proposed legislation, and that these substandard industries include the bulk of women who work for a living.

Miss Anderson expressed particular pleasure in the fact that the bill does not differentiate between male and female workers.

"A federal law establishing minimum wage standards without sex distinction," she said, "may be hailed as a magna charta for women workers."

Stressing the point that those who pay taxes should give their united support to the measure, Miss Anderson said:

"The taxpayers of the nation should recognize that they have a stake in wage-hour legislation because in the end they will have to pay the difference between low wages and the cost of living. In New York City alone there were nearly 7,000 women in one month who were receiving relief to supplement inadequate earnings. Reports from other sections of the country a few years ago told of full-time workers being given relief grants because their employers refused to pay them enough to live on. If the taxpayers do not pay the difference in relief funds they will pay it in increased costs for institutional care and other services to take care of the persons broken or warped in body, mind, or moral fibre through lack of the essentials of healthful living.

Quebec Government Minimum Wage Policy Encourages Non-Union And Company Union Industry

Montreal. — The Duplessis government has approved Edict No. 4 of the Quebec Fair Wage Board which fixes minimum wages in industrial and commercial establishments at from 17 to 25 cents an hour. This is a redraft of a former ordinance which was withdrawn because of complaints. It divides the province into four zones, with progressively lower minimums, but the zones consist only of incorporated cities and towns.

The original edict exempted only farm laborers and domestics in private households; the new edict exempts religious institutions, hospitals, co-operative banks, and a variety of other institutions from the obligation to pay the fixed minimum wages.

Small Town Industry Aided

To provide for its maintenance, the wage board will make a levy of one-half of one per cent a year on wage rolls, collectable from employers.

Quite a number of large manufacturing, as well as mining enterprises, are located in rural districts or unincorporated "company towns." These will not come under the minimum wage edict. And industries in the small towns are given competitive advantages over those in larger cities.

The Union National government takes credit for what it calls a policy to encourage industry in rural districts and small towns.

Anti-Union Aim Indicated

In such places there are usually no unions and in any case organization is difficult; they are therefore unlikely to come under the law of collective agreements, or if they do it will be through the organization of company unions — a procedure which has already been adopted in some districts.

The general line of the government's policy, and recent official indiscretions, indicate a design to sabotage collective agreements between employers and free unions and to give the "Fair Wage Board" arbitrary jurisdiction over the wages of all workers in Quebec.

Like a Dividend

The travelers were discussing railway matters.

"I consider," said one, "that the single fare for the double journey is a very good investment."

Erskine Bakery Must Disband Company Union

National Labor Relations Board Rules That LDU Is Illegal.

Subsequent to the hearings recently held by the national relations board in Chattanooga on a complaint filed by the AFL Bakers' union against the Erskine Baking company, the board ruled that the League of Democratic Unions was a company union and that the company must sever all relations with the dummy.

The dummy union was sired by Jac Chambliss, who testified in the hearing that he suddenly converted himself overnight from a corporation lawyer into a labor organizer.

Erskine management will probably make an appeal against the board decision.

Meier's Markets Declared Unfair By Central Body

Meier's meat markets, located in the two Easy Way stores, have been declared "unfair" by Central Body. This does not mean that the Easy Way management is unfair. Easy Way does not own the meat department, but leases the space to the Meier interest.

Local 600, Meatcutters, report that Mr. Meier refused to sign the new agreement, which has already been accepted by a great many markets, and that nothing could be done to avoid the fight which the local is putting on.

According to C. C. Peek, international representative for the Butcher Workmen, "Local 600 expects the usual fine cooperation of the labor movement in refusing to patronize the Meier meat markets in the Easy Way stores. Our pickets will remain in front of the Meier locations in order to tell our friends of this situation."

LABOR BOARD ELECTION WILL BE HELD JUNE 13-15 THROUGHOUT TEPCO SYSTEM

Has Valuable Background to Support Electrical Workers Capture Bargaining Agency at Later Date—AFL Union Has Valuable Background to Support Electrical Workers

Employes of the Tennessee Electric Power Company will ballot on Monday, June 13, through Wednesday, June 15, on the question of electing the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers as bargaining agency for all of the employes of the company coming under the jurisdiction of the Brotherbood. This election was ordered as a result of a hearing held by a field examiner of the National Labor Relations Board last February.

Date of the election was set by Judge Charles N. Fiedelson, regional director of the Labor Board in Atlanta, and made public Wednesday.

Representatives of the Labor Board will conduct the election. There will be four traveling ballots, giving all eligible workers an opportunity to cast their ballots in person. The outlaying districts will vote on Monday and Tuesday, the 13th and 14th of June, and the vote will be conducted in Chattanooga and Nashville on Wednesday, the 15th. The election in Chattanooga will be held in the old city waterworks building, Tenth and Market streets. The election in Nashville will be held in the old Federal Custom House, Eighth and Broad streets, room 246, second floor.

Territory Embraced

The territory covered by the operations of the Tennessee Electric Power Company extend from the North Carolina and Georgia line on the east, to as far as Hohenwald, Selma and Waverly on the west. All hydro plants operated by this company come under the called election.

Five Strong Local Unions

Five strong local unions of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers are located within the territory covered by the power company. Local Union No. 846, Chattanooga; Local Union No. 603, Nashville; Local Union No. 961, Columbia; Local Union No. 498, Murfreesboro and Manchester, and Local Union No. 541, Cleveland, will be the focal points in the campaigning to be done by union officials between now and the date of the election.

Purpose of Election

The election was called by the I. B. E. W. for the purpose of becoming the officially selected bargaining agency for all workers in the power company's employ who engage in the production, distribution, operation, maintenance and construction of the electrical departments. There is no question at issue between the company and the union, and both the company officials and union officials are co-operating with the Labor Board in holding the election.

"Yes" and "No" Ballot

The ballot to be used in the voting will be a strictly "Yes" and "No" ballot. That is, the ballot will read something like this:

"Do you wish the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, to represent you for the purposes of collective bargaining?" The vote will be "Yes," or "No."

While the name of no other organization will be on the ballot, the fact remains that to vote "No" is the same as voting for a radical organization, like the CIO, because the CIO, or some other radical organization, would immediately become active among the workers employed by the Tennessee Electric Power Company if a majority of the voters should cast their ballots against the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Officers and members of the five local unions, it is said, will make effort to reach every worker in the territory before the polls close, and extend a cordial invitation to all eligible workers to vote for the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Colored Teachers To Meet June 9

Call Conference ON Cab Insurance Law

The city commission Tuesday afternoon fixed 11 o'clock Friday morning, June 10, as the time for a conference on the taxicab liability insurance question.

This was arranged at the request of T. R. Cuthbert, representing the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council. This group has adopted a resolution requesting enforcement of the taxicab liability insurance ordinance.

An ordinance providing for compulsory taxicab insurance was passed months ago by the board of commissioners. Several times extensions were granted in the enforcement date.

Johnson City Is "All Set" for TFL Delegations

Beautiful Scenic Attractions Will Be Viewed—Central Body Announces Hospitable Welcome for June 6-7-8 Sessions.

Johnson City, May 31.—The Johnson City Central Labor union met in special called session last night, May 30, and consummated final plans for the convening of the state federation here June 6. All is now in readiness for the coming of the delegates, and their relatives and friends.

The highlight of the entertainment features during the convention will be the excursion on the "narrow gauge" railroad to Cranberry, N. C. Plans were completed for the chartering of a special train over this miniature scenic railway. Accommodations are being provided so everyone can make the trip if they so desire. This railway is known over a wide area of the country, and many hundreds make this trip every year. The route traverses the famous Doe River Gorge and penetrates deep into the Unaka range of the famed Appalachian mountains. The rugged scenery and beautiful streams and waterfalls all along this route has won for this section comments from all parts of the country. It is referred to by many as "Little Switzerland," and delegates and visitors can rest assured that plenty of interesting sights will be shown them when they assemble here next Monday.

Other events planned will be a visit to the huge rayon plants in this vicinity, a tour of the National Soldiers Home here and the large pottery-making plants at Erwin, where one of the largest local unions in East Tennessee is located, which is affiliated with the Central Body. An opportunity will also be given to visit the U. S. government fisheries nearby.

There are also many historical points in and around Johnson City which will be accessible to all who care to visit these places.

From all indications, the coming convention gives promise of being one of the most profitable and enjoyable for the delegates in many years.

A Municipal Band

We have had a "band in the head" for such a long time that we simply must get something to the job. In the next community we have the Municipal band, built here to bring visitors and tourists to Chattanooga. It does not have a municipal band. A good municipal band would provide a series of free concerts in our public parks which would delight thousands every week.

Why doesn't Central Labor union, under the leadership of our Musicians' union and the Chattanooga department of recreation, organize a Central Labor union municipal band?

This band could give regular Sunday afternoon or evening concerts at Warner park and round out an already good park program, getting pay by our own Bob Cooke.

In addition, the Central Body band would be "out stuff" a Labor day parades, charity balls, or other projects which would not be in competition with professional musicians.

Somebody say something! Is the idea good, or is it just another one of my ideas?

Van Arsdale Plays Ruby Falls Garden

George Van Arsdale's union orchestra has been given the contract to play every Wednesday and Saturday night at the Ruby Falls Roof Garden dance halfway up Lookout mountain.

The Roof Garden is equipped to accommodate more than 200 additional couples for dancing; also additional space has been provided for refreshment tables. Arrangements have been made to broadcast a part of each of the dance programs.

Haynes Names Joe Roberts Berry Manager

Joseph B. Roberts, Chattanooga attorney, was named as Hamilton county campaign manager for Senator George L. Berry last Friday by Walter Haynes, state manager for Berry.

Manager Roberts is expected to open Berry headquarters here soon and start his campaign work. Senator Berry is the first candidate in the state-wide primary to perfect an organization in this county. Others are expected to start their campaign organizations here within a short time.

A Mere Scratch

"Now look here, Sarah," said Mr. Wigby, "don't you send any more shirts to that laundry!"

How Bills Are Killed

There are two ways of blocking a bill in the senate when the enemies of that bill are not numerous enough to vote it down.

One is to emasculate it with amendments, making exceptions or perverting the original meaning. That plan has been used in the house, too.

The other depends on the senate rules and traditions which allow almost unlimited debate. In this case, talk on any subject eats up the time until everybody wants to adjourn

Both these plans are being used in the senate to kill or weaken both the recovery bill and the wage-hour bill. You can bet that a long drawn speech in the senate from now to the end of the session on anything from Methusaleh's birthday to the size of boot worn by George Washington is made for the purpose of delaying one or both of those bills.

Relief in the States

Next time any talking jackass tells you that all relief should be handled by the separate states, tell him this:

That three separate states, Illinois, Ohio and Kentucky, were holding special sessions in the same week to make relief appropriations, and that other special sessions have been and several more will need to be held for the same purpose.

That 34,000 families admitted to be destitute in Cook county, Illinois, received no relief allotments for May.

That only by "the poor dividing their scanty meals with the poor" has stark starvation been kept out of several industrial cities in Ohio.

That "leaving it to the states" is mainly a scheme which permit reactionary interests to concentrate on each state in turn to smash relief to the smallest possible amount.

Brandeis Wins Long Fight

Mr. Justice Brandeis, some weeks ago, saw his 16-year struggle for common sense in one big matter of taxation crowned with success. In 1922 the supreme court, by a vote of 6 to 3, declared that a state, Oklahoma, could not tax the profits of oil companies which operated on lands leased from the United States. Brandeis led the dissenters. Ten years later, in 1932, the supreme court, by a vote of 5 to 4, declared that the United States income tax could not be applied to the profits of oil companies which leased lands from Oklahoma. Justice Brandeis wrote one of the strongest dissenting opinions that even he ever penned; and Justices Stone, Roberts and Cardozo joined him.

In March of this year the matter came up again; and this time Brandeis was on the winning side. Chief Justice Hughes wrote the decision, in which he said:

"We are convinced that the rulings in Gillespie v. Oklahoma (1922) and Burnet v. Coronado Oil and Gas company (1932) are out of harmony with correct principle and accordingly they should be, and they now are, overruled."

Let no one imagine that this is a small thing. Congressman Lewis, of Maryland, a profound student of taxes, estimates that the court's decision in 1932 has cost the federal treasury at least $3,000,000,000. Quite a number of men could be put to work on three billion dollars.

Fine Record of the I. B. E. W.

The Labor World is devoting much of its space in this week's issue to the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, because of the election to be held among the employes of the Tennessee Electric Power Company on June 13, 14 and 15. This is one of the most important events in the lives of the workers of the power company, and it is because of the importance of the matter that we are devoting so much space to the coming election.

Under the direction of the National Labor Relations Board this election is held to determine whether or not the employes of the power company want the I. B. E. W. to represent them in collective bargaining with the company on wages, hours and working conditions.

The Labor World is most anxious for the workers to vote "Yes" in this coming election. We express this wish because we know that the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers is one of the most progressive labor organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. We know the history of the International since its inception 47 years ago. We know the high type of leadership within the International organization of the I. B. E. W. We know the high type of citizenship among the officers and members of the local unions here in Chattanooga and throughout the state of Tennessee. We know hundreds of the fine men employed by the Tennessee Electric Power Company, and we know them to be citizens of highest type. Many of them are already members of the local unions of the I. B. E. W., and those who are not members will find in the union men of their kind, and fraternal, friendly atmosphere of brotherly regard which marks the I. B. E. W. as an outstanding labor organization.

The editor of The Labor World is also secretary-treasurer of the Tennessee State Federation of Labor, and speaking in this capacity, we again express the hope that all of the eligible voters in this coming election will cast their votes in favor of the I. B. E. W. The whole labor movement in Tennessee will be highly pleased to receive information when the election has been held that the employes of the Tennessee Electric Power Company have voted in favor of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers as their bargaining agency. In this capacity, also, we urge the voters to vote "Yes" in the election on June 13, 14 and 15.

The history of the I. B. E. W. is rich in achievements obtained for those people who make their living by working in the electrical industry. But its efforts have not stopped at the point where its own membership was served. The I. B. E. W. has aided and assisted workers in all lines and groups. Their organizers and representatives have ever been ready to lend a willing hand to any group of workers who were oppressed, or who were trying to advance their interests. The I. B. E. W. has been a most powerful force and influence in the advancement of the workers of America in all lines of endeavor.

The Chattanooga Labor World and the labor movement through the state of Tennessee and the south will give sincere welcome to the addition of the employes of the Tennessee Electric Power Company to the family of organized labor.

HERE IS THE ORDER!

Two Cities Building Houses For Families on Relief

Washington.—The National Association of Housing Officials reports that Detroit is already well launched on a project of building "relief houses," and that Los Angeles is clearing the ground for a start.

Detroit has completed ten houses, the first installment of a project of 175. They are on city-owned land, separate dwellings, each on a lot 35 feet by 110. Each has a hot air heating system, full basement, gas refrigeration and stationary laundry tubs, and each is fitted for a familly of four.

Common labor on the building was done by the WPA and local receivers of welfare. Skilled labor was picked from the civil service lists.

Detroit fully believes that the city is saving money by building instead of renting, but doesn't give details. Los Angeles county puts it in dollars and cents. It is found that property acquired by the county at tax sales and at county farm will afford room for 100 houses. The Regional Planning commission figures that houses can be built on this land, with space sufficient to house a family, and return full costs in 30 years at from $10.60 to $12.20 a month each. The county now spends an average of $19.23 per family for rent and utilities.

Twenty of these houses will start at once.

Fuller's, a branch of Bradley & Bandy, which is located at 15 East Main street, furnishes our who's who this week—the young lady in question is Margie Latha. Margie hails from "Georgia"—Rome to be exact. She has been working at the waitress profession for almost two years. The job with Fuller's is her first and the manager of this drug store, Earl Morrow, admitted that this young lady is very efficient. This waitress spends her leisure hours seeing movies. She likes to dance. As a sports fan she prefers football. When we asked her favorite food she frowned, pondered a moment and then her face was aglow with a big smile. She answered, "Popcorn or peanuts." Didn't we say in the very beginning that Margie hailed from the state of Georgia and aren't peanuts Georgians' favorite eating?

Patience

During the first evening of a visit an elderly woman who had never seen the sea before was found intently watching the lighthouse.

"What infinite patience sailors have," she observed, noticing that she was no longer alone.

"Why?" asked her daughter.

"Well," she replied, "the wind has blown that light out 38 times since I've been watching, and each time they relighted it."

HERE IS A PICTURE OF INT. BRO. ELECTRICAL WORKERS

The electrical industry attracts young men, and retains men because it is a pioneering industry. It is constantly opening new frontiers. Innovations and electrical devices make the trade everlastingly interesting and at the same time command allegiance of men with imagination, and real talent. It is an industry demanding a high degree of skill and intelligence and one that has produced a resourceful, keen craftsman.

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers has ever organized without being the life of the industry. The improvement it got became available for communities and a few years before the birth of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, in some instances by a generation. It has always been [illegible] Carolina and in the Tennessee Valley it is a union of pioneers. It is a union of pioneers in all the various branches of the electrical industry. It includes inside wiremen, outside linemen, [illegible] operators, cable splicers, substation operators, meter men, power house workers, armature winders and repairmen, electrical workers in manufacturing and numerous other skilled crafts. There is room in the organization for every type of worker connected with the world-flung electrical industry.

Employes of the Tennessee Electric Power company will vote in labor board election to be held on June 13, 14 and 15, will have a chance to bring these workers into a great family organized workers and organized industry of far-flung strength and power.

Nearly 70 per cent of private electric utilities are now organized, and doing business with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. These private electric utilities have been organized in most part to include all workers in central stations. Agreements have been adjusted to meet this important section of the electrical industry, and conform to its public character.

The brotherhood is virtually 100 per cent organized on the TVA at Boulder dam, Grand Coulee, and in all the important municipal, public power projects.

In the important electrical manufacturing field, the brotherhood is strongly entrenched. It is doing business in agreement with conduit, switchboard, panel board, enclosed switch, signal apparatus, telephone, wire, cable, outlet boxes, lamp, fixtures, lighting fixtures, radio, portable lamp, master control board, [illegible] fire electrode and floor box manufacturers. There is no fabricated material used in electrical industry which cannot now be purchased bearing the I. B. E. W. union label. More than 250 manufacturing concerns are now doing business with the brotherhood, including the largest manufacturers of materials in the world.

In addition, the following fields are well organized, electric and neon signs, [illegible] construction, radio broadcasting, marine, railroad and other kindred branches.

"Collective Bargaining."

This is an old and honorable phrase. It was invented by two British writers and trade unionists, Sidney and Beatrice Webb, in 1891. The Webbs defined collective bargaining by implication as "negotiations between employers and work people when the work people act in concert and the employers meet a collective will." When the Webbs invented the phrase they had only free voluntary labor unions in mind because the company union did not exist, and only arrived as an American employer policy twenty years after. There is a vigorous battle on by anti-union employers to interpret the words "collective bargaining" to mean company union. That is a distortion of the historic meaning of collective bargaining. Every worker in America who wishes to protect his own interests and to forward labor's cause throughout the United States can do no greater service than to work up to the point best at his point and to vote against the company union and for the free, voluntary affiliation with the American Federation of Labor.

Now, what is the company union? One of the best descriptions that have been offered is by a factory worker. It is as follows:

"The company union is really not a union at all, but rather a form of labor management adopted to serve the needs of the employer. For instance, in large industries it costs money to handle men in groups that is out of the [illegible] The company union is a form of 'group handling.' It is neither self-initiated nor self-perpetuating. The company creates it, carries it on, and dominates it at will. Investigation discloses that the company union can alter the fundamental constitution or by-laws of the average company union."

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers is generally known as a progressive and modern labor union. That this is so cannot be denied. This union has also enjoyed remarkable co-operative relations with employers in its field. That this is so is significant. It means that industrial relations have advanced on the basis of research data, scientific knowledge and intelligence. Few strikes occur. It is a well-known fact that many employers look upon the union as a stabilizing and constructive force in the industry and often turn to it for aid in their own practical problems.

The union strives to make the union label stand for quality work in much the same way the sterling mark on silver stands for quality. Many unions have arrangements by which they guarantee the work done by their members. The business manager who is a trained electrician, practically acts as an inspector on jobs and endeavors to prevent faulty installations.

Legislative Service.

A private citizen, no matter how much interested he is in government, and no matter how much he realizes that government affects his daily life and his bread and butter, can influence that government but little. As American life is organized, private citizens must work through economic groups in order to make the full force of their citizenship felt. A worker who does not belong to a labor union is almost disenfranchised. In a labor union he has a chance to see the aims of collective workers expressed and forwarded. In keeping with other large labor unions the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers has a legislative service. It keeps in close touch with bills in congress that affect the life of workers and is in daily contact with government departments, seeking to present the workers' case before the experts which the government employs. This service has grown immeasurably under recent administrations.

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers has protected all electrical workers irrespective of organization in the electrical manufacturing industry, the radio broadcast industry, the railroad industry, the public utility, telephone and electrical construction industries. These basic industries, however, do not indicate the full scope of the activities of this particular union.

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers is an outstanding, nation-wide labor union and regardless of where the craftsman works, his membership in his trade organization remains continuous, becoming more and more valuable to him every year. It strives constantly to improve the industry and its standards. It is known for carrying out its promises and agreements. It has succeeded in reducing working time of its members from the 12-hour day and seven-day week to an eight-hour day with a five to six-day week. It has raised the wage rate from 20c per hour, with no pay for overtime, to a rate of from 75c to $2 per hour with time and one-half and double time for overtime, and frequently with vacations with pay, in addition. Membership in such a labor organization is the best kind of insurance for the protection of the worker's industrial and economic condition.

One year or more	$ 300.00
Two years or more	475.00
Three years or more	650.00
Four years or more	825.00
Five years or more	1,000.00

This insurance is provided by the Electrical Workers' Benefit association, incorporated in 1922 under the laws of the District of Columbia and fully supervised by the insurance department of the District of Columbia. To date (December 31, 1937) the association has paid to the heirs of deceased I. B. E. W. members the sum of $5,002,528. The mortuary fund of the benefit association is now over the $4,500,000 mark. This accomplishment speaks for itself.

A pension of $40 per month is given to all retiring members who have reached the age of 65 years and have 20 years' continuous standing in the organization.

U. S. Delegates Are Named To World Labor Conference

Washington. — President Roosevelt has appointed Frieda S. Miller, of the New York state department of labor, and Carter Goodrich, U. S. labor commissioner at Geneva, Switzerland, as U. S. government delegates to the 24th conference of the International Labor organization convening at Geneva in June.

Henry I. Harriman, chairman of the board of the New England Power association, Boston, was appoined employer delegate, and Robert Watt, of the American Federation of Labor, was appointed labor delegate.

Take It or Leave It

Points of View Picked Up From Various Sources

CY KOLOGY, EDITOR

Some American "liberals" are funny birds. In truth, they are not liberals at all. They only think they are. The very word liberal connotes freedom from narrowness, bigotry or "bondage to authority or creed." In the field of politics, it means "inclined to democratic or republican ideas, as opposed to monarchial or aristocratic," says the dictionary. Yet some liberals—indeed it is no exaggeration to say many liberals—dote on the despotic regime of soviet Russia, the very antithesis of liberalism. This fact has long puzzled those of analytical turn of mind. They, with the ability to see more than the surface of things, know there is nothing in common between the true meaning of liberal and liberalism and the bloody rule of Dictator Stalin and his simon-pure communist party, tiny in comparison with the huge total of the Russian population.

* * *

Consider soviet Russia. Liberals do not exist there, except under cover. If they break cover, they die. That is the literal truth. Stalin and his crew, after the manner of dictatorships from time immemorial, fight all opposition. In the last two years, the Stalinist "purge" has killed thousands. Able men in all walks of life have been the victims. Heresy hunting is rife. Terror rules, despite talk and gestures toward inauguration of democratic methods. Russia, under Stalin, is as much a dictatorship as Germany or Italy.

But the liberals—many of them—praise Russia, condemn Germany and Italy. It can be admitted that Germany and Italy, now, are more a menace to democratic nations than soviet Russia. Only a few years ago this was not the case. Russia, through communist organizations directly affiliated with her own communist rulers, sought to foment revolution in every civilized nation, including the United States. Then came the rise of the fascist dictatorships, quite largely due to fear aroused by communist agitation.

The reds brought not revolution, but reaction. Russia, sensing attack by the fascists, changed her tune and began to profess love for the democracies. A "united front" was sought to fight the fascist and nazi danger. Policy, governed my self-restraint, dictated the Russian change of heart. World revolution might again be the Russian communist aim if the fascist danger disappears.

The liberals—many of them—argue the Russian dictatorship seeks to help the masses. That's what all the dictators say, fascist as well as communist. All are equally vociferous in their assertion they seek only the masses' welfare. But they all trample ruthlessly on the masses to enforce their will. They depend on naked, brutal force. Violence is their god.

Wherever there is unrestrained authority, there is tyranny. The American Federation of Labor knows the danger of dictatorship, of any kind. Hence the unremitting opposition of American workers to communist dictatorship. They realize if there are dictators, there is "bondage to authority or creed." This creed may be either economic or religious. And where there is bondage, there is force to maintain it.

GEORGE H. MACDONALD, Gen, Agent
SUITE 411 PROVIDENT BUILDING

To Mrs. Electrical Worker, Care Tennessee Electric Power Co., Somewhere in the System:

Dear Mrs. Electrical Worker:

Within the next few days your husband will have the opportunity of making your future and your children's future more secure. I want you to ask your husband to sit down and talk this matter over with you. When you were a young girl that man who is now your husband courted you and made love to you, and you talked about the great bright future that was ahead of you. Those were happy hours, memorable hours, sweet hours.

I want you to have another talk with your husband about this opportunity which will soon be given him to manifest his continued love and regard and sincere interest in your future. Won't you please say something like this to your husband:

"John," (if his name is John, or call him by whatever name he bears or by whatever endearing term you use in addressing him) "tell me all about this election which the labor board has called, in which you and the other boys are to vote on making the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers the bargaining agency for all of you boys who work for the Tennessee Electric Power company. Are you boys having trouble with the company, or what is it all about? I think I ought to know all about it. You are all that I and the children have, and we look to you to take care of us, so I want you to tell me just what it is all about, husband of mine."

Then John—or whatever his name may be—will put his strong arm about your shoulders, tenderly drawing you to him and when you have laid wour head against his shoulder, he will say:

"Do not be worried about any trouble with the company. There is no trouble whatever between us boys and the company. This election is for the sole purpose of deciding by popular vote among the workmen of the Tennessee Electric Power company whether or not we want the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers to act as our bargaining agency."

"But, John, what is the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers?" you will ask. Then John will tell you—

"The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers is an organization made up wholly and entirely of men who work in the electrical industry. It was organized forty-seven years ago, and is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. In fact, it is one of the strongest factors in the American Federation of Labor. This international union is made up of all of the local unions of electrical workers in the United States and Canada, and all of them work together," John will tell you. Then, after a moment, you will ask him something like this:

"But how can you be a part of the international union that is spread all over the United States?" And John will explain it this way:

"I am a member of the local union here in Chattanooga. My local union and the local union at Nashville, Knoxville, Cleveland, Murfreesboro and all other cities and towns in the country are banded together, and that is what makes the international union. Then, each year, we hold a convention and each local sends delegates to that convention, at which time our international business is transacted by the delegates from each local union."

"But, John, I do not understand why you must have an election. What is it about?"

"Most of the electric power companies have already recognized our union as the bargaining agency, but the Tennessee Electric Power company has not as yet recognized the union. Under the federal labor laws, companies recognize the labor organizations which has as its members the majority of the workers employed. This election is necessary, therefore, in order to establish the fact that International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers is favored by a majority of the employes of the Tennessee Electric Power company as the proper bargaining agency to deal with the company on wages, hours and working conditions."

"But there is no other union running against you, is there?"

"No, that is, no other union's name is on the ballot. Yet there are two influences opposing us in the election. A few men who hold what we call "pet" jobs with the company, feeling that they can advance their own personal interests better if our union is not recognized, are doing all they can to keep the workers from voting in favor of our union. Then there is the CIO outfit. A vote against our union is in effect a vote for the CIO, for if we should fail to carry the election it is certain that the CIO will hop right into the field, and try to capture our membership."

"Is your brotherhood union better for the workers than these other organizations?" you will ask.

"Of course it is. I told you in the beginning that our international brotherhood was organized forty-seven years ago. Our union has been solely responsible for obtaining the improved pay and working conditions in the electric field. We have our death benefits for members which have saved countless thousands of widows and orphans of our deceased members from want and suffering. We have contracts with 70 per cent of the privately owned electric utility companies throughout the country, and we are almost 100 per cent organized in the important municipal and publicly-owned projects. Ours is recognized as one of the strongest and most progressive international unions in the country. New members coming into our union obtain the great benefits that have been built up over a period of 47 years. Don't you see the advantage of the men voting for our union in this election?"

"Of course I do," you will say, and then you will say:

"John, I am going to help you. I am going to see all of the women I know whose husbands are working for the Tennessee Electric Power company, and talk with them, and tell them what you have told me, and urge them to see to it that their husbands vote a big 'YES' on the ballot."

Comment On World Events

The supreme court of the United States has changed more in the last three years than any other part of the federal government.

Three years ago, the reactionary majority of the court, usually 5 to 4, but sometimes reaching 6 to 3, was sitting pretty on the ruins of almost everything the new deal had tried to do. It had nullified the agricultural adjustment act, the coal act, the railroad retirement act. It had revived the infamy of the Adkins decision of 1933, which knocked out minimum wages for women in the District of Columbia, by knocking out the New York minimum wage law in the Tipaldo case.

Justice Butler was saying for the court: "The state is without power by any form of legislation to prohibit, change or nullify contracts between employers and adult women workers as to the amount of wages to be paid." Justice Sutherland was intoning for the court: "The relation of employer and employe is a local relation. At common law it is one of the domestic relations." (When you can spare the time and stand the necessary stimulants, try to imagine "domestic relations" between U. S. Steel and 240,000 steel workers.) Justice Roberts, for the court, was killing the railroad retirement act by a quibble which roused this indignant protest from Chief Justice Hughes:

"The government's power is conceived to be limited to a requirement that the railroads dismiss their superannuated employes, throwing them out helpless, without any reasonable provision for their protection."

While now, after only three years—

The supreme court has openly and avowedly kicked the Adkins and Tipaldo decisions downstairs, and ratified state minimum wage laws in the Parrish case.

It has thrown "domestic relations" between employer and worker into the waste basket by upholding the Wagner act in the Jones & Laughlin case.

It is lopping off, acre by acre and field by field, the tax exempt territory which the old supreme court staked out.

No such shift has been seen—or has been so bitterly needed—in any other branch of the government. May it go right on shifting in the same direction.

There was a pleasant little ceremony in the office of Senator Homer T. Bone, of Washington, recently. Senator Bone last year brought in and secured the passage of a bill creating a national cancer institute for research into the disease which, let alone and given time enough, never fails to kill. He not only introduced this bill, but he got every senator to sign it with him as co-author.

At the ceremony the other day, the Grange of the state of Washington, the railroad unions, the A. F. of L. unions and the CIO unions of the same state presented Senator Bone with a big mahogany frame, containing the letter which President Roosevelt wrote to Bone congratulating him on his bill, and the pen with which the president signed the bill. Do the workers and the farmers of this country appreciate the good work done for health by their officials? The answer is hanging on Senator Bone's office wall.

Washington.—International Labor News Service has been forecasting the passage of the wage-hour bill by the house for several weeks; but it never ventured to predict that the bill would go through by such a walloping vote as 314 to 97. The measure was sent to the senate, where it was expected to meet sharp opposition.

The main features of the bill as passed are as follows:

For all products entering into or affecting interstate commerce, the bill fixes a minimum wage of 25 cents an hour and a maximum week of 44 hours. The wage is to go up 5 cents an hour each year until in three years the minimum is 40 cents an hour, and the hours drop regularly until in two years, the 40 hour week will be a fact.

No differentials between sections are made. No administrative board is formed. The secretary of labor appoints an administrator, and provisions are made for committees to hear evidence on industries and their relation to the law.

Child Labor Curbed.

The bill prohibits the commercial employment of any person under 16 unless that person is working for a parent, or for someone who stands in the position of a parent. From 16 to 18, no person may be employed in any industry which the head of the children's bureau of the department of labor considers likely to damage the youngster's health or welfare.

There was a hot debate, but for the most part it was in fairly good temper. Ramspeck, of Georgia, introduced an amendment which was practically another bill, giving wage differentials to the south and in general, resembling the bill passed by the senate rather than the one before the house. The proposed amendment was warmly discussed and defeated, but almost every speaker in opposition gave full credit to Ramspeck for his thoughtful and honest study of the situation.

Bill Thought Good Start.

Mead, of New York; Randolph, of West Virginia; Martin, of Colorado, any many others made brief talks that distinctly added to the quality of the debate. Mrs. Norton sat ready, inching the bill along like the experienced campaigner that she is. Few of the supporters of the measure claimed that it was perfect, but they thought it at least a good start, and that the time was right for the start to be made.

The opposition was really more various than the support. Ramspeck soberly believes that the bill as it stands is unconstitutional. Several men voiced the objection that it would hurt small industry as compared to large; and of course the southern members who wanted a differential stressed the sectional view. But only Cox, of Georgia, got really hysterical.

"Those who are advocating wage-hour legislation are holding a rendezvous with elements which they must soon disavow or else be utterly consumed in the conflagration of hatred which they will build!" cried Cox.

What Next?

Now it's safety belts for automobiles. The belts are similar to those for airplanes and have been developed to cut down the seriousness of accidents. Tests are said to show the belts hold passengers in seats during collisions, preventing them from being hurled through the windshield or top.

Big "Buy Union Label" Campaign Launched in Chicago Ties In With Cincinnati Exhibition

Chicago.—A campaign to enlist support of the union label and thereby boost the business of firms employing union labor is now under way by the Chicago Trades Union Label League, composed of A. F. of L. unions that have, as one of their primary objectives, the enforcement of the principle for which the union label stands, "to spend union earned money for union made goods."

The league is in a good position to promote such a drive, as it has increased its membership approximately 25,000 in the last year and now has a total membership of nearly 60,000, the largest in many years.

The drive to increase the patronage of union made goods and union manned services was launched in connection with the A. F. of L. Union Label and Industrial Exhibition, in Cincinnati, May 10 to 21.

Unions to Exhibit

At the Cincinnati national exposition, the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union, with headquarters here, is to have as its exhibit a modern bakery in full operation with members of the union to do the work. Pictures illustrating the progress of the organization in different branches of the baking industry and an enlarged, illuminated facsimile of the union label will also be on display.

Another big booster of the union label, shop card and button, the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, has also taken space at the exhibition. This international is pushing its union shop card, which appears in all union meat markets, in an effort to capitalize on the attention centered on the exhibition.

Women Delegates Going

Anna Fitzgerald, who, for years, was president of the Women's International Union Label League, is to represent the Chicago Trades Union Label league, and Jane Biggerstaff, of Chicago Waitresses Union, local No. 484, is to represent the Chicago Federation of Labor, at the first national convention of the American Federation of Women's Auxiliaries of Labor, to be held May 19 and 20 at Cincinnati, during the exhibition.

Might Be That.

From a schoolboy's essay: "A semi-colon is a period sitting on top of a comma. Some think that the first time a semicolon was used was when some man did not know whether to use a comma or a period, so he used both of them together."

Delegate List Is Increasing

Delegates over the state are getting ready to go to Johnson City to attend the 41st convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor which begins its three-day session next Monday, June 6.

April Job Increase Shows Big Lag

Washington.—Only 70,000 persons were added to the payrolls in April, when 400,000 is the average increase of that month, Secretary Perkins stated in her monthly report.

"Compared with last year at this time," the report goes, "the level of factory employment was down by 22 per cent and payrolls by 33 33 per cent. It is estimated that there were 1,900,000 fewer wage-earners in factories than in April, 1937, and that their weekly payrolls were $70,000,000 smaller.

"The more pronounced decrease in payrolls than in employment from March to April reflected further curtailment in operating time."

SCENES FROM UNION LABEL AND INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION

Upper left, the Brown & Williamson exhibit; upper right, the Truth in Fabric exhibit of the Associates for Government service; lower left, the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' Union exhibit, with its bakers and ovens in operation; lower right, the exhibit of the Silk Guild in co-operation with the Silk Industry United Council; center, Sally Rand, who opened the big exhibit.

Sally Rand Says:

"The only answer to the universal search for security is 'buy union.' Twenty-five million persons in the United States are members of union families.

"When you see the union label you have the assurance that skilled craftsmanship went into the manufacture of that article."

By CHESTER M. WRIGHT

Washington.—I have just come back from a visit to the first big national Union Label and Industrial exhibition held in Cincinnati. It's the biggest and finest thing American labor has ever done to demonstrate to the nation the quality of its product and the net good accomplished for consumer, worker and employer through union-employer agreement and understanding.

Here were all the pomp and circumstance, all the dash and glory of a big-time show. Here were all of the modern trappings of real salesmanship and showmanship. Lights, color, life — eye-catching, ear-catching, commanding and converting.

Planned With Skill.

The big Music Hall—and it IS big—was alive with a tremendous spectacle. Labor began here to understand how it can show itself and its good works to the world and make the world see as it never saw before.

With the finest skill, the exhibition was planned to ride with the tide of public desire, instead of against it. Here was no job of forcing truth down the neck of the public. Here was a job of giving people what they want—a darned good show.

Snappy Opening.

Was there a stodgy opening ceremony, with all the old phrases muttered without end? Not on your life! Here was Sally Rand to open the show. And did she have fun! First on the air, with a swell little talk and then on a tour of the whole show with I. M. Ornburn, who dreamed the show and then made the dream come true. Miss Rand is vice-president of the American Federation of Actors and can make a labor speech with the best of them.

And then night after night there were big names. Night after night the Music Hall auditorium was crowded to capacity. There was Tommy Dorsey, with his Kool and Raleigh show, his famous swing band, his riot of fun. His coast to coast show was broadcast from the exhibition. And all over the United States people are saying, "I heard Tommy Dorsey broadcast from the Union Label exhibition."

Radio Stars Show.

Then there was Rudy Vallee, brought to the big show by Standard Brands and coast to coast went the announcement, "broadcasting from the Union Label Industrial exhibition," etc.

Millions who couldn't attend the show heard about it in these great nation-wide broadcasts. Station WLW originated the broadcasts, moving its equipment right into the exhibition for all to see.

One point to put down is this: Those who did not enter exhibits in the show missed a magnificent opportunity.

Here was a good-will getter, a promoter of understanding.

Fine Union Exhibits.

There were a great many fine exhibits. The Bakery and Confectionery Workers put on an outstanding show, with actual operations all day long. The Pottery Workers had a swell exhibit, with demonstration work going on continuously. The Brown & Williamson Tobacco company, of Louisville, had a beauty, with all of their brands and premiums and with gift cigarettes for all. The International Ladies' Garment Workers did themselves proud, with an exhibition of an old-time sweatshop and a modern shop, both in operation. Truth in fabrics pulled a strong oar in two exhibits. The Associates for Government Service, under direction of Dr. E. Stagg Whitin, told the story of the fight for truth in fabric in the manufacture and sale of wool materials.

Public Educated.

The International Silk guild, through the Silk Industry council, composed of unions and employers, told the story of silk and truth in fabric, with a beautiful exhibit. Here men and women learned a lot about wool and silk.

The Hatters had an exhibit telling the story of how a hat is made. The United Garment Workers did a good job and so did the Tobacco Workers' union.

Labor learned a lot about exhibits and so did manufacturers. The public learned a lot about labor and what unionization means in buying commodities. Always there was showmanship—the socko and the punch. But always, also, there was the lesson running through it all—the story that labor has to tell.

William Green went to the show to make a speech and to have a look at the striking A. F. of L. exhibit and he came away pleased and happy as could be. He keynoted with a flourish and a wallop. Labor itself hadn't quite known it had such a story to tell in just that dramatic way.

Higher wages and shorter hours are the natural remedies for unemployment, said President Green, adding: "I want to emphasize that these real remedies can be applied effectively by sincere co-operation between labor and industry. That is more important than anything the government can do to promote recovery."

Tremendous Labor Gain.

The attendance? The clockers showed an average of 12,000 a day. That was a lot of attendance, but big as it was, the collateral results, the dozens of union label week proclamations by mayors, the coast-to-coast broadcasts — one every day—these brought the total gain for labor up to a sum total for which there is no adequate calculation. All that can be said is that it is staggering.

It was a grand idea, put over in grand style, by men who worked and slaved and went through an unimaginable strain before the doors swung on the opening night and labor all over the United States, including those that scoffed, has won something more precious than dollars. It has won a new degree of respect and understanding.

And if Dick Ornburn needs to sleep for a week to recover from the strain and the wear of it, he's entitled to. He did a pioneer job—and how!

Congestion Revealed by Survey Conclusive Proof of Need For New Housing, FHA Head Says

Washington.—Prevalence of congested and unsanitary living conditions in the eighty-three cities covered by the national health survey of 1935-6 is conclusive proof of the vast need for new housing accommodations, particularly for families of medium and low income, Federal Housing Administrator Stewart McDonald declared here.

Findings of the survey, published recently by the U. S. public health service, show, McDonald said, that overcrowding is prevalent in cities of every size and in every section of the country. Wide variations were noted in the percentage of families living in overcrowded quarters, the survey demonstrates that the problem is common to small cities as well as large metropolitan centers.

A similar conclusion can be drawn from figures on the adequacy of sanitary facilities, although large-city families are in a somewhat more favorable position than those living in communities of 25,000 or less.

Poor Not Only Class Affected.

"So far as the building industry is concerned, the most valuable information to be derived from the survey is that on the relative desirability of living conditions of families falling in various income groups," the administrator said:

"As was to be expected, crowded and insanitary conditions are most prevalent in the large group of families receiving incomes of $1,000 or less per annum, but even among the more favorably situated families, living conditions often leave much to be desired.

"In many of the smaller cities, for example, a large proportion of the families receiving annual incomes of $1,000 to $2,000 live in quarters served by inadequate sanitary installations. In a number of these smaller centers, even a substantial number of the families in the $2,000 to $3,000 group live in houses which are inadequately provided with sanitary facilities.

Big Market Neglected.

"It must be remembered that the group of families in the fairly high economic levels, which the survey finds to be housed adequately, in most instances, compose the market for which the building industry has consistently produced a supply of rental and for sale accommodations.

"This survey merely highlights the fact that the industry has neglected, in large part, the group of families which form one of the most fertile markets for its products. Unless this condition is rectified, we will continue to have over-building in some brackets and unsatisfactory conditions in other brackets."

Wage Hour Bill Declared Just as Important to North as to South

Washington.—Any account of the sharp debate in the house on the wage-hour bill must begin, in fairness, by saying that Mrs. Mary Norton, chairman of the labor committee, handled the measure with vigor and skill, and in a way that could not antagonize anyone. Undoubtedly, she must be credited with a part of the whopping vote by which the rules committee was discharged—322 to 73; and she opened the debate afterwards with this:

"I believe that every member of the committee is anxious for a wage and hour bill. There are a few who differ from us on the form of the bill; but we are all in agreement that a bill of this kind is very necessary if we are going to help the underpaid workers of this country, reduce the relief rolls and spread employment."

Georgian Is Bitter.

Representative Cox, of Georgia, set a high water mark for recalcitrants from the south by opening his discussion of the wage-hour bill with a denunciation of the abolition of the two-thirds majority rule for democratic conventions.

"The abolition of this rule," he said, "took from the south, as it was intended to do, all power to impress its influence on the affairs of the party. . . .

"The wage-hour bill is another carpet-bag expedition into the south, and it is so intended. It is another Sherman's march to the sea."

"Not Sectional," House Told.

"I cannot understand the reasoning that this measure is sectional and a blow at the southern states. It is estimated that between the Potomac and Hudson rivers, there are at the present time over 35,000 workers, nearly all women, receiving as little at $5 and $6 a week and working 9 and 10 hours a day. Shortly before the enactment of the Walsh-Healey law, a Connecticut firm was awarded by the navy a large contract for caps. The women employed in this factory received the munificent sum of $4 a week."

Harlan Mine Terrorism Plotted In "Whisper Room," Federal Attorney Tells Jurors

London, Ky.—Opening the case for the government in the Harlan county prosecution, Brien McMahon, assistant attorney-general, said that while the marksmanship of the thugs of Harlan county was not up to Kentucky standards, they had managed to kill several men.

His opening speech was a stinger. He told of the "whisper room" in the courthouse, where mine managers met with Sheriff Middleton to plot beatings and terrorism. He told of the assessment of half a cent a ton on coal mined in each mine as a gang fund, to keep the unions out of Harlan.

"Unthank was the chief deputy," said McMahon. "He led the thugs around the county to threaten, beat and in some cases, to kill. And he got his orders, gentlemen, from a man who sits in this courtroom today."

But Charles I. Wawson, chief counsel for the defense, a former federal judge who resigned because he hated the new deal, declared that murder, kidnapping and violence were not the issues. This, he said, was a trial for conspiracy.

Meaning, apparently, the old pickpocket's remark to the policeman: "You may be right, but you gotta prove it."

Before the trial opened, the Clover Splint Coal company threw itself on the mercy of the court, announcing that it would not contest the charges.

THREE MILLION ENGLISH WORKERS TO GET PAID HOLIDAYS THIS YEAR

By HERBERT TRACEY

London.—Two years ago, in April, 1936, particulars were published of trade union agreements containing provisions for holidays with pay. It was then estimated that the number of wage-earners covered by such agreements was about 1½ millions.

Since then a considerable number of new agreements have been made. It is estimated that today about 3,000,000 wage-earners have secured holidays with pay through the efforts of the unions. This huge total does not include the large number of salaried workers and others who have paid holidays by custom and long practice, nor the wage-earners employed by firms which are not parties to collective agreements but which grant paid holidays to employes under individual arrangements.

Details are given in the current Ministry of Labor Gazette of both general agreements and district agreements in a variety of trades and occupations. The agreements specify the number of paid holidays, varying from three days to twelve, in each year, and the periods of service, varying from six months to three years, which qualifies the wage-earners for the benefit. Most of the agreements secure the paid holiday exclusive of public holidays, which are in the majority of cases also paid for; in some cases, where employes are required to work on public holidays, days in lieu are provided for, and payment is made at current rates or higher rates.

HARRY S. TRUMAN

Harry S. Truman, senator from Missouri, was born in Barton county, that state, May 8, 1884. His father was a farmer; and after finishing school and getting the lowdown on finances by working in several banks, he went back to the farm as partner until 1917.

Then he helped organize two regiments of field artillery, and went overseas with one of them, the 129th, with the 35th division. He sailed in March, 1918. He was captain, and was ordered to command Battery D, 129th field artillery, where he served on the front until the Armistice. Was discharged as major, and is now a colonel of field artillery reserves.

The year after the war ended he married and has one daughter.

He was elected to the county court of Jackson county in 1922, defeated in 1924, and elected presiding judge of that court in 1926 by a majority of 16,000. He was re-elected in 1930 by a majority of 58,000. He was elected senator in 1934 by 262,000.

Whether it is the remembrance of these climbing majorities that makes him so cheerful and good natured cannot be told. The fact is that he gets more boyish pleasure out of life than any other man on the Hill—and a number of those chaps have a keen sense of humor.

He is immeasurably more liberal than his colleague, Bennett Champ Clark. He alternated with Senator Wheeler, of Montana, in the probe of railroads. He has declared openly that he doesn't care for lending Uncle Sam's money to the railroads while they are trying to cut wages.

GREEN'S SPEECH INDORSED

New York City.—Louis K. Comstock, president of the Merchants' Association of New York, urged capital and labor to accept the principles of co-operation enunciated in a radio speech by William Green, president of the A. F. of L.

Application of Green's proposals, Comstock said, would "solve America's industrial problem and enable the country to make long strides toward the employment of millions who are now jobless."

Washington Facts

Senate Committee Proposes Recovery Bill Amendments Which Would Hit Labor in Wage and WPA Fields—No Opposition to Continued Federal Insurance of Bank Deposits.

By GEORGE L. KNAPP

Washington.—The senate appropriations committee, in reporting out the recovery bill passed by the house, has made amendments which come pretty close to being a declaration of war on labor.

First of these is the amendment which provides that "in the event the congress . . . shall establish minimum rates of pay for persons employed by private employers in any occupation, such minimum rates of pay shall apply to persons in similar occupations employed on projects" of the WPA.

The wage-hour bill coming up in the house fixes a minimum wage for the first year of 25 cents an hour for a 44-hour week. This comes to $11 a week. The average WPA wage for the whole country now is $15 a week; lower in the south, to be sure; but higher in some northern cities. The senate committee amendment would take the minimum wage which almost everyone agrees is too low, and make it the maximum for relief workers.

The other amendment put in by the senate appropriations committee soaks both labor and consumer. It forbids any funds appropriated for the WPA to be spent on any project "which will compete with any existing privately owned or operated public utility, the rates of which are now subject to public regulations."

How this amendment gets the consumer in the neck is easy to see. "Public regulations" has been so hampered in this country, mainly by federal courts, that domestic rates for electricity in most of our land are twice as high as in a large part of Canada. Only competition by publicly owned plants brings them down.

The public works administration has examined and approved forty-nine projects for utilities, at an estimated cost of $56,780,026. It is further estimated that these projects would furnish, directly and indirectly, 451,752 man-months of work. All those forty-nine projects probably would be forbidden by the amendment, forty-six of them certainly would be forbidden.

* * *

When the bill to continue federal insurance of bank deposits came before the house, Clyde Williams, of Missouri, said:

"Mr. Chairman, this bill is entirely without controversy so far as I understand it. Had the administration passed no other bill than the bank deposit insurance law, it would be entitled to the lasting gratitude of the American people."

There was applause, and the bill passed without controversy.

Women's Auxiliaries of Labor Act to Better Organize Union Buying Power

Cincinnati.—The American Federation of Women's Auxiliaries of Labor—A. F. W. A. L. for short—held its first national convention here during three days of the Union Label and Industrial Exhibition week, and adopted a constitution by unanimous vote. About 500 persons were in attendance. I. M. Ornburn called the meeting to order and John M. Baer presided. A letter was read from President Roosevelt, commending unions and noting the strength which union buying power would show if organized — which was appropriate, since the main purpose of both exposition and convention was to organize that buying power.

Big Membership Gain.

It was brought out that the A. F. W. A. L. has gained about 500,000 members in the last year, and now has 2,500,000 members. Speeches were made by James Stewart, mayor of Cincinnati; L. G. Hines, national organizer of he A. F. of L., and Mrs. Roset Forrester, of the U. S. department of labor.

The executive board will meet in September. This consists of one officer from each auxiliary union, and as a check is an advisory board, composed of one person from each state. Between the present time and Dec. 1, the A. F. W. A. L. will decide what per capita tax it must levy on its members.

Catalogue Guide Planned.

It was deemed inadvisable to elect officers until the matter of per capita tax was decided. In the meantime, Secretary Ornburn, of the Union Label Trades Department, American Federation of Labor, will continue to act as temporary secretary.

Perhaps the greatest work which the A. F. W. A. L. has set itself is the printing of a catalogue guide, showing where every commodity one is likely to want can be bought from a union store or factory.

In a resolution introduced by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the International Association of Machinists, the A. F. W. A. L. declares that it "opposes any and all wage cuts when the nation requires increased purchasing power to return to prosperity."

COOPERS IN CONTRACT WITH PEORIA COMPANY

Peoria, Ill.—A union shop agreement has been signed between the National Cooperage company of this city and the Coopers' International union. The agreement ends a year-old controversy which resulted in a strike last summer. Under the contract, the lowest wage to be paid will be 50 cents an hour for unskilled labor, ranging up to standard rates for skilled cooperage workers.

ELECTRICAL WORKERS EMPLOYED BY THE TENNESSEE ELECTRIC POWER COMPANY WORK WITH WIRES, FITTINGS AND OTHER APPARATUS MADE BY UNION WORKERS!

Mr. Electrical Worker, it matters not where you are today, nor what job you may be doing at your trade, the tools with which you work, the materials which you are using, the apparatus which you are installing or repairing, the wires which you are stringing, ALL OF IT, had to be made by the hand of YOUR fellow-worker, somewhere!

The chances are Nine-to-One that these very things with which you are working right now were made IN A UNION SHOP, by members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers!

We want you to study the following list of manufacturers who employ Union Labor—members of the I. B. E. W. —it is a long list, of course, because the leading manufacturers of Electrical Supplies and Apparatus naturally want to place upon the market the very best material, and to do so they must have the very best workmen, and the very best workmen are members of the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Mr. Electrical Worker, at an early date you will have the opportunity of casting your ballot which will place you in the Great Brotherhood of the men who make the material which you handle in your daily work. Read the following list, and let your mind dwell upon the vast, widespread interest and influence of all of the men who work in these factories and plants. They are members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, which is their bargaining agency and through which their conditions of employment have been greatly improved. They want you to come into the fold of friendship and fraternity, and when you go to cast your ballot in the coming election, think of all of these fine men employed in the following Electrical Manufacturing plants of the country:

SOUTHERN LABOR "SPOTS"

Johnson City, Tenn.—Officials of the State Federation of Labor and local leaders in charge of arrangements for the annual convention of the federation which meets here next Monday are stressing the fact that Lewis G. Hines, director of organization for the American Federation of Labor, will be in attendance throughout the convention period. Director Hines is one of the outstanding men in the American labor movement, his last contribution to the cause of labor being the reorganization of the State Federation in Pennsylvania, which has been in the hands of the CIO until Mr. Hines reorganized the federation, and purged it of all CIO influences.

A record-breaking attendance is expected at the convention, and it is said that a most constructive program will be offered for the coming year.

Columbia, S. C.—Officials of the South Carolina State Federation of Labor are busily engaged in making plans for the annual federation convention which will be held here on the 24th and 25th of June. Preparations are being made for entertainment of an unusually large number of delegates and visitors. Al Flynn, of Charleston, is president of the state body, while Fred E. Hatchell, of Columbia, is secretary-treasurer.

South Carolina Federation of Labor officials have a splendid report to make to the convention, including the enactment of laws in the recent sessions of the general assembly which place this state in the lead of all southern states, insofar as favorable and effective labor legislation is concerned.

Atlanta, Ga.—An agreement was signed between the Kay Garment company and the Sunbeam Dress Manufacturing company, related industries, and the employes of both plants here last week, which is pronounced as being a model agreement. It provides for a union shop, increased wages throughout both plants, time and a half for all overtime pay, no holiday work and no Saturday work. J. I. King and William A. Cetti, representatives of the American Federation of Labor, assisted the workers in negotiating the agreement, while Attorney Isaac Wengro represented the employers.

Atlant, Ga.—Charter was installed here last Monday night for the newly organized local union of employes in the plant of the Hoosier Waste and Renovating company, with a 97 per cent union membership of all eligible workers. Preparations are already being made for the local to affiliate with the Atlanta Federation of Trades and the Georgia Federation of Labor. Negotiations for an agreement are now under way. J. I. King, representative of the American Federation of Labor, and F. H. (Pug) King, of the Atlanta Federation of Trades organizing committee, assisted the workers in perfecting their organization.

Narco, La.—Charter was installed here last Saturday morning for the newly organized local union of calcimine plant workers and paint makers. A good charter membership was obtained, with at least two-thirds of all employes enrolling as charter members. An increase in wages has already been granted by the company. Pat Ryan and William L. Donnells, director of the Federationist, assisted the workers in organizing the local and installing the charter.

Atlanta, Ga. — Vice-President Shelly Walden, of the International Molders' union, with headquarters in Cincinnati, O., was in Atlanta last week, in the interest of his organization. While here, many members of the molders' union and numerous representatives of other organizations were in conference with the popular official of the molders' international.

12 Million Westinghouse Improvement Program

Pittsburgh.—A $12,000,000 building and expansion program affecting district offices, radio stations and plants in seven states was announced here by A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company.

This sum, approximately the same as that appropriated for similar projects in 1937, is being spent because of the company's desire to "do its share" in priming "the business pump" and because of faith that a revival of business is in the offing, Robertson said.

TOO MUCH POWDER

(From the Emporia, Kan., Gazette)

Our beloved president is playing with his little tin sailors too much these days. He is a grown man for hobbies, and when it isn't his stamp collection, it's his navy. The difference between the two hobbies being that the taxpayers pay for the navy.

Generally speaking, a naval defense is offense. A navy such as he is building, capable of starting a fight 2,000 miles from our shore, becomes not a national defense but an arm of attack.

We have got American soldiers pretty well soured on leaving this continent. The president couldn't get a half billion for an arm of defense that would ship American soldiers all over the map. But because the people don't realize that a navy with too much fuel space in its hold, capable of cruising far and wide, is not a defense but an offensive weapon, we are in for trouble in the faraway places of the earth.

We are now building a bigger navy than England's and England has a far-flung empire in the far corners of the globe, set in the seven seas, and we have a continental domain with only one island group now really ours, more than a thousand miles from our front door. We just don't need so much navy. There is too much powder in this administration.

Delivery Delegate From This City Has Hard Luck

Hugh Puckett, delegate from Local 594, Chattanooga Special Delivery union, had tough luck on his trip to Johnson City to attend the Tennessee Federation of Labor convention.

While riding the narrow gauge railroad that goes high up in the Smoky mountains on Monday afternoon, the change in altitude affected Brother Puckett's blood flow, and his nose started bleeding. After an hour of unceasing flow, he became so weak that he was taken off the train and rushed to a hospital, where he remained until the next day. He was brought from the hospital and put in bed in the convention hotel, coming down to the convention floor only on Wednesday afternoon in order to participate in the election of officers.

TECHNICALITY PREVENTS TFL FROM ENDORSING SEN. BERRY AS REQUESTED BY WM. GREEN

Indorsement of George L. Berry for the United States senate was prevented last Tuesday because of the federation law which explicitly states that no political candidate may be indorsed except through the Tennessee non-partisan committee which is composed of railroad brotherhood and the TFL representatives.

Although sentiment for the well-known labor leader was so hot that at times it reached the flaming point, the law of the federation acted as a stone wall to the wishes of enthusiastic delegates who heard the senator speak the day previous.

A telegram received from William Green asked the Tennessee federation to indorse Berry. The telegram was ordered given to the non-partisan committee, which will meet in the next few weeks.

New York Mayor Demands City Employes Stop Accepting Outside Part Time Jobs

New York City.—Mayor La Guardia has sent a stinging letter to the heads of all city departments, asking them to stop the growing practice of city employes of taking part time jobs in addition to their city work. He declares it unfair that persons with steady work, regular pay, yearly vacations and pension rights compete with the unemployed.

"I find," says the mayor, "that the practice is developing whereby city-paid architects, accountants, stenographers, musicians and members of skilled trades are accepting outside work from private employers. Invariably the pay is lower than the standard for such work under normal conditions.

"Employes who have such extra employment are either cheating the city or their private employer. The city is entitled to a full day's work for a full day's pay. The unemployed are entitled to all the work that is available in and around this city.

"This ruling does not apply to physicians employed on part-time or to physicians in hospitals who are paid in accordance with the understanding that they may attend to private practice."

The mayor backs up his appeal by saying that the city has a right to fix working hours for its employes. This is taken to mean that employes who disregard his warning will get irregular hours for their city work.

TENNESSEE FEDERATION CONVENTION HELD IN JOHNSON CITY THIS WEEK LARGEST ATTENDED IN MANY YEARS

Gerald Foley Returned to Presidency Without Opposition—Cuthbert Elected by Two Votes—Mabee Succeeds Witt as Vice-President.

At the largest convention in many years, the Tennessee Federation of Labor elected Gerald Foley to succeed himself without opposition while T. R. Cuthbert was re-elected as secretary-treasurer by a margin of two votes.

Nashville was selected as the next convention city.

Monday afternoon the delegates, estimated at more than 275, enjoyed a sightseeing tour on the E. T. & W. N. C. railroad to Cranberry, N. C. A few chose to take automobile rides to various Appalachian area communities.

Denies Split With FDR.

Senator Berry's speech was one of the highlights of the opening day's program of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, upon which several representatives of labor organizations appeared and which saw a sharp attack made upon the Committee for Industrial Cooperation by Paul J. Aymon, acting AFL chairman, and Lewis G. Hines, personal representative of AFL President William Green.

Commends Roosevelt.

Berry began his remarks by saying he felt "very definitely, at home at any convention of organized American labor."

"Since I was 17 years old," he said, "I have been a member of labor unions and I have been president of an international labor union for more than 30 years. I have no apologies to make for any stand I have taken. I feel this is a transition period in the history of our country, and we must be alert to preserve our fundamental democratic form of government."

Paying tribute to President Roosevelt as an administrator who gave leadership when it was sorely needed and perhaps saved the nation from "internal disruption," Berry said he regarded some of the steps taken by the national administration as being of the emergency type, and held the nation was now sufficiently strong not to require resort to them. He pointed to Germany as a nation where individual freedom is dead, and said he wished to preserve the United States from anything of that sort.

"I have my own opinions and reserve the right to express them in any manner I see fit, and one of those opinions is opposition to Washington.—Joseph V. Voorhees has asked the supreme court to review validity of a four-month jail sentence imposed on him as a result of conviction of violating an anti-picketing injunction in Austin, Minn.

Voorhees charged that the injunction itself was illegal under the Minnesota statute prohibiting anti-picketing injunctions in labor cases.

MEIER'S MARKETS STILL USING ITS SCAB MEATCUTTERS

Meier's Meat Markets, in the Easy Way groceries, are still employing non-union meatcutters, according to Mack Ball, business agent for Local 600.

These formerly union markets refused to sign an agreement with the union, and are now running non-union.

Brother Ball asks that all unionists and friends remember that fact when they purchase their meat.

TAXES ON FOOD HEAVY.

New York City.—Out of every dollar the average American family spends 33 cents for food. Six cents of this portion is taken by hidden taxes, according to a recent survey. A loaf of bread carries 53 taxes, a quart of milk is taxed 57 times, and one-sixth of the cost of a cup of tea represents taxes.

Judge Rejects Slash In Trolleymen's Pay

Pittsburgh, Pa. Federal Judge Nevin McVicar blocked a move for immediate wage reduction of Pittsburgh trolley and motor bus employes by refusing a request of the Pittsburgh Railways company for an 11 per cent pay slash. Nearly 3,000 motormen and bus drivers threatened to strike if their pay was cut.

Judge McVicar referred the wage dispute between the company and the union to a special master, who will be named by the court.

Company officials contend they do not have enough revenue to pay the wage scale provided in the union contract which expired April 30. The wage scale under the old contract is being maintained pending final disposition of the question.

"We haven't any intention of attending any hearing called by a master," O. K. Eaton, attorney for the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America, declared. "It will be strictly an ex parte proceeding to gather one sided testimony."

Eaton said the union contract provided that renewal disputes should be arbitrated, and he questioned the jurisdiction of the court to settle the wage row. Company attorneys recently went before Judge McVicar to file a petition for reorganization of the company under federal bankruptcy laws.

government intervention in private enterprise," the senator said. He branded the WPA as a governmental agency which "in large measure has caused depression in the construction industry in the United States. Depend on it, skilled union workmen in the future must meet the challenge set up by government encouragement of semi-skilled labor," he added.

Long Opens Session.

The convention was called to order shortly after 10 a.m. by D. C. Long, president of the Johnson City Central Labor union, who extended "a most cordial and hearty welcome to our city" to the delegates. He then called on Dr. William R. Rigell, pastor of Central Baptist church, for the invocation.

Vice Mayor Gladstone White gave the welcoming address on behalf of the city. He expressed, on behalf of Mayor Marion Sell, pleasure at the convention's being held here, called attention to the fact this section of upper East Tennessee was civilized by the efforts of "pioneer laboring men," aud urged his hearers to "come often."

James Coad, secretary of the chamber of commerce, gave a witty address which caused a great deal of merriment, as when, in calling attention to the section's scenic charms, he said, "A fellow who is as big a liar as I am told me Grandfather is the oldest mountain in the world—almost as old as D. C. Long." He said he had always been a stalwart friend of labor. Long, in introducing Coad, called attention to the manner in which, he said, the chamber of commerce secretary has cooperated in local labor affairs.

Gerald Foley, of Nashville, president of the Tennessee State Federation, was next introduced and took charge of the meeting. He introduced Secretary-Treasurer T. R. Cuthbert, of Chattanooga, who read the call for the meeting.

"Fighting Talk."

A number of speakers werethen called upon. P. J. Aymon gave a "fighting talk" in which he said the American Federation of Labor is continuing to make steady progress "in spite of the recession."

"Every man listed as a member by the AFL has paid his initiation fee. Our membership isn't padded with empty shells—men who have simply signed a petition or had their names put on a membership card without paying anything," he remarked.

Deriding what he termed CIO claims to have organized 500,000 textile workers in the south, Aymon said "the United Textile Workers at their highest never had more than 300,000 members."

Strikes at Lewis.

'John L. Lewis and his henchmen should not be allowed to mislead the workers and we should do everything in our power to enlighten them," he added.

James F. Barrett, southern publicity director of the AFL, in expressing pleasure at being present remarked that he was born in North Carolina, educated at Washington college and married a Tennessee girl.

Paul Topping, described as "direct representative of Matthew Woll, of the AFL," called attention to the "Bowl of Rice" parties which are to be sponsored by labor organizations June 17 for Chinese relief purposes.

W. E. Jacobs, of Nashville, former state labor commissioner, described the workings of the social security law and asked for union cooperation in promptly reporting deaths of members to the security board, and Charles Dixon, international representative of the Plumbers' and Steamfitters' union, spoke briefly prior to the noon adjournment.

In his address Hines charged John L. Lewis has permitted the communist party to gain control of the CIO through employment of 350 communists as organizers and leaders. The speaker, a Pennsylvanian, alleged Lewis and his associates had attempted to take control of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor. The AFL, however, he said, purged the Pennsylvania federation of all CIO influences, and Lewis received a setback in the recent state election when the Lewis candidates were defeated at the polls.

For Pay-Hour Bill.

Hines urged Tennessee labor to insist upon their senators voting for the wage-hour bill recommended by the AFL.

"We opposed the first wage-hour bill because it provided for differentials in the minimum wage for different sections of the country. We want the same minimum wage for the south that prevails in the north," he said. The speaker declared there are more sweatshops in one industrial area of Pennsylvania than there are in the whole state of Tennessee, and asserted the north needs the minimum wage and maximum hour law as much as the south. He cited instances where workers in Pennsylvania, allegedly employed under agreements with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' union, a CIO affiliate, are receiving $6 and $8 per week.

Meat Cutters Win Packing Plant Vote

Chicago.—An overwhelming victory for the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, was the result of an election called by the National Labor Relations board, with the consent of all parties involved, to determine whether the A. F. of L. union or the United Packing House Workers, a CIO organization, would represent workers employed in the principal plant of Kingan & Co., at Indianapolis.

The Amalgamated received 998, the CIO affiliate, 450, of the votes cast in the labor board poll, and 63 ballots were thrown out. The election was called after an agreement with the company had been signed by the A. F. of L. union.

Japanese Goods Menacing U. S. Jobs, Bay State Representative Tells House

Here's Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, representative from the Massachusetts Fifth district, with an exhibit of Japanese-made goods in her office in Washington. In one hand she is holding an American flag made in the United States, and in the other, an American flag made in Japan. On her desk are various articles of Japanese manufacture, including souvenir models of such typical American things as the Washington Manument, the Capitol at Washington and the Lincoln Memorial. Japanese-made dishes are a feature of the display.

Washington.—A warning that the flow of Japanese manufactured goods into domestic markets constitutes "A dangerous attack upon American standards of labor, upon American payrolls, and upon American employment," was sounded on the floor of the house of repsentatives by Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts. Mrs. Rogers addressed a crowded house, illustrating her remarks with samples of Japanese imitations of American products.

"Our country is being infested by Japan in an economic way," Mrs. Rogers declared, "as certainly and as energetically as China is invaded by the military forces of Japan with a rain of destruction and death upon Chinese cities and towns, and upon unoffending civilian men, women and children."

Mrs. Rogers stated that the importation of Japanese goods, made for the most part at a fraction of the cost of manufacture of similar American products, "is further aggravating this country's puzzling economic depression."

U. S. Employment Suffers.

"A major part of the American purchases from Japan," she said, "are articles which were originally invented and produced in the United States. They are imitations of American products which have been manufactured in Japan, and are being sent into this country, inferior in quality and brutally lower in price. The consequence is unquestionably to be read in the mounting toll of unemployment among our own industrial workers."

Japanese Victory Dangerous.

Commenting on the present hostilities in China, the congresswoman declared, "few in America realize that as ruinous as is Japan's competition today, it must become many times worse if Japan in its undeclared war upon China is successful and its boundless treasurehouse of raw materials is placed at the disposal of Japan's industrial lords, for exploitation. Today Japan buys a large part of our raw material abroad, and in the competitive world market. If the Japanese armies are successful in China the problem of obtaining many of these materials will be solved by that country. Japan and her overlords will then be free to launch upon a greater and more far-flung economic invasion of the United States than we as a people have heretofore believed possible," Mrs. Rogers concluded.

Decision Pleases Machinists' Head

Washington. — President Arthur O. Wharton ,of the International Association of Machinists, expressed pleasure at the supreme court's decision denying Remington Rand, Inc., a review of a NLRB decision against it.

"The supreme court in denying certiorari refused to condone further delay in carrying out the order of the board which includes the reinstatement of 4,000 workers," Wharton said. "In the decisions handed down in the Remington Rand case, the board and the courts have written an interesting chapter in the annals of labor justice condemning union-busting tactics, such as the Mohawk valley plan.

"We hope that insofar as formulas for labor disputes are concerned, the supreme court ruling marks the 'Last of the Mohicans.'"

Pickets on Horseback In Bus Strike

New York City.—Pickets on horseback gave a novel note to a strike of Garden State Bus Line drivers at the Bridge Plaza, Fort Lee, N. J., and along Route 4.

Wearing full blue uniforms, the drivers presented their case to the public with signs draped sandwich style over the horses' flanks. The signs declared the Garden State Bus Line was unfair to organized labor.

The strike case has been heard by the national labor relations board. The strikers are members of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

Rome World Congress Declared Disguised Fascist Stunt

Paris.—Attention has been called by the International Federation of Trade Unions to a "World Congress on Labor and Joy" which is to be held in Rome in June. The I. F. T. U. charges this gathering is a fascist stunt. It urges all the affiliated national centers to take action—especially in respect of popular educational and sports organizations—to insure that no delegates are sent to this congress. Its only purpose is to glorify the fascist organization of "Strength through Joy," and other organizations set up by the dictators on the ruins of the free trade union movement which they destroyed, the I. F. T. U. says.

The British Trades Union congress general council has disassociated the British trades union and labor movement from this "world congress" as it did from the International Congress on Recreation held in the United States, at Los Angeles, in 1932, and from the similar congress held in Hamburg in 1936.

Thanks to such repudiation by the T. U. C. and by other national centers affiliated to the I. F. T. U. these earlier sham international congresses were boycotted by the workers' organizations. The 1936 congress at Hamburg was even boycotted, on representations made by the American Federation of Labor, by the American National Recreation association.

The board was increased from five to nine members to widen representation for the new growth.

Faced with the plain proof that Szechoslovakia will fight, and notified that invasion of that country means war with France and Britain, Hitler backs down. It is a welcome respite, and that is all. Let no one undertake the impossible task of guessing what a megalomania moron like Hitler will do next.

CARDUI

In this modern time something wonderfully worth while can be done for practically every woman who suffers from functional pains of menstruation. Certain cases can be relieved by taking Cardui. Others may need a physician's treatment.

Cardui has two widely demonstrated uses: (1) To ease the immediate pain and nervousness of the monthly period; and (2) to aid in building up the whole system by helping women to get more strength from their food.

Unprintable

The reporter limped in.

"Well," growled the editor, "did you get the interview?"

The newsman pointed to a pair of black eyes.

"We can't print a pair of black eyes. Where's the story?"

The editor went wild. "What good is that?" he howled. "We can't print things like that. Didn't you get the chap to say a few words?"

"Sure," was the reply, "but you can't print them, either."

WPA Workers Sue Three Building Trades Unions

Peoria, Ill.—A group of WPA workers have filed $25,000 damage suits against each of three A. F. of L. unions in U. S. district court and obtained a temporary order restraining the unions from interfering with a West Peoria WPA project.

The suits and temporary restraining order were against the Plasterers and Cement Finishers, Building and Common Labor and Bricklayers' Unions of the American Federation of Labor..

The WPA workers charged that about fifty representatives of the three unions appeared on a street resurfacing project at West Peoria May 13 and forced them to leave their jobs. They said that union men have been patroling the neighborhood daily since and have prevented them from resuming their work.

In the complaint signed by a committee of four, the WPA workers claim a total loss of $10,000 as a result of alleged union tactics. They contend that they are in "dire distress" and that unless they resume work immediately their families will have no food or shelter. Fifteen to twenty workers were engaged on the West Peoria project.

CHAIN STORES RENT BILL.

New York City.—Chain stores in America pay $450,000,000 in rent annually to 140,000 landlords, or an average of $3,214 for each landlord, according to Frank O'Hara, president of the Read Estate Association of the State of New York.

Betterment of Living Standards Natural Way to Solve Unemployment Problem, Green Says

Cincinnati.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, closed the Union Label and Industrial exhibition with a speech in which he traced the development of the union label, and pleaded for cooperation between labor and industry. He said, in part:

"It was in this country that the idea of the union label received its modern rebirth. Our first record of its application is in 1869 when the Carpenters' Eeight-hour League of San Francisco furnished a stamp to all planing mills operating on the eight-hour plan to distinguish their work from the products of the 10-hour mills.

Idea Put to Work.

"A few years later, the cigarmakers, who gave the American labor movement the immortal Samuel Gompers, really put the union label idea to work. They were fighting cheap coolie labor which threatened to destroy wage standards in the industry. Assured of public support, the cigarmakers of the Pacific coast hit on the expedient of identifying their product with a label. The consuming public was able to tell that the box with the union label contained cigars manufactured under union conditions by union workers in a clean, sanitary workshop.

"From then on the popularity of the union label grew by leaps and bounds.

Natural Solution Urged.

"Again we are faced by critical industrial conditions. More than eleven million men and women who are willing to work cannot find jobs in private industry. Again the government is preparing to spend billions to relieve their distress. How long can we go on in this way? Everywhere and all the time people are asking: Where will the money come from? From what source will it be supplied?

"The simple truth is that we cannot go on fighting emergency conditions with government spending forever. We must find a solution for our unemployment problem. Government spending is an artificial means of increasing purchasing power. What is the natural way?

"It is our conviction—a conclusion based on simple logic—that higher wages, shorter hours and an end to sweatshop conditions will put money into the pockets of the great masses of our people, money they will be eager to spend for the products of American industry.

Cooperation Is Vital.

"The natural way to reduce unemployment is to provide work for the unemployed in private industry. The natural way to increase purchasing power is to raise American standards of working and living conditions.

"I want to emphasize that these real remedies can be applied effectively by sincere cooperation between labor and industry. That step is more important than anything the government can do to promote recovery."

Of course not. Kerosene Lamps are out of date. And your home is modern. But what about your telephone facilities? Does only one telephone still serve your whole house? Do you still climb stairs or chase from one place to another to answer and make calls? One or more extension telephones, (costing only 75c a month) by the bed upstairs or in some other easy-to-get-to place makes using the telephone easy, comfortable — affords greater protection in emergencies and gives more privacy. We always confess to things we do—especially is this true if we go into places that are not pleasant toward organized labor. Several days ago we came out of a certain place eating an ice cream (in cone). Some man standing near the door spoke, "Do they have a card in there?" That brought me to my senses. This particular place has been organized but has slipped from the "straight and narrow." We promise to be more careful from here on out. To the bricklayer who so capably reminded me that the place is no longer organized we offer thanks.

'Tis said that women will rule. That must be true for on Friday night when the culinary workers met they elected Miss Ella Morgan as president, replacing J. B. Mattox. Miss Gladys Cox will act in the capacity of vice-president. Antoin Awad, the treasurer, is the one and only of the supposed stronger sex who is a member of our executive board.

Wish all our readers could have been with us on our trip to Johnson City. The convention was grand—all would have enjoyed it we know. After gazing at those thousand and one mountains Lookout mountain looked pretty when we awoke on Thursday morning.

Unions Laud Baseball Head for Shunning "Unfair" Hotels

Chicago.—Praise for his cooperation in labor disputes was given to William Harridge, president of the American League of Baseball Clubs, by the Trades and Crafts Council for Hotels, Clubs and Restaurants, composed of twenty-four A. F. of L. unions functioning in the hotel and restaurant industry in Chicago.

At the beginning of the baseball season, the Trades and Crafts council asked all ball clubs to refuse to patronize the Del Prado and Edgewater Beach hotels, as they are unfair to organized labor.

When the American league president received this request, he expressed a desire to cooperate. As a result, visiting ball clubs have established their headquarters at "loop" hotels in Chicago, rather than at the Del Prado or the Edgewater Beath.

This year, the Detroit Tigers made their headquarters at the Congress hotel. In the past, the Del Prado had been used by this team, and when the change was made a representative of the Del Prado hotel paid Mickey Cochran, manager of the Tigers, a visit, to persuade him tc use that hotel, but was informed that Harridge had told the club that under no conditions could they have anything to do with the Del Prado as long as it was having trouble with the American Federation of Labor.

The dispute between the Del Prado hotel and the unions has been going on for several months. Unions have been picketing the Edgewater Beach for over four years.

It was a good convention and following letter will indicate:

Dear B:

I think the folks back home should know about the terrible predicament that our distinguished president of the Central Labor union found himself in.

Brother Curtis Sims went along with all of us on the mountain trip and while we were all waiting at the end of the line for the little engine to cool off, it seems that Brother Sims forgot that he is getting to be quite an old man and started making wagers on who could walk along the tracks for the longest time without touching his foot to the ground.

Unfortunately, Brother Sims lost his balance and fell down rather hard with serious detriment to that union labeled suit he was wearing.

However, somebody kindly offered Brother Sims a barrel to wear back to the hotel.

Yours truly,

Erskine Fischer and Earl Davidson insisted on stopping at every place between Chattanooga and Johnson City that had country ham and hot biscuits. We tried to limit them to ten biscuits at each place, but I think they fudged. And Erskine says that when he got home last night his wife had prepared a special treat for him—she had bought a whole country ham and fixed a lot of good hot biscuits on that new electric stove. Can't understand why he wasn't hungry!

A large group of delegates, headed by Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Long, of Johnson City, gathered at the "Country Kitchen" Tuesday night to dance. Didn't get out there myself, but saw Marie and Berlie Reynolds, Louise Petty and several of the others all dressed up ready to go.

Nancy Smith had not planned to attend the convention, but we thought we had better send her a telegram to come on when we saw Stan with dark glasses and a cane going around taking up a collection to help the blind.

There's just one thing that is bothering me about this convention—I still don't believe that Paula Hallmark and I look alike.

Judge Foust turned the table on us. We were pleased to see him in the hotel with us. He was on his way to Emory and Henry university, spending the night in Johnson City. We told him that he surely did not hope to sleep with our pack of Indians galloping through the building. He came back at us with a promise to issue an injunction to "restrain" the delegates from disturbing him.

The Chattanooga delegation made him a "visiting" delegate, and because of the number of his fellow-citizens being present it was suggested that he be elected mayor of Johnson City.

With Labor in Van, Nation Prepares To "Ring Bell" for Chinese Relief

Chairmen of the grous of the United Council of Pittsburgh for civilian relief in China discuss plans for the "Bowl of Rice" ball on June 17.

Top, left to right: Dr. H. H. Lowry, of the Carnegie Institute of Technology; Mrs. Frank Babylon ,of the Pittsburgh Postoffice Clerks' union; Howard L. Woodmansee, of the Pittsburgh Typographical union, who is general chairman, and Mrs. Harry C. Hill, a resident of Pittsburgh who lived many years in China.

Bottom: Andrew E. Young, of the Milk and Ice Cream Salesmen, Drivers' and Employes' union, who is taking part in the organization of the "Bowl of Rice" ball.

Washington. — Chinese civilian relief, under labor leadership, is "going to town" with a bang, coast to coast.

This week American radio stations in 225 cities began broadcasting 15-minute programs, running one a week. These recordings were prepared by Labor's Committee for Civilian Relief in China and they include talks by William Green, Matthew Will and Yoeh E. Wang, daughter of the Chinese ambassador.

In addition to this, Labor's Committee last week put on a full one-hour broadcast over the intercity network, covering the Atlantic coast, from Richmond, Va., north. The same program was carried over WCFL, Chicago. It included a re-enactment of the Japanese invasion of China in intense dramatic form.

2,000 Cities in Line.

City after city is reporting plans for a bowl of rice party on June 17 and every indication is that such parties will be held in at least 2,000 cities, under leadership of the United Council for Civilian Relief in China, with co-operation of Labor's Committee for Civilian Relief in China.

Among leaders in the campaign is Pittsburgh, Pa., which remembers that the Chinese Red Cross sent $300,000 to that city in 1936 for flood relief. The Pittsburgh committee announced that "one dollar will keep one Chinese civilian war sufferer one month."

All proceeds of the national Bowl of Rice ball are to go for the relief of Chinese civilians. It has been estimated that fifty million men, women and children have been made homeless as a result of the Japanese invasion and the resultant warfare.

Union Indorses Drive.

David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers, added his name to the long list of international union officers that make up the National Committee of Labor's Committee for Civilian Relief in China. The general executive board of the ILGU, meeting in Minneapolis, wired indorsement of labor's efforts to raise a relief fund for the victims of Japanese aggression in China. The support of the ILGWU brings a quarter of a million more of American workers into the active army organized by labor to strike a crushing blow to Japanese militarism by aiding the innocent victims of this bloody aggression.

The United Council for Chinese Civilian Relief will hold a mass meeting in Soldiers Field stadium, Chicago, Ill., June 3. This initiates the work of the Chicago council and will culminate in a great Bowl of Rice ball for June 17. Congressman Byron Scott, of California, will be the principal speaker.

Humanity Legion Formed.

Over and above organizing bowl of rice parties, labor has organized Labor's Humanity Legion to be made up of all trade unionists who contribute to the relief fund for the civilian population of China. Every local union will receive a beautiful roll of honor on which the names of its members who contribute to this cause will be signed. These names will then be turned over to the ambassador from China in Washington, as a reminder that the suffering of the Chinese people cannot continue without organized American labor doing everything possible to alleviate it.

I. F. T U. TURNS DOWN RUSSIAN UNIONS

Oslo, Norway. — The American Federation of Labor won its fight against admission of the Russian labor unions to the International Federation of Trade Unions when the executive council of the I. F. T. U. voted 16 to 4 to adopt a recommendation rejecting a Russian application for membership.

Matthew Woll, vice-president of the A. F. of L., presented American labor's opposition to admission of the Russian unions, which he charged were creatures of the Russian communist dictatorship and were no more free than the official labor organizations of Germany and Italy.

Twenty-six European and other national labor organizations, with a membership estimated at nearly 20,000,000 were represented at the meeting of the I. F. T. U. executives here.

The meeting adopted a unanimous declaration expressing sympathy for the Mexican workers in "their fight to regain control of the oil fields."

Maritime Board Improves Seamen's Living Quarters

New York.—Confirmation of the charge that ship owners and operators have imposed substandard living quarters on the workers who man American ships was included in an address here on the shipbuilding industry by Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the United States maritime commission.

Speaking at the National Maritime day celebration and sixteenth anniversary dinner of the Propeller Club of the United States at the Hotel Astor, Admiral Land said that poor living quarters have caused much of the unrest among seamen. The extent of the substandard living quarters was indicted in the admiral's statement that the maritime commission had taken cognizance of the conditions and that $2,000,000 was being spent on reconditioning quarters, as much as $60,000 being expended for this purpose on a single ship.

He said that while the maritime commission had fixed the minimum wage scale for seamen coming under its jurisdiction there was nothing to prevent increases through collective bargaining. He announced that manning scales had been worked out and some have been issued.

SENATE WORK RELIEF BILL TOTALS $3,247,000,000

Bans Government Competition With Utilities; Adds $175,000,000 for WPA, But Places Restriction on WPA Work; Slashes Rural Electrification Fund.

Washington.— The $3,247,000,000 spending-lending relief-recovery bill reported by the senate committee on appropriations increases the amount in the bill passed by the house of representatives by about $93,000,000, but contains certain reductions and limitations that are scheduled to bring forth considerable opposition on the floor of the senate as well as in the house when the bill is returned to that body if the senate restrictions prevail in the upper house.

The senate bill reduces from $500,000,000 to $400,000,000 the amount which the house authorized the public works administration to use as a revolving fund for loans to states and municipalities, with the provision that public money shall not be used in the construction of utilities "which will compete with any existing privately owned or operated public utility the rates of which are now subject to public regulation." It was said that this amendment was included at the request of the private electric light and power interests to block the construction of municipal light and power plants with the assistance of government funds.

The utilities provision hits a major administration power policy. The PWA now has on its approved list eighty-one public utility projects totaling $127,000,000, of which forty-nine, costing about $56,000,000, would compete at least in part with private plants. The public power group in the senate, headed by Senator Norris, of Nebraska, indicated that a strong fight would be made to eliminate the amendment from the bill.

As reported the bill added $175,000,000 to the WPA work relief fund of $1,250,000,000 approved by the house. The increase was designed to carry the work relief program to March 1, 1939, instead of only to February 1, as was intended by the house.

The senate text also placed new restrictions on WPA work. One amendment would require WPA workers to file statements of other income to be considered in fixing their relief benefits. Another amendment places a limitation of $7 per worker on materials for WPA projects.

Still another amendment adopted by the committee included the proposal of Senator Byrnes providing that if the pending federal wage and hour bill passes congress its provisions shall be made applicable to WPA workers doing the types of work covered by the proposed law.

Then in opposition to the agrarian interests who desire a large extension of electric light and power to farms, the committee sliced $75,000,000 from the $100,000,000 which the house allocated to the rural electrification administration for self-liquidating loans to the farmers or their non-profit associations for the construction of power plants.

An important amendment added by the senate committee appropriates $212,000,000 for parity payments to farmers under the new crop control law.

WPA Relief Costs At Record High

Washington. — Preliminary estimates indicate that six months of depression and increasing unemployment have sent the cost of all public relief during April to approximately $250,000,000 — the highest in the history of the WPA.

Prospects for the immediate future indicate that the rise will continue unchecked until late summer.

Principal factor in the sharp upward swing in costs since September, 1937, is the addition of more than 500,000 workers to WPA rolls during that period. WPA Administrator Hopkins has predicted a similar increase in the immediate future.

The low point in public relief expenditures since inauguration of the WPA program in 1935 occurred in September, 1937, when the aggregate was only $166,790,000. The previous high during the WPA was in March, 1936, when the total was $237,129,000. Since last fall the total has risen sharply.

MORE ABOUT TEPCO ELECTION

Columbia; Local Union No. 498, Murfreesboro and Manchester, and Local Union No. 541, Cleveland, will be the focal points in the campaigning to be done by union officials between now and the date of the election.

Purpose of Election.

The election was called by the I. B. E. W. for the purpose of becoming the bargaining agency for all workers in the power company's employ who engage in the production, distribution, operation, maintenance and construction of the electrical departments. There is no question at issue between the company and the union, and both the company officials and union officials are cooperating with the labor board in holding the election.

"Yes" and "No" Ballot.

The ballot to be used in the voting will be a strictly "Yes" and "No" ballot. That is, the ballot will read something like this:

"Do you wish the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, to represent you for the purposes of collective bargaining?" The vote will be "Yes," or "No."

While the name of no other organization will be on the ballot, the fact remains that to vote "No" is the same as voting for a radical organization, like the CIO, because the CIO, or some other radical organization, would immediately become active among the workers employed by the Tennessee Electric Power company if a majority of the voters should cast their ballot against the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Officers and members of the five local unions, it is said, will make effort to reach every worker in the territory before the polls close, and extend a cordial invitation to all eligible workers to vote for the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Texas Shrimp Workers Secure Union Contract

GALVESTON, Texas.—A closed shop contract, believed to be the first in the shrimp industry in this country, was signed at Galveston on May 3, Harry W. Acreman, executive secretary of the Texas State Federation of Labor announced. The agreement is between Local No. 21044 of the American Federation of Labor and leading shrimp-producing concerns operating in Galveston.

Besides the closed shop feature, the agreement provides wage increases and other considerations for the workers. Joseph S. Myers, United States Department of Labor Conciliator, brought the two sides together in a series of conferences and helped in working out satisfactory terms of the contract. Approximately 400 workers are affected.

The Shrimp Workers Local was organized last year, and on Dec. 17, 1937, presented a proposed contract to all wholesale shrimp producers, calling for wage increases and the closed union shop. The wholesalers disregarded the proposal, and on Feb. 8, the union sent letters to them asking for union's proposal, but nothing was consideration and a reply to the done.

Then President Bob Gritta of the Galveston Labor Council asked the Department of Labor to assign Mr. Myers to the case in an effort to bring the two parties together. He arrived in Galveston April 22, and went into a series of conferences with representatives of both sides. The agreement resulted.

Louisiana to Give Preference To Union-Made Products in Buying for State Use

Washington.—Gov. Richard W. Leche, of Louisiana, has notified Secretary-Treasurer I. M. Ornburn, of the Union Label Trades Department, American Federation of Labor, that the Louisiana state government will henceforth give preference to union-made goods and products.

In a letter to the heads of all state boards, departments, commissions and institutions, Gov. Leche said:

"As you know, this administration has constantly and consistently fought for the betterment of the masses of the people of this state and for the improvement of working conditions of the laboring man. As you further know, the greatest bulwark that the working man has against oppression, and at the same time, the greatest vehicle to further his welfare, is organization.

"Therefore I hereby instruct you that in the future, whenever it becomes necessary to purchase any materials for the use of your board, department, commission or institution, where price and quality are equal, give preference to union-made products.

"RICHARD E. LECHE,
"Governor of Louisiana."

Mr. Ornburn told International Labor News Service that he is urging state and city central labor bodies throughout the nation to seek action from governors and mayors similar to that taken by Gov. Leche.

N. Y. Merchants Hail Teamwork With Labor

Overtures of A. F. of L. for Ending Industrial Strife Accepted by Large Association in Nation's Metropolis.

New York, N. Y.—The American Federation of Labor's proposal for the "development of team work between industry and labor" for righting "many economic wrongs," remedying "many of industry's legislative burdens," and giving to the entire nation the "maximum of service which industry and labor may render," was accepted here by the Merchants' Association of New York, a very influential group in the city's commercial life.

The announcement was made by Louis K. Comstock, president of the association, who stated that a majority of its directors were in sympathy with the declaration of basic aims and objectives formulated by the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor at its meeting in Washington, D. C., on May 4 and reaffirmed by William Green, president of the A. F. of L., in a radio broadcast from the American Federation of Labor Union Label and Industrial Exhibition in Cincinnati on May 20.

The A. F. of L. Executive Council's declaration, mentioned by Mr. Comstock, emphasized support of private ownership, private initiative, private property and fair profits for investors, the creation of work in private industry, the highest wages industry can pay, the sacredness of contracts between management and labor, the unquestioned right of labor to collective bargaining, and the application of democratic principles and policies to the government of labor organizations.

CRY RESIGNS AS MACHINISTS HEAD

Takes Over Duties as State Factory Inspector.

Wallace Cry, formerly president of Lodge 56, International Association of Machinists, resigned that post at the last meeting of the lodge. Brother Cry has just been appointed by Gov. Browning as deputy factory inspector for this vicinity.

Although Brother Cry laid down his duties of president, he was named as one of the delegates to Central Body. His successor will be selected at a later date.

W. R. Barney, who represented Lodge 56 in the Tennessee Federation of Labor convention in Johnson City, made a complete report of the actions of the convention.

Lodge 56 will meet again on Monday, June 27, at Wheland hall, in the Memorial auditorium.

Agreements End Over Half of NLRB Cases

Washington.—From its first case in October, 1935, to May 1, 1938, the NLRB has handled 10,447 labor disputes, involving 2,116,338 workers. These cases were disposed of in four ways:

Fifty-five per cent by agreement of both parties;

Sixteen per cent dismissed by the board;

Twenty-four per cent were withdrawn by those who began the cases;

Five per cent in some other way, mainly by board decision and cervacation of representatives after elections, or by compliance, by dismissal or transfer to some other agencies.

Since 95 per cent of the cases were closed informally, only one in every twenty cases was subject to a public hearing.

In terms of the 2,116,338 workers involved in board closed cases these results show:

1,197,124 workers were parties to the agreement which closed the cases.

216,305 had their cases dismissed.

161,068 were in cases formally decided by the board, transfer, etc.

SOUTHERN LABOR "SPOTS"

Jackson, Miss.—Truck growers and agricultural workers throughout the state of Mississippi are organizing local unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. It is reported that this is one of the most rapidly growing unions ever started in this state. There is a potential membership of 6,000 among the workers, it is announced by union officials who made a survey of the field.

The National Council of Agricultural Workers, an affiliate of the A. F. of L., already embraces a membership of more than 60,000, and the organized groups in this state will be a part of the national council. Workers say they are already feeling beneficial effects of the union, one farmer asserting that every time a union meeting is held, the buyers grant more concessions.

Raleigh, N. C.—A labor delegation, representing organized labor in Raleigh, Tuesday threw its full support behind the Raleigh local International Association of Fire Fighters, who last week requested the city commissioners for an increase in salary in the 1938-1939 budget.

Representatives of Raleigh's Central Labor union called on the city board and urged that it grant in full the firemen's request for a pay raise of $30 per man. This would bring the department to a level with that of Greensboro, Winston-Salem, Charlotte and other cities in North Carolina. In the delegation which met with the commissioners were representatives of eight unions, including the Raleigh Typographical union, plumbers, steamfitters, machinists, moving picture operators, railroad trainmen, railway conductors, barbers and local bus drivers. All unions represented are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

High Point, N. C.—The first state building trades charter ever set up in the south was installed here Sunday, thus successfully ending the long campaign started early in the year for a state building trades council. Representatives of the several building crafts have held numerous meetings in different cities of the state during the past several months, creating interest in the statewide council and in getting new locals to join as members.

President C. A. Fink, of the State Federation of Labor, acted as installing officer, giving the obligation to the officers and presenting the charter, issued by the building and construction department of American Federation of Labor, to the newly organized state group.

Named on the board of trustees were: C. E. Green, High Point; E. W. Schaufner, Greensboro; E. L. Ketchie, High Point.

Named on the executive board were: John Bates, Greensboro; P. M. Taylor, Durham; E. C. Lowery, Winston-Salem; I. R. Cross, High Point; O. D. Wyatte, Raleigh; Ellis Wright, Asheville; T. L. Conder, Charlotte; G. P. Bullock, Greensboro.

The next meeting will be held in Asheville on Sunday, July 3, in the county courthouse, beginning at 1:30 o'clock. Reports by the various delegates showed working conditions throughout the state to be very favorable. Building crafts are joining the state organization in splendid manner, reports showed, and it is a conceded fact that the State Building Trades council, although its charter having just been received, has greatly improved the building trades conditions even while in process of organization.

Representative Briscoe, of the brick masons, and Ben R. Scarborough, of the powerful Common and Building Laborers' union, were at the meeting here Sunday.

Raleigh, N. C.—Asking for restoration of pay cuts made in 1932 and 1933, members of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes Local Union No. 180, city and county division, appeared before the city officials last week and made out a good case for themselves. Some of the city officials assured the city employes that the matter would be prosecuted to a successful conclusion. Reductions in wages and salaries were made in 1932 in the program of retrenchment.

Supporting the members of the union was President Gillis, of the Raleigh Central Labor union, heading a large delegation of trades unionists of the city.

Memphis.—Unprecedented progress in a three months' old drive to get more members for the Memphis unit of the International Association of Machinists was revealed here this week by T. K. Kilmartin, business agent.

Thirty-six new members were initiated to the Memphis union in its regular meeting last Wednesday night at the Labor Temple, bringing to more than 65 the total number of new members obtained since the campaign was launched early this spring.

Several new contracts have been signed, according to Mr. Kilmartin, and old contracts have been renewed or substituted.

"We plan to make Memphis a 100 per cent union city for the machinists' union," Mr. Kilmartin said.

Atlanta, Ga.—Mr. Frank Coffey, of the social security board, has announced meetings to be held in several cities in South Carolina, in co-operation with the South Carolina commission, at which unemployment compensation will be explained. All meetings will be held at 8 o'clock in the evenings, and all working people, employers and the public are urged to attend. Director Paul J. Aymon, of the A. F. of L. Atlanta office, requests all organizers, local union, central and state federation officials to co-operate with the government officials in these meetings.

Jolly Cabs Sign With Taxi Local

Closed Shop, Check-Off, Pay Boost and Hour Reduction Secured.

Local 594, Taxi Drivers, announced this week that Mr. Sanders, manager of the Jolly and Yellow Cab company, had signed a new agreement with the union.

The new contract secured a closed shop, as usual, a check-off and an increase in pay. Number of hours per week were reduced, with price and one-half for overtime.

Negotiations are in progress with other cab companies, and it is hoped that by next week it will be possible to announce other signatures.

BAKERY TRUCK DRIVERS PITTSBURGH STRIKE ENDS

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The ten-day strike of 1,400 bakery truck drivers called by the A. F. of L. Bakery Drivers' union, Local 485, ended when the union by a vote of 582 to 326 accepted a compromise proposal granting seniority rights. The original demands of the union included the closed shop and the union label on baked goods. The strike involved thirty-five major makeries in Southwestern Pennsylvania.

Ken Whitaker Named to Lead Housing Work

City Authority Charges Him With Duty of Initiating Steps to Get Funds.

The Chattanooga housing authority appointed Ken Whitaker, who for five years has acted as contact man between the city and federal relief agencies, as executive secretary and charged him with the duty of initiating immediate steps toward obtaining federal funds for a giant slum-clearance program.

One of his first instructions was that he wire the United States Housing Authority requesting that a project adviser be sent here at once to give advice that might prevent later delay and mistakes. The USHA was advised also that the local authority is now functioning with a paid personnel.

A formal statement issued by the authority after an executive conference preceding the meeting told of the appointment of Whitaker as full-time executive secretary and said that Paul Shepherd, real estate agent, is being considered for a "responsible position in connection with property acquisition and real estate problems." Whitaker's salary was fixed at $3,600 a year.

Support Pledged A. F. of L.— Louisiana Governor Lauds Federation at Big Meeting

New Orleans, La. Gov. Richard W. Leche, of Louisiana, made plain his support of the American Federation of Labor at a great labor mass meeting held here at which he said:

"I have stood by organized labor ever since I have been governor of Louisiana, and as long as I remain in the governor's office I am going to continue to stand by the American Federation of Labor and the workmen it represents."

"Every state building job in Louisiana is being done by members of the American Federation of Labor," the governor declared, "and all such work done during my administration will likewise be done by members of the unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor."

Speeches at the meeting were broadcast over a statewide hookup.

The governor was followed by John P. Frey, president of the Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, whose address was devoted, first, to the efforts made by the American Federation of Labor during the past half century, and then to criticism of John L. Lewis and the CIO.

E. H. Williams, president of the Louisiana State Federation of Labor, and representative of the American Federation of Labor, was chairman of the committee which had arranged the big labor mass meeting. All state federation of labor officials were present, and many international officers and representatives of the A. F. of L. also attended. Paul J. Aymon, of the Atlanta office of the American Federation of Labor, was present.

Holt Ross, southern representative of the Common and Construction Laborers' International union, introduced the speakers. He paid glowing tribute to Gov. Leche for his stand on the side of the common people, and for his resistance of all attempts of entrenched wealth to rule the peopel of Louisiana.

Pittsburgh Railway Asks Court to Cut Wage Rates

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Lower wages immediately for their 2,700 employes pending arbitration of a labor dispute was demanded by the officials of the Pittsburgh Railways and Motor Coach companies in a petition to the federal court here. The companies recently instituted proceedings for reorganization under Section 77b of the federal bankruptcy act.

The determination of the companies to impose wage reductions from 85½ cents an hour to 85 cents for trolley trainmen and from 78 cents to 72 cents for motor coach operators nearly caused a strike of the employes, which was only avoided by an order issued by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson instructing the companies to maintain wage levels until "further orders." Not satisfied with this, the companies made their demand for the issuance of a court edict enforcing wage cuts prior to the decision of the arbitration board.

Washington.—The text of the wage and hour bill, passed just before congress adjourned, is the result of a series of compromises, but a considerable number of conference committee members believe the measure better than either the house or senate bill was originally.

The maximum hours are fixed at 44 per week for the first year, 42 for the second and 40 for the third. Exceptions will be given later.

The minimum wage is fixed at 25 cents an hour the first year, and 30 cents an hour the second. But the 30 cent minimum remains a hope for six years, unless changed by the administrator on the advice of the industry committees.

The minimum wage at which a child may be employed by any but his parents or during vacation periods is 16 years, with provisions for exceptions and studies, for instance. At no condition will a child of the common's normal occupies to be employed for children the minimum age is 18 years.

Single Administrator Provided.

Administration of the act is given to a single administrator in the department of labor, appointed by the president, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, and drawing $10,000 a year. His staff comes under civil service. The administrator shall appoint one or more industry committees for each industry coming under the act. Each committee shall consist of an equal number of persons chosen to represent the public, the employers and the workers; and the chairman shall be one of the public group. They are paid expenses and a reasonable compensation by actual days of service.

Two-thirds of a committee makes a quorum and a majority gives a decision.

Court Appeals Permitted.

Strictly speaking, an industrial committee could consist of three persons, for "one" is a number, and one each would meet the letter of the law. But it is obvious that the intent of the law is to have larger committees.

Appeals may be taken from decisions and orders by the administrator to federal circuit courts of appeals, just as in the national labor relations act.

Hours may be exceeded by:

(1) "An agreement, made as a result of collective bargaining by representatives of employes certified as bona fide by the national labor relations board, which provides that no employe shall be employed more than 1,000 hours during any period of twenty-six consecutive weeks."

(2) An annual agreement, made with the same precautions.

(3) Seasonal industries, for a period of not more than twelve weeks in any calendar year.

Factors in Wage Fixing.

(1) Competitive conditions as affected by transportation, living and production costs.

(2) The wages established for worg of life or comparable character by collective labor agreements negotiated between employers and employes by representatives of their own choosing; and

(3) The wages paid for work of like or comparable character by employers who voluntarily maintain minimum-wage standards in the industry.

The south has always contended that it is discriminated against in freight rates.

The bill does not apply to executive or administrative officers, fisheries or fish canneries, agriculture or agricultural canning, country newspapers, or employes which come under other laws now existing.

PEORIA LABOR OPPOSING SCHOOL MILITARY TRAINING

Peoria, Ill.—Proposed establishment of a military training system in the Peoria high schools is opposed by the Trades and Labor assembly, which voted unanimously to fight the proposal.

Speakers charged that the Peoria board of education has been predominantly anti-labor and that the installation of R. O. T. C. units might serve as a means of educating future strikebreakers and "storm troops" for the open-shoppers.

"Labor has always been against militarism in education," said President Veder Storry, of the Trades and Labor assembly. "Personally, I am opposed to R. O. T. C. in our schools because militarism has always been opposed to the things labor stands for."

More Pay for Longshoremen.

Halifax, N. S.—An increase of 10 cents per hour for union longshoremen at the port of Pictou, N. S., has been contracted for by the Pictou Local 1557, of the International Longshoremen's association. The new rate is 45 cent per hour, a boost of 10 cents over the 1937 rate. The membership of the local has been recently substantially increased.

Union pay and other gains. Now, in the midst of depression. Hardly believable, except to trade unionists and the student of unionism, who knows what organization is capable of doing. But true, as the labor press throughout the nation testifies.

This column said early in the year that American Federation of Labor unions were "doing things and going places."

"A look through the labor press tells the story," it said. Labor press still telling the story, though unemployment has increased and depression deepened, two circumstances unfavorable to the progress of organized labor.

* * *

Wages boosted, hours shortened, contracts renewed, membership increased, new unions formed, is the story.

Take one union, the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes, for example.

Street car and bus workers of Indianapolis get new contract providing for pay raises, with paid vacations and improvement in working conditions.

Austin, Tex., street car workers win 10 per cent wage increase.

Traction workers in a score of other cities win wage increases.

Unionized workers in many other lines of industry obtain better pay or maintain present pay.

Printers, machinists, longshoremen, teamsters, electricians, pattern makers — all unionized of course—increase membership of local unions, in addition to winning better wages and conditions of work.

All of this progress is reported in the labor press. Much of it is never reported in the daily papers.

* * *

The picture of organized labor's progress is presented in the labor press as nowhere else. Often, wage and hour gains of the local unions are not considered "news" by the dailies. Perhaps increases of pay and shortening of hours are not very exciting news, especially when won by negotiation, as is the case with most. But they are mighty important to the workers who benefit. They are mighty important, too, to the local merchant. He may not always realize this, and here is a chance for the trade unionist to do some educational work. In this field of community education on economic and labor matters the labor paper is of invaluable help.

* * *

Mayor Reading, of Detroit, has asked the city council to pass an ordinance setting up an industrial peace board of twenty-four members. Representation on the board should be divided evenly between labor, the investor, management and consumer. With a paid director, the board would act "as a forum to which management and labor might bring their grievances," the mayor says.

This looks like an idea worth study in other cities beside Detroit. A mediation board closely resembling the one proposed for Detroit has been tried in Toledo for over two years. If Toledo labor approves of the board, labor in other cities would probably be disposed to look with favorable eye on the plan.

In any event, ideas looking toward co-operation and elimination of industrial strife call for consideration in these troublesome times when co-operative endeavor is so widely recognized as being vital to national welfare.

REMINGTON RAND MUST OBEY ORDER TO REHIRE 5,000, COURT WARNS

New York City.—In one of the most sweeping documents ever coming from a federal court in this part of the country, the U. S. circuit court of appeals of the Second judicial circuit has ordered Remington Rand, Inc., to rehire some 5,000 workers by July 15—or take the consequences.

When the supreme court refused to review the Remington Rand case, the NLRB went into the circuit court, asking in substance for punishment.

The court, in substance, gave the Remington Rand a little over six weeks to come into line and avoid punishment. The court said, in part:

"Apparently it (the company) believes that the substitutions were not pre-emptorily required, in the sense that they might be carried out regardless of their effort upon the company's business. That is a mistake; the order required the substitution unconditionally, regardless as much of their effect upon the company's business as of the hardship entailed upon those displaced.

"The old hands are to be offered their former jobs as soon as they can be identified, and so far as the jobs remain. . . . If this involves disturbance of the company's business, it is no doubt unfortunate; but having chosen to challenge the law, it must abide by the loss."

No Penalty Now.

"However," the opinion continued, "although we are not convinced that it (the company) is as yet disposed to conform, we will impose any penalty at the moment. We recognize that the statute was still new, and that there were grounds for anticipating that the supreme court might wish to review our order.

"We will therefore deny the motion without prejudice to a renewal, should the order not have been complied with within a reasonable time, which we fix at Friday, July 15, 1938."

Blow at "Mohawk Valley Plan."

In labor circles here, this action of the circuit court is considered pretty nearly a death blow to the strike-breaking plan which James H. Rand claimed to have invented, and which he touted at business gatherings as the "Mohawk Valley Plan." Like all such, this included efforts to stir up feeling against strikers, "citizens' committees," "back to work" movements and the like; but as Rand handled it, the company's hostility to the striker was widespread and unrelenting.

GREEN CONGRATULATES GILLETTE ON VICTORY

Washington.—President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, telegraphed congratulations to Senator Guy M. Gillette upon his renomination in the Iowa democratic primary election. Gillette, who defeated his chief opponent, Representative Otha D. Wearin, by a vote of about 2 to 1, had the support of the A. F. of L. and the Iowa State Federation of Labor.

"I extend hearty congratulations upon your renomination to the U. S. senate," Green said. "I was pleased over the fact that the American Federation of Labor played a substantial part in obtaining your decisive victory."

A Job Not Coded

By DR. CHARLES STELZLE

Executive Director, Good Neighbor League.

"Be a good neighbor."

That's the only way that the world's problems will be solved.

They aren't going to be settled mainly through relief agencies, through legislation or through "scientific" methods.

Charity organization societies are necessary in our complex life, but by far the best way they work is through "good neighbors"—men and women who become responsible for a family or an individual.

Legislation is necessary, because there are certain issues which only the state can determine through fundamental laws which all citizens must obey, if justice is to be done, and generally accepted standards are to be observed. But in all such legislation the spirit and the ideal of the Good Neighbor must be dominant, because, after all, the interest of the whole people must be conserved.

Scientific methods which are based upon collective experience and a wide knowledge of the facts should be employed, but science and organization must not coldly supersede or control the human elements involved.

Great honor is due to those who heal the sick, feed the hungry, house the homeless, clothe the naked, and lift the load of poverty through individual effort.

And greater credit, still, perhaps is due to those who give themselves to larger measures, through which the causes of disease, and hunger, and homelessness, and nakedness and poverty are removed.

But—greatest of all are those who through the spirit of the Good Neighbor create the will to fight on the part of the depressed, inspiring them to say, with spirit, "I will fight on!" so that they may do for themselves what no one else can do for them.

To thus serve the afflicted requires neither scientific knowledge, financial wealth, social standing nor official position—all that is needed is a warm heart, sincere sympathy, good judgment, and an intelligent use of the resources which others may make available.

And when we succeed in getting enough people in our towns and communities to assume the neighborly care of somebody else—helping them to find jobs, advising them when they are in trouble, having a sincere interest in their children—we'll all be a whole lot nearer the dawn of the new day.

PWA STANDS READY FOR QUICK ACTION

Washington.—Public works administration officials say that one-third of the $965,000,000 allotted PWA under the recovery measure will be distributed within four days after the bill becomes law.

PWA's administrative machine has been geared to start funds flowing into communities in every section of the country immediately upon approval of the lending-spending appropriations, they say.

Within four days after the funds from the recovery bill are available about $300,000,000 in direct grants, and between $40,000,000 and $60,000,000 in loans will be available for projects in every state, it is estimated.

Tennessee Has Only State Constitution Without Amendments

Knoxville.—Tennessee's 68-year-old constitution is the only unamended constitution in the United States, despite extensive social and economic changes in the state during the past half-century, writes Dr. William H. Combs, University of Tennessee political science instructor, in an article published in the June issue of the "American Political Science Review."

"The constitution exists today in exactly the same form as that in which it was adopted sixty-eight years ago," writes Dr. Combs. "Every one of the forty-seven constitutions, regardless of age, has been amended since the adoption of Tennessee's fundamental law in 1870; in fact, with the exception of Tennessee, there is not a state whose organic law has not been amended since 1912."

At present there are four amendments to the constitution pending action of the 1939 Tennessee legislature. Approved by the 1937 legislature, they must be accepted by two-thirds of the next assembly before being referred to the voters. The amendments will make possible (1) a classification of property for taxation and a graduated income tax; (2) a four-year term for the governor; (3) a four-year term for members of the legislature, and (4) an increase in the pay of legislators.

It is "interesting," commented Dr. Combs, that the constitution has "withstood every attempt at revision throughout a period characterized by extensive social and economic change." During the period the state has passed from an agrarian to a semi-industrial economy, and social relationships have become much more complicated, he said.

Though the document is flexible enough to permit the establishment of almost any kind of state administrative or educational system, it contains maiy provisions so rigid and inflexible that no progressive legislation can be enacted validly under them, he said. "For example, the tax system and the organization and function of rural local government are so embedded in the constitutional granite that no fundamental changes can be made until the organic law has been amended."

"In a word, governmental reform in Tennessee in keeping with modern social and economic progress has been thwarted by party politics, by indifference of the voters, and by a conception which views the constitution as an end and not a means to an end. The marvel is that the state has done as well as it has under a constitution which differs but little from the document framed in 1834."

Mr. Combs pointed out the frequent attempts to change the constitution, by both amendments and constitutional conventions. Seven proposals to call conventions have lost at the polls, but usually with less than half as low as 25 per cent of the registered voters participating. Twenty other proposals have lost out in the legislature. Three times the people have been deprived of the opportunity to vote on a convention after proposals have been referred to them by the legislature.

"Most frequently the causes of the failure have been political in nature," Dr. Combs said. "There will be little hope for reform until the people generally refuse to listen to arguments of those who have a vested interest in government, and until they learn that constitutional reform is neither democratic nor republican in nature."

Sales Tax Looms For Louisiana

New Orleans.—The sales tax bill has been passed by the house of representatives in the state legislature and will pass the senate. The bill provides a straight 1 per cent tax on everything sold or consumed in the state of Louisiana. There is an extra 1 per cent tax for the city of New Orleans, making 2 per cent for the Crescent City.

Women Organize for Consumer Protection

Mrs. A. L. Fleming, daughter of former Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady, and secretary of the Truth in Fabrics Committee of A. F. of L. trade union and women's auxiliaries, telling senators and representatives that women of the country want labelling legislation to protect consumer from inferior substitutes (shoddy) in buying virgin wool. Farmer, labor and women's organizations and leading woolen manufacturers are asking congress to turn the job of consumer protection over to the Federal Trade Commission.

Supreme Court Upholds NLRB Order Directing Remington Rand Company To Reinstate 4,000 Workers

Washington.—The next to the last meeting of the supreme court before the end of the term beginning in October, 1937, was a field day in many respects. The court refused to review the orders of the national labor relations board to three labor baiting employing corporations. It pared a sizable slice off the field exempt from federal taxes. It vacated an injunction issued by the good old "Methusaleh court" restraining an investigation by the federal power commission; and it heard arguments on that court's performance in refusing to let the NLRB withdraw its order in the Republic Steel case.

The big thing from the labor point of view was the Remington Rand case. The NLRB ordered the Remington Rand to offer reinstatement to 4,000 American Federation of Labor workers who went out in the strike of 1936, in which the company employed four notorious strikebreaking agencies and worked out the "Mohawk Valley" formula for strikebreaking. The company appealed to the circuit court, which upheld the board. With the supreme court refusing a review, Remington Hand has the pleasure of squaring things with 4,000 workers.

Other NLRB Orders Upheld.

In the Black Diamond Steamship case, the company must offer reinstatement to thirty-five employes, with back pay. In the Carlisle Lumber case, 147 workers must be put back, and the back pay totals —to date—$153,000.

Quite as important, though lacking some of the personal interest of the labor cases, was the holding of the court that the federal income tax applies to and can be collected from state employes engaged in work not absolutely essential to the existence of the state. The question at issue was the attempt of the federal government to collect income taxes on the salaries of employes of the Port Authority of New York. The court, by 5 to 2, upheld the government.

Black Goes Farther

Justice Black, as has happened often before, went farther. He held that the Sixteenth amendment gives congress power to tax incomes "from whatever source derived," and intimated that it is high time the court wiped out the whole series of exemptions.

The court also upheld the collections of taxes on admissions to state university football games. It knocked out an injunction of the Methusaleh court—the Third circuit court of Philadelphia—which restrained the federal power commission from investigating a gas and electric company. It heard argument on the case in which the same Third circuit court refused to let the NLRB withdraw its order in the Republic Steel case. The verdict will come later.

Charlotte, N. C.—That the North Carolina department of labor, under direction of Labor Commissioner A. L. Fletcher, is determined to enforce the state labor laws was evidenced here last week when several employers were given jail sentences for violations of the labor laws. Restaurants and soda shops were principal violators, and the charges upon which the proprietors were convicted included that of working women employes more hours than the law provides; failure to provide one day's rest in seven as provided in the labor laws, and for failure to post an abstract of the labor laws in a conspicuous place in the cafe.

Atlanta, Ga.—Atlanta is planning to obtain $15,000,000 from the FHA fund, and Atlanta labor is to be represented on the local committee in the spending of this sum by O. M. Harper, member of the local Carpenters' and Joiners' union. The Georgia Federation of Labor, the Atlanta Federation of Trades and the Atlanta Building Trades council requested both the governor and the mayor to appoint one man from labor on the local committee.

A list of several names was submitted to the mayor by Mr. Dewey Johnson, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades. These names had been suggested by various crafts affiliated with the Atlanta Federation of Trades. Mr. Harper had the indorsement of his local union for the position. The mayor made the appointment of Mr. Harper.

The local committee will promote and build one or more housing projects to replace slum areas. Rome and other Georgia cities are likewise taking advantage of the FHA proposals, and it is expected that many large building projects will be started throughout the state. Attention is called to the necessity of immediate action, however, as the time limit for cities to file applications for portions of this fund is short.

PIQUA COMPANY MUST RECOGNIZE AFL UNION

Piqua, O.—The Piqua Munising Wood Products company, Cleveland, O., wood products manufacturer, has been ordered by the national labor relations board to bargain collectively upon request with A. F. of L. Federal Labor Union No. 18787 as exclusive employe representative at the company's Piqua plant and "to cease interference with the exercise by employes of their right to join and assist labor organization."

The board based its action on evidence that "the company had refused to deal with the union on and after Aug. 8, 1937, when the latter had been designated as collective bargaining agency by a majority of its Piqua production and maintenance employes, and had persistently sought to discourage union membership, particularly by anti-union statements of V. P. Geffine, president of the company, and by shutting down the plant on July 27, 1937."

By BROWNIE HOPPER

At the convention last week all delegates were urged to organize and support label leagues in the various Tennessee cities. Chattanooga's Label league was organized about three years ago and is the oldest league in the state. Memphis now has a Union Label league and other cities will make an effort to form leagues during this next year.

Certainly our Label League has been receiving from our labor movement. It has made remarkable progress with its small membership and deserves full cooperation from all labor organizations.

We are fully expecting to see every one of the seventeen ladies who visited the convention at the meeting on the fourth Friday of this month.

One of our union families tried the Rich-Maid coffee last week for the first time and they add their approval of this union-labeled brand. It is good coffee and the tea is just as good. Why don't you try a pound of it?

Somebody told me that at the recent Union Label exhibition in Cincinnati Sally Rand modeled a dress made entirely of the tiny union labels that union-made garments have in them. Believe that's a much better costume than the much-advertised "bubble" outfit.

Labor organizations in Hollywood have a big asset—some of the famous people in movieland walk the picket line when occasion demands. Eddie Cantor is president of the actors' organization and Robert Montgomery and Joan Crawford have picketed several times—not just for their own organization, because theirs is a powerful group and rarely has labor difficulties. But whenever the Electricians, Culinary Workers, etc., needs help, they can be counted on. It makes me enjoy their pictures a lot more.

TERROR IN CANTON

(From the Washington, D. C. Post)

For many successive days squadrons of Japanese planes have rained death and destruction on Canton, with casualties mounting high into the thousands.

As always, the pretext is that these air raids are necessary to achieve the destruction of military objectives and that these alone are the objects of attack. That is obvious eye-wash. The principal purpose of the bombings is to terrorize the Chinese and destroy their will to resist. They are much more likely to unite all China in an undying hatred of everything Japanese.

It is difficult to avoid the conclusion that the military leaders responsible for such inhuman and uncivilized tactics have lost their heads completely. Unable to win, in fair fighting, the war which they originally believed would be a walk-over, the Japanese militarists manifest their wrath on helpless civilians unable to fight back. The Canton bombings are a clear sign of Japan's increasing lack of assurance regarding the outcome of the undeclared war.

Savannah, Ga.—An agreement was signed here last week between the Building Trades council and Mr. Ben Massell, Atlanta contractor doing a big job here, providing for the use of union labor all the way through the job. Business Agent Ferrell, of the Building Trades council; W. B. Jarvis, A. F. of L. organizer; A. F. McDonald, of the Operating Engineers, and C. F. Strickland, of the Structural Iron Workers, represented the building trades crafts in the negotiations. Union labor throughout the Savannah district is highly elated over the signing of this building trades agreement with the Atlanta contractor.

New Orleans, La.—A contract was signed here last week by the Mississippi Shipping company, of New Orleans, and the American Federation of Labor Seamen's union. Announcement of the agreement was made by officials of the the union and N. O. Pedrick, president of the company. The contract will be effective from June 1, 1938, through Dec. 31, 1939, Mr. Pedrick said.

The A. F. of L. Seamen's union was recognized by the national labor relations board as collective bargaining agent for seamen on the company's ships after it defeated the CIO National Maritime union in a labor board election to select the bargaining agent. The contract was signed by Mr. Pedrick; Louis B. Pate, assistant to the president; Captain J. E. Hart, port captain; C. W. McKenzie, port engineer, and T. V. Major, port steward, as representatives of the campany. William R. Ross, Mobile member of the executive board; Finn Schefstad, New Orleans business agent, and various other representatives signed for the union.

New Orleans, La.—Patrick Ryan, director of the American Federation of Labor Seamen's union, who was seriously injured in an automobile accident on May 28, is reported to be improving. The accident occurred near Charlottesville, Va., and Mr. Ryan has been in the Virginia hospital at Charlottesville since that time. John J. McBride, assistant director, is in charge of the organization work in this area during Mr. Ryan's inability to serve.

The graduate program has been enlarged to allow for eight different curricula in education, an for one year's pre-doctoral work in education. Several new graduate courses have been added.

The 17th annual education conference will be held during the first term, July 7-9. U-T specialists, U. S. specialists, county supervisors, and the Parent-Teacher association will participate in the program, which will be centered upon the education of exceptional children.

U. S. AIDING JAPAN

(By Eliot Janeway in Harper's Magazine.)

Japan is the one nation in the world whose aggression we fear. Japan is the unashamed attacker of a country with whom we sympathize, whose magnificent defensive stand we admire heartily. In this attack have occurred atrocities—the bombing of universities, for example—which shock the world.

American industry is selling Japan the goods which permit her to do this and to rear grandiose schemes for continuing to do this on a scale so huge that all Western Asia will be reduced to the level of the Japanese subjects in Korea. Seventy-five per cent of the gasoline Japan used last year, gasoline for tanks and bombers and warships, came from the United States. One-third of the steel she made last year, steel for shells, bombs, dum-dum bullets, was made out of American raw materials.

Here, then, is the paradox. The Japanese menace is made possible by American exports. Because of the Japanese menace our government is building battleships with money which might otherwise go for housing or to ease the tax burden of our people. What is to be done about this situation is up to the American people.

Our concern with any man is not with what eloquence he teaches, but with what evidence.—St. Augustine.

MACHINISTS SEE MORE JOBS COMING IN NAVY YARDS

Washington.—A survey by District No. 44, International Association of Machinists, indicates that the trend of employment in navy yards and arsenals is upward and seems likely to continue so for a long period. Increased employment is expected from the naval expansion bill, signed by the president, particularly in view of the inclusion of a provision that the Walsh-Healey act shall apply to private shipyards on naval construction.

The Federal Machinist, organ of District No. 44, says that work under the naval bill "should be the means of maintaining steady employment in the navy yards and arsenals for many years to come, and will be the means of maintaining more than the present navy yard and arsenal work load, if the navy department continues its present policy of having 50 per cent of the work performed in the navy yards and arsenals."

Walsh-Healey Act Extended.

An important provision of the bill, sponsored by organized labor, was section 12 which extends the provisions of the Walsh-Healey act to that part of the naval construction program which will go to private shipyards. Formerly, all materials used by the government in the construction of vessels in navy yards had to be produced under the 40-hour week provisions of the Walsh-Healey act, while the act did not apply to private shipyard construction, under existing interpretations of the act. This circumstance placed the navy yards at a disadvantage in comparative costs of work.

While Section 12 of the naval expansion act may not apply to materials purchased by private shipyards, it will apply to their own employment policies.

Employment Now Upward.

Beginning in October of 1937, and during the six months period following, several thousand navy yard employes were laid off for lack of workfl

The tide has now turned, and men are returning to work at the Puget Sound Navy yard, the Norfolk Navy yard, the Boston Navy yard, and the Portsmouth, N. H., Navy yard.

Officials of the navy department think that beginning this fall, men will be put to work in all of the navy yards in large numbers to the point where a year and a half thence, the forces will be practically double what they are at present.

COOPERATION BETWEEN LABOR AND EMPLOYERS IS ADVOCATED

Lewis G. Hines, A. F. of L. Director of Organization, Tells Advertisers' Industrial Conference That Team Work Between Industry and the Workers Is Necessary for American Progress.

Detroit, Mich.—The importance of co-operation and team work between those who own and manage American industry and the workers who toil produces the goods and services on which production and distribution are based was emphasized in an address by Lewis G. Hines, director of organization of the American Federation of Labor, in an address before the industrial conference of the National Industrial Advertisers' Association, Inc., in the Masonic Temple here.

Mr. Hines stressed the recent statement of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor inviting "industry to discard the weapons of industrial warfare directed against labor by employers associations both now and in days gone by" and the substitution of A. F. of L. collective bargaining for the violent methods frequently used by employers to determine industrial relations.

"We have stated that we invite industry to discard the weapons of industrial warfare," he said. "We believe that if the program of the American Federation of Labor were to be permitted to expand, without the interference from those employers who have made use of all the weapons of industrial warfare, such as injunctions in labor disputes, the industrial spy, and other equally un-American means, that labor can play an increasing part in the solution of our economic problems with a corresponding contribution to the advancement of the welfare of our people.

"While organized labor has been intensely practical in the application of its principles I believe there is enough idealism in the hearts and minds of our people to prompt us to hope that the day is not far distant when we may be able to substitute cooperation for industrial warfare and I believe that we can dare to hope that a psychology may be developed in this country that will subscribe to a new philosophy that will place the welfare of the many before the interests of the few.

"America is a great country, the greatest in the world, and by our forefathers, who pioneered in the development of this country from a wilderness into a great industrial nation which has brought manifold blessings to rich and poor alike, we have been left a priceless heritage which must be perpetuated. I say to you men and women here today that we owe it as a duty to ourselves and to those who are to come after us to keep the faith with our forefathers, to this end I give you the words of the immortal Samuel Gompers: 'We must carry on'"

"The Labor Parade" Signed for by President Green for Minimum of Thirteen Productions in Truly "Big Time" Undertaking.

Washington.—A year on the air has been planned by the American Federation of Labor in the biggest radio undertaking yet launched by labor in the United States.

This week President William Green, of the A. F. of L., entered into agreement with Chester M. Wright and associates for a minimum of thirteen productions of "The Labor Parade," presenting headline labor news in dramatic re-enactment. This decision was reached after two productions had been aired on fifty-nine stations as a test.

The program will be launched on a minimum of fifty-five stations, with the number increasing to 100 or more as rapidly as possible.

Programs to Include Major News Episodes.

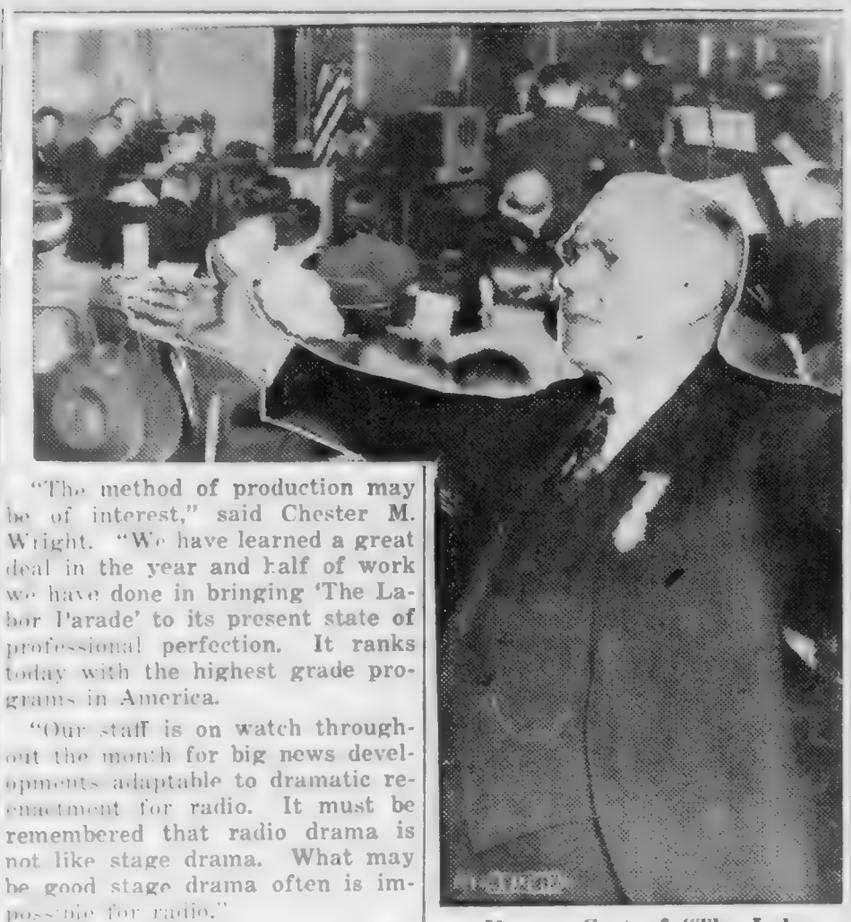
Running 15 minutes, all programs will be recorded and will run at various times throughout the country. The programs will be written, directed and produced by Chester M. Wright and associates and recorded in the Washington studios of Radioscriptions, Inc. Walter Kroboloch is production director for Chester M. Wright and associates' radio division.

In each program there will be re-enactment of three major news episodes, with one or two shorter events. A complete orchestra will work in the making of each program.

"Labor Parade" Year and Half Old

"The Labor Parade" was originated by Chester M. Wright and associates a year and a half ago. It was produced first under sponsorship of the Commercial Telegraphers and has been produced since under varying sponsorships. In Washington it has been used for the past year at the Democratic key address when a full hour show has been built for groups of participating unions, including the International Association of Firefighters, the Bakery and Confectionery Workers, the Brown and Williamson Tobacco company, the Silk Industry Joint council, which includes dressers and cuppowers, and other large unions and groups.

The production schedule calls for shipment of recordings from Washington on the 10th of each month, beginning with July.



"The method of production may be of interest," said Chester M. Wright. "We have learned a great deal in the year and half of work we have done in bringing 'The Labor Parade' to its present state of professional perfection. It ranks today with the highest grade programs in America.

"Our staff is on watch throughout the month for big news developments adaptable to dramatic re-enactment for radio. It must be remembered that radio drama is not like stage drama. What may be good stage drama often is impossible for radio."

Material Carefully Selected and Tested.

"At the beginning of the week in which production is to take place there is a sifting of all material. The final selection is made two days before first rehearsal. Script is prepared after conferences. Then there are more conferences and several revisions.

"The day before first rehearsal copies of the script are sent to the orchestra director for scoring. The characters are cast and a copy is sent to each member. The production director works out sound effects, some of which are produced in the studio, while others are produced from sound effect recordings. A library of sound effects is on file."

Watch for Program, Is Greens' Advice.

"First rehearsal is held, running through half a night. The following night there is final rehearsal and production. Of course revisions may be necessary at the last moment, because some unusually important event may happen just before production, demanding inclusion in the script."

The federation's program calls for one recording a month, at the beginning. This schedule will be stepped up to twice a month, if demand develops; and finally to once a week. For the summer months the once-a month schedule probably will prevail.

Watch for 'The Labor Parade' on your local station," advises President Green. "Go to your station now and ask if the new labor program has been secured. If not, ask why not—and follow it up until successful."

Gillette's Victory In Iowa Primary Pleases Labor

Washington.—Victory of Senator Guy M. Gillette in the Iowa primary election pleases organized labor, which indorsed him for renomination on the democratic ticket and gave him strong support.

Senator Gillette, it was charged, had been marked for defeat because he opposed President Roosevelt's court bill and because he was suspected of being lukewarm in his support of some Roosevelt policies. His principal opponent was Representative Otha D. Wearin, said to have been the choice of "left wingers" in the Roosevelt administration who favor a "purge" of officeholders in the democratic party not 100 per cent for the new deal program.

Senator's Record Approved.

As the primary campaign neared its close, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, made the federation's position plain in a telegram to A. A. Couch, head of the Iowa State Federation of Labor.

"Are those you represent going to turn down a United States senator who complied with every request for labor legislation?" Green asked, adding: "That would be the height of ingratitude."

Previously, Couch and the state federation had vigorously indorsed Senator Gillette and printed a list of the labor bills he had supported. Comparing the records of Gillette and Wearin, President Couch said: "I find from their records that Senator Gillette is far more acceptable to Iowa labor and agriculture than Wearin."

Sees "Outsiders" Rebuked.

After the election, Senator Gillette issued the following statement:

"I do not consider the results as a personal victory so much as I consider them to be a rebuke administered by the people of the state to a group of outsiders who attempted to say to the voters of Iowa whom they should send to the United States congress to represent them."

Columbia, S. C. — Secretary-Treasurer F. E. Hatchell, of the State Federation of Labor, has released a statement concerning the convention which is to be held here Friday and Saturday, June 24 and 25, which shows that credentials already received assure a larger convention this year than ever before in the history of the state federation. President Al Flynn, of Charleston, will preside over the sessions of the convention. Reports show that there has been more organizing activity in South Carolina during the past year than ever before.

The Columbia Central Labor union will act as host to the convention, and plans, although incomplete, indicate that the event will be one of the most enjoyable ever witnessed in the state's capital. Headquarters will be maintained at the Jefferson hotel, and a barbecue and dance will be the main events of the social activities.

"It Establishes a Rock-Bottom and Universal Minimum Wage of 25 Cents an Hour for the First Year, to Be Raised to 30 Cents in the Second Year; Below These Figures the Law Will Not Permit Wages to Drop in Industries Engaged in Interstate Commerce; It Establishes a Universal Ceiling for Hours by Providing a Top 44-Hour Week the First Year, a 42-Hour Week the Second Year and a 40-Hour Week Thereafter."

"In Fighting for Sound Legislation Which Would Safeguard the Interests of Labor, the American Federation of Labor for the Past Year Has Waged a Single-Handed Battle; It Received No Assistance From the Dictators of the CIO; In Fact, the CIO Dictators Gave a Public Demonstration of All-Around Stupidity, Feebleness and Outright Treachery to Labor That Was Nothing Short of Disgraceful."

Washington, D. C.—A strong defense of the major provisions of the Federal Wage and Hour Bill, passed by Congress and signed by President Roosevelt, establishing minimum wages and maximum hours for workers employed in interstate commerce industries featured a statement issued here by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and sent to national and international unions, state federations of labor, city central bodies and directly chartered federal labor unions.

The statement also contained an equally strong denunciation of the leaders of the Committee for Industrial Organization for their persistent opposition to the principles set forth by the American Federation of Labor as necessary in this nation-wide legislation to benefit "all working men and women, especially the unorganized and downtrodden workers," and at the same time safeguard the interests of labor generally.

While commending the provisions of the act fixing minimum wages at 25 cents an hour for the first year and 30 cents for the second year, and a maximum work week of 44 hours for the first year, 42 hours the second year and 40 hours thereafter, Mr. Green said the act fails to come up to the standards of the American Federation of Labor in other respects.

He criticized as "cumbersome and undesirable" the method for administration of the act, which provides for a wage and hour division in the Department of Labor under the direction of the administrator, who is authorized to set up industry boards to make surveys of wages and submit recommendations to the administrator, who has the authority to apply them.

Mr. Green said the provisions of the act "permitting differentials by industries and by classifications within industries on wages between 30 and 40 cents an hour treads on dangerous grounds."

In addition, he believed "the provision requiring certification by the National Labor Relations Board of collective bargaining representatives with regard to exemptions from maximum hour provisions where contracts with organized labor exists, appears to be an unwise delegation of new powers to that board."

"However," he added, "the bill contains such vital concessions to the principles for which the American Federation of Labor stood and which the CIO opposed that we should not condemn it in entirety for its undeniable faults." These faults the American Federation of Labor would seek to eliminate by amendments.

Mr. Green included in his statement a succinct account of the various Federal wage and hour bills considered by Congress during 1937 and 1938, giving the position of the American Federation of Labor in regard to them and condemning the CIO for its persistent antagonism to the provisions held necessary by the A. F. of L. for adequate protection of the workers.

He said the original Black-Connery bill was finally opposed by the A. F. of L. because a careful scrutiny showed that it was "thoroughly bad and dangerous." To remedy these defects the American Federation of Labor introduced its own bill providing for "a flat minimum wage of 40 cents an hour without differentials, a flat maximum work week of 40 hours for the entire country," with infractions of the law to be prosecuted by the Department of Justice.

Despite the reactionary provisions of the Black-Connery bill, Mr. Green said CIO leaders supported it and opposed the A. F. of L. bill. Finally the House of Representatives, following the recommendation of the American Federation of Labor, recommitted the Black-Connery bill, thus killing it for the special session of Congress last year.

When the present session of Congress met, the statement said, the administration, following a conference at the White House at which Mr. Green and the presidents of three A. F. of L. departments were present, agreed to support the principles fought for by the American Federation of Labor in the proposed wage and hour legislation.

The result of the White House conference was that the "House Labor Committee, despite CIO opposition, drafted a new wage-hour bill satisfactory to the American Federation of Labor." This bill, after considerable delay caused by the attempt of the House Rules Committee to block its consideration, Mr. Green concluded, has now become the law of the land largely through the united support of the officers and members of the American Federation of Labor, notwithstanding the unending opposition of the leaders of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The long and difficult struggle over enactment of a national minimum wage and maximum hour bill has been concluded at last with the passage of a compromise measure by congress.

This bill is far from perfect. There are certain provisions in it which we would like to see changed and hope to have changed before very long. But, in the main, it gives effect to the fundamental principles fought for so courageously and tenaciously by the American Federation of Labor in the in-

Woodworkers 1882 Elect Officers

Local 1882 held an interesting meeting last Tuesday, with many important items coming up for discussion.

The annual election was held with Paul Delzell being chosen for president. This is Brother Delzell's second term. G. N. Varnell was elected vice-president without any opposition and Joe Delzell was chosen for financial secretary over three opponents by a close margin. Floyd Smith, who has served as recording secretary since the local was formed, was kept in office by unanimous ballot, as was W. O. Bankston, who was re-elected treasurer.

Roy Allen was chosen for conductor and Ray Wild for warden. Brother Wild was also elected trustee to serve with Carl Skinner and Claude Gaines.

F. L. Parker was elected as the new member of the shop committee by acclamation.

R. S. Gaines, who very ably represented the local at the Tennessee Federation of Labor convention, gave a fine report of the state meeting.

Reports were made by the committee on the progress being amde in contract proceedings.

Local 1882 is now meeting every Tuesday afternoon at 3:45, instead of meeting at night as it formerly did. The local is trying out this new meeting time, in order to get a larger attendance at the meetings.

Veteran Printer Takes New Job In Nashville

Machinist Clyde Davis Leaves News After Seventeen Years.

Clyde Davis, who has been machinist at the Chattanooga News in the composing room for seventeen years, left for Nashville last week to take over similar duties on the Nashville Tennessean. Mr. Davis has been a valuable and faithful member of Chattanooga Typographical union and he will be missed in the activities of No. 89.

The Nashville Tennessean will move into its beautiful new building this week-end, and it is to be presumed that the management decided that new equipment and surroundings deserved the best that could be secured, which accounts for Mr. Davis being offered the post as wet-nurse for the linotypes.

Some are accusing Mr. Davis of not being a very "steady" man, staying with the News for seventeen years only to fly off to other parts. We hope he will finally settle down in one place.

TFL Secretary To Confer With President Green

T. R. Cuthbert, secretary to Tennessee Federation of Labor, left for Washington Wednesday night, where he will confer with President William Green on matters pertaining to organized labor in Tennessee.

While in Washington an earmarking for six million dollars for the Chattanooga Housing Authority will be requested of the United States Housing Authority. It is felt certain that the request will be granted, and that the work will be started to tide over the unemployment problem this winter.

He sent in a request to this paper that his address be changed so that he can keep up with Chattanooga labor activities.

A "secret" report on naval aviation disasters in maneuvering on the Pacific this last winter and spring is said to have arrived in Washington. No report dealing with the death of 51 trained fliers and the loss of seven big planes, four of which were sunk without trace, has any right to be secret except in war time.

Colonial Bakery Renews Contract With Baker Boys

Curtis R. Sims, business agent for Local 25, Bakery and Confectionery Workers, announced today that the Colonial Baking company renewed its agreement with the union last Tuesday.

The new pact calls for a slight increase in pay and better working conditions.

Negotiations are not yet completed with Cameron & Barr and the Union Baking company.

Idle Are Not Loafers, Welfare Chief Asserts

New York, N. Y. A positive denial of the favorite canard shot out by reactionaries that the unemployed are chronic loafers and do not want jobs, with especial emphasis on those on relief, was made here by William Henry Matthews, for 25 years director of family welfare for the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor.

"I won't make any general estimate of the percentage of congenital loafers," he said, "but it has been my experience that the vast majority of unemployed men and women want only a chance to work and not alms. I don't think we are ever going to get out of the hole with the WPA, but I do believe that relief is necessary and that the WPA is the best one available."

DRASTIC ANTI-PICKETING LAWS SYMPTOM OF BIG CALIFORNIA WAR AGAINST UNIONISM

Long Beach, Cal.—The Long Beach city council has passed the most drastic anti-picketing ordinance with which even California has been afflicted. The character of the ordinance is shown by the definitions. Here are two of the six given:

"1. Banner—The term banner shall mean and include, but shall not be limited to any banner, sign, newspaper, insignia, badge, arm banner, hat band or sign, transparency or sign, waist band, sash, banner or sign.

"2. Loiter—The term to loiter shall mean and include to be slow in moving, to delay, to hinder, to be dilatory, to spend time idly, to saunter, to lag behind."

Conviction Made Easy.

It is obvious that if a man walked by an unfair establishment with a newspaper in his hand, or if he walked slowly without even a newspaper, he could be convicted of picketing under the Long Beach ordinance. It is, virtually, an ordinance giving the employers of the town the privilege of arresting anybody they dislike.

Similar ordinances have been passed in Oxnard and Ventura, though in the latter city, union men are circulating a petition for a referendum. A similar drive is being pushed in Santa Barbara, but Fillmore turned it down.

"Big Business Fascism" Charged.

The Contra Costa County Labor Journal, Richmond, Cal., has summed up the situation in the first two paragraphs of an editorial, as follows:

"Organized labor, trained by hard experience to be on the alert to the activities of its enemies, is fully aware that California is at present the focus of a nation-wide campaign to mislead and turn the public against the principles of the union movement.

"This concerted effort, led by labor-hating industrialists, has all the earmarks of big business fascism, and is backed by huge war-chests."

MINE OWNERS SOUGHT TO ENLIST CLERGYMEN IN WAR ON UNIONS, HARLAN TRIAL JURORS HEAR

London, Ky.—Two things featured the government's case against the Harlan county mine owners the last few days. One was the censorship which the mine owners sought to exercise over the clergy of the region; and the other was the effort to get women to help the sheriff's office to "lure" union organizers to places where they could be attacked without difficulty.

Rev. Carl E. Vogel, former pastor of the Methodist church in Harlan, testified that from the day the Wagner act was passed, the Harlan County Coal Operators' association was determined that it should not be enforced in Harlan. He told of being called to the office of the secretary of that association, and being asked to help "oust" Rev. W. L. Young, a minister in the Black Mountain Coal company camp, because he was "too actively engaged in union activities." Vogel refused, he said.

The murder of Lloyd Clouse was described by several witnesses the same day. The only defense was that Clouse and the deputies "shot it out." This was contradicted by repeated testimony that Clouse's pistol had not been fired, not even been drawn.

Mrs. Martha Howard, wife of a grocery clerk in Harlan, told how she was approached by John Hickey, deputy sheriff and one of the defendants on trial. It was in January, 1937, when the union drive was at its height, and Hickey told her that the sheriff's office was offering $100 a head for union organizers, she testified. He wanted her to lure these organizers singly to lonely roads, so that they could be murdered without risk to the killers.

John Morrison, Labor Union Veteran, Dies

Leader in New York Trade Union Circles for More Than Fifty Years Passes Away at 74.

New York, N. Y.—John Morrison, prominent in the organized labor movement for more than half a century, died at his home, 585 West End avenue here, June 19 at the age of 74.

Mr. Morrison was president of the Carpet Weavers' International union in the eighteen eighties. Since then he had been associated with the trade union movement in many capacities. He was a friend of the late Sauel Gompers. At the time of his demise he had charge of advertising for the American Federationist, official organ of the A. F. of L., and various union publications in the building trades.

Mr. Morrison was born in New York on Feb. 29, 1864. He is survived by a nephew, Joseph Moran, and several nieces. His wife died two years ago.

One-third of the American people are ill-fed, ill-clad, ill-housed. Yet 12,000,000 workers, whose labors would help to fill all these lacks and might abolish them altogether, are kept idle. And still we pride ourselves on what we call intelligence.

Teachers' Union Charters 60 New Locals, Increases Membership 58 Per Cent in Year

Chicago.—More than 6,000 of Chicago's public school teachers have become members of the American Federation of Teachers, an A. F. of L. affiliate, in the last twelve months. Membership in Chicago has been tripled in the last year and over two-thirds of the city's teachers are union members.

A big increase has taken place since the formation of the Chicago Teachers' union, Local No. 1. Last October four local unions surrendered their charters ot the American Federation of Teachers and became a part of one big union for all teachers which, with an approximate membership of over 8,000, is the largest teachers' union in the world. Since that time:

Half of the 23½ per cent pay cut, taken during the depression, has been restored and full restoration has been promised by city authorities.

The right of organized teachers to hold union meetings in the schools after classes, almost universally recognized but recently denied in Chicago, has since been recognized by school authorities.

Support, by the union, of court suits brought in behalf of victims of spoils politicians, has directed the attention of the public to the need for stricter observance of the merit system.

While the largest increase in membership has taken place in Chicago, the American Federation of Teachers, as a whole, has increased its membership considerably. Sixty new locals have been chartered by the union and the total membership is 58 per cent greater than it was a year ago and twice as large as it was two years ago, according to Irwin R. Kuenzli, secretry-treasurer.

New York Methodists Score Maldistribution of Income

New York City.—The New York East Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church went on record as favoring slum clearance, adequate relief for the unemployed, Federal legislation regulating wages and hours of workers engaged in anything which affects interstate commerce, and the organization of consumer cooperatives. The report as adopted reaffirmed the church's defense of civil liberties, and supported the birth control movement.

This stand was not taken without spirited debate, in which conservative members said it looked toward socialism, and the liberals replied that it was merely carrying Christian doctrines into social practice.

The report scored the old order of things, saying that in 1929 19,400,000 workers had annual incomes of less than $1,000, while 1 per cent of the national population received 20 per cent of the nation's income. But it also said that the New Deal had failed because, though the national income had been raised from $40,000,000,000 in 1933 to $70,000,000,000 in 1937, there had been "a failure to distribute this purchasing power to the mass of consumers."

"Class-consciousness is increasing," the report continued. "Industrial and social strife flares up the minute conditions improve even slightly. Short-sighted employers have accepted such methods as the Rand formula, which labels labor representatives as 'agitators,' subsidizes local law enforcement in times of strikes and attempts to make a holy war out of an outworn attitude toward labor.

"The alliance of industrialists, military and semi-military groups, conservative political parties and reactionary religious bodies is the sign of a rising fascism and the prelude of the disintegration of freedom and democracy."

750,000 French Workers Defer Wage Strike

Paris, France.—The 750,000 organized employes of the French government, resenting the action of parliament under Premier Edouard Daladier in adjourning until November without considering their request for a 10 per cent wage increase to meet the mounting cost of living attributed to the devaluation of the franc and for the 40-hour week already applied in private industry, threatened to strike in three months if their pleas are not granted. The French cabinet, under emergency powers conferred by parliament, can grant the union demands by a so-called "decree law," which becomes effective by order of the cabinet without action by the French parliament.

World Coal Meeting Recommends 1939 Labor Conference Act On Reduction in Hours

Geneva.—The World Coal conference convoked here by the International Labor organization adopted a resolution suggesting that the question of hours of works in coal mines be placed, as a separate item, on the agenda of the 1939 session of the International Labor conference, with a view to final discussion at that session.

The conference was attended by delegates from nearly every important coal-producing country in the world, including the United States.

Although purely of an advisory character, one of its objects was to provide suggestions for the International Labor conference, which, at its next session opening in Geneva June 2, will consider the advisability of adopting international regulations for the reduction of work in all economic activities other than agriculture and shipping.

Views to Be Asked.

If the International Labor conference decides to follow the suggestion contained in the coal conference resolution, the usual conference procedure of submitting a question for preliminary discussion one year and final discussion the next, will be dispensed with in the case of "hours of work in coal mines."

Instead, on a basis of information brought out in the coal conference discussion, all interested governments will be asked for their views as to the type and scope of international regulations deemed best adapted to the needs of the coal mining industry.

No definite decision as to limitation of hours to be provided in the proposed international regulations was taken by the coal conference. However, the workers' representatives at the conferenc agreed unanimously to support a 7¾-hour day and 38¾-hour week.

U. S. Miners to Press Demands.

A. D. Lewis, United States Workers' representative at the coal conference, emphasized the fact that while coal miners in the United States favored a worldwide reduction of working hours in the industry, they would continue to press their own demands for a 6-hour day and a 5-day week.

However, Duncan C. Kennedy, executive secretary of the Kanawhat Coal Operators' Association of Charleston, W. Va., and United States' employers' representative at the conference, made it plain that operators in the United States would oppose any further shortening of hours in that country.

Q.—From what country did America get its game of golf?

A.—Scotland deserves credit for developing the game, though it is believed that a game similar to modern golf originated with the Dutch. The game was introduced into America in 1888.

NOTICE

To Savings Depositors

Beginning July 1, 1938, interest on savings accounts will be calculated and paid at the rate of

1½% Per Annum

This rate is necessitated because of the general decrease of returns obtainable from investments and is in line with the action of conservative bankers in other cities. The average yield on government securities, for instance, is less than 2 per cent. and a considerable portion of a bank's funds must for the time be thus invested because of the present inactive demand for money for business purposes.

It is hoped that the present conditions will not continue and that this change in the rate paid may be only temporary.

Albany, N. Y.—Elmer F. Andrews, state industrial commissioner, issued an order making a minimum wage of $16.50 for a 40-hour week effective for all employes of beauty shops in New York state, beginning Aug. 1. The order was issued on the recommendation of the beauty shop board after hearings held throughout the state. About 16,000 women employed in 8,000 beauty and barber shops are affected by the ruling.

The order provides for overtime at the rate of time and a half for each hour between 45 and 48 and double time for all above that. Part-time workers must be paid not less than $4 a day.

Awards Under Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act Total $461,278,827

Contractors Are Required to Apply Eight-Hour Day, Five-Day Week, Pay Prevailing Wages, Provide Sanitary Plants, and Obey Child Labor Limitations.

Washington. — Government supply contracts valued at $9,372,763 were awarded during the week ending June 16 by fifteen federal agencies under the provisions of the Walsh-Healey public contracts act, the department of labor announced.

According to the act, contractors for government supplies must not work their employes more than eight hours in any day or more than forty hours in any week, and must pay their employes not less than the prevailing wage rates determined by the secretary of labor. Sanitary buildings and decent surroundings must be provided. The labor of boys under 16 and girls under 18 is prohibited, with certain modifications applied to the textile industry.

The public contracts act was passed by congress in 1936, with the active support of the American Federation of Labor. Since it became effective on Sept. 28, 1936, contracts valued at $461,278,827 have been awarded to firms throughout the United States and its territories which have agreed to comply with its stipulations.

Railroad Unions Propose Government Ownership If Pay Cut Brings Strike

Washington. — The twenty-one standard railroad labor organizations have drawn a resolution, authorizing the president to take over and run the railroads if the proposed wage cut of 15 per cent causes a strike. They have given this resolution to Senator Wagner, of New York, in the senate and Representative Crosser, of Ohio, in the house, but it has not yet been introduced.

One member of congress to whom the resolution was shown pronounced it "dynamite." To which the railroad unions answered that dynamite, properly used, is a very useful substance.

It may be taken as settled that the railroad unions will strike, rather than accept such a cut. Even the mildest of them agree on that. Several weeks of negotiations, however, carefully provided by law, must be tried before a strike can come.

Meantime, railroad labor opposition is quite likely to kill the bill authorizing the RFC to loan money to railroads.

Social Security Advisory Council Asks Study Looking to Extension Of Old Age Insurance Coverage

Washington. — The Advisory Council on Social Security, representing labor, employers and the public, has asked the Social Security Board to submit information by September 15 on possible methods of extending the coverage of the old age insurance program to include farm labor, domestic employes and self-employed workers.

The request of the board opens the question of extending the coverage of the old age insurance program, as advocated by organized labor.

The council has also notified the board that it had decided unanimously to recommend the inclusion of employes of nonprofit religious, charitable and educational institutions under the old age insurance program. "There is no justification in social policy for the exclusion of such organizations from the protection afforded by the old age insurance system," the council said.

The recommendations of the council were made in a letter from J. Douglas Brown, chairman, to Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board.

Labor members of the council, which was set up last year to cooperate with the Social Security Board in studying revisions of the Security Act, are as follows:

G. H. Bugniazet, secretary, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers of America.

A.—On questions relating to this matter, get in touch with your county agent or your county agricultural conservation committee.

Q.—What is used in making paper?

A.—Paper can be manufactured from any fibrous material. Small quantities are made from rags, grass, straw and other fibrous matter, but the principal raw material is pulpwood.

for Women only

CARDUI is a special medicine for the relief of some of the suffering which results from a woman's weakened condition. It has been found to make monthly periods less disagreeable, and, when its use has been kept up awhile, has helped many poorly nourished women to get more strength from their food. This medicine (pronounced "Card-u-i") has been used and recommended by women for many, many years. Find out whether it will help you by giving it a fair trial. Of course, if not benefited, consult a physician.

Two Papers Suspended In Pittsburgh Strike

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Pittsburgh Press and the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph suspended publication when union employes of the mechanical departments refused to pass the picket lines of the striking employes, members of the Newspaper and News Distributors Office Workers' Union No. 21341, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor.

The negotiations between the publishers and officials of the unions ended in a deadlock on the question of a closed shop, which the publishers refused to grant. Following the refusal of the publishers to meet this demand, members of the business office employes' union picketed the entrances to the two plants, and the members of the A. F. of L. unions in the mechanical departments declined to go through the picket lines.

Approximately 2,000 employes were notified that they were "no longer required" and that their pay had ceased for the duration of the strike.

Why make a fuss about foreign spies, when every anti-labor society in America and every corporation fighting the Wagner act is a center of fascism?

terests of all the working men and women of the country, especially the unorganized and downtrodden workers.

Opposed by C. I. O. Dictators.

In fighting for sound legislation which would safeguard the interests of labor, the American Federation of Labor for the past year has waged a single-handed battle. It received no assistance from the dictators of the C. I. O. In fact, the C. I. O. dictators gave a public demonstration of all-around stupidity, feebleness and outright treachery to labor that was nothing short of disgraceful.

Typical of the C. I. O. tactics was the brazen invasion of Speaker Bankhead's office in the Capitol by Dictator Lewis and a group of his satellites to exert pressure for passage of the amendments to the Walsh-Healey act. All chances of adoption of these amendments, which were favored by the American Federation of Labor, were ruined by Lewis and his flunkies. They attempted to dictate to congress in the same way they dictate to the C. I. O. unions. Many members of congress who had told us they would vote for the amendments became so indignant at Lewis that they reversed their position. They sat down on Lewis so hard as to make him a completely ludicrous figure.

Now, despite their obvious failure to influence congress or public opinion in the slightest degree, and in furtherance of their characteristic methods of malicious misrepresentation, the C. I. O. probably will seek to claim credit for passage of the wage-hour bill. No one can or will pay serious attention to their claims in the light of the facts. And the facts are these:

Black-Connery Bill Defects.

In the last regular session of congress, the administration sponsored a measure, known as the Black-Connery bill, proposing to

Glass Bottle Blowers Convention Is Called

President Maloney Says 300 Delegates Will Attend Meeting Which Opens in Atlantic City July 11—Gov. Moore and President Green Included Among Speakers.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The call for the 54th convention of the Glass Bottle Blowers' Association of the United States and Canada was issued here by James Maloney, president of the association.

The convention will be held at the Chelsea hotel, Atlantic City, N. J., beginning July 11, 1938, and will continue in session utnil the business of the convention is finished.

In the call, President Maloney said:

"Three hundred delegates will be in attendance and the officers and members are looking forward to an interesting and constructive session.

"The Glass Bottle Blowers' association is one of the oldest trade union organizations in America, and the 1938 convention will be the largest and perhaps the most important and significant tribunal this union has ever held. The collective action of the delegates in formulating policies will no doubt contribute to the future welfare of the membership.

"Several notable speakers, including Gov. Harry Moore and President Green, have been invited to address the convention."

LABEL LEADERS

By BROWNIE HOPPER

The boss is away
But, strange to say,
I don't know any scandal
To print today . . .
Tut, tut!!

* * *

And he couldn't use that blue-pencil, either. It's a shame!

* * *

Did you know . . . that LIFE magazine is a NON-union publication? The printers have on a campaign to let the public know that fact, so don't buy it. If you like the picture-type of publication, why don't you get PIC? It has a union label on it—just look on next to the last page and you can see that little "bug."

* * *

And, another thing . . . there's a certain international representative that I know about who only smokes union-made cigarettes when he is around union people. That puts him in the class with people who are good only on Sundays. Of all people who should support every organized group in the labor movement, a representative of a union should be a leader in supporting the label. That argument that "I just can't smoke any of those brands" doesn't hold water. Yessir, I am good and mad about it.

* * *

Latest news . . . I've just found out that there is a member of a local union who can tell fortunes. Can hardly wait to have my future read.

* * *

More news . . . There's a philatelist in our midst. Paul Reynolds is an ardent stamp collector and was telling me about a stamp that is worth $50,000, or maybe it was $250,000. No, Paul doesn't have that one in his collection.

* * *

One of the officers of one of our local unions was in a meeting here in the office the other day and, as he talked, he occupied himself by cutting paper dolls and then insister on pasting them on the wall. Well, brother, somebody says that if you work in the labor movement long enough you finally get that way . . . before long now you'll be claiming that you're Napoleon and we'll have to send you to Nashville to an already crowded institution.

Yanh, Yanh . . . I won my bet on the fight in just about a minute and a half.

Ladies' Garment Workers' Union Names Labor Peace Committee

Minneapolis.—The executive board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union has voted to continue, for the present at least, in the CIO, though it has not withdrawn from the A. F. of L. from which it stands "suspended."

It appointed a committee of five to "use every opportunity" to reopen negotiations between the two warring labor groups. It issued a statement expressing "deep regret over the failure on the part of the labor movement to compose its differences."

"The policies, traditions and the decisions of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union have always been against a divided labor movement and against dual unionism," the directors said.

"Today, more than ever before, we believe that labor unity is urgent to the trade union movement as well as in the interests of the general welfare of our country."

SOUTHERN LABOR "SPOTS"

Gadsden, Ala.—Charter for a newly organized local union for dry cleaners was installed here a few days ago by Organizer Ed Long, of the Birmingham office of the A. F. of L. The union has experienced very gratifying growth. M. C. Mauney, vice-president of the State Federation of Labor in the Gadsden district, assisted Organizer Long, and reports that the new local has signed up several members at each meeting since the local was formed.

Birmingham, Ala.—An agreement signed recently between Cement Workers' Local Union No. 19714 and the Lone Star Cement corporation, in which the local union is recognized as the sole bargaining agency for all of the employes of the big company, has added much to the organization campaign of the A. F. of L. in this section. In the agreement are many unusually good provisions for the workers, such as the 40-hour week, price and a half for overtime, seniority rights, and other beneficial provisions.

The Lone Star Cement company is one of the strong concerns here, and union labor officials have expressed gratification over the splendid manner in which the company deals with its A. F. of L. union employes. Hugh W. Brown, outstanding labor leader and vice-president of the federation, is largely responsible for the splendid agreement. He assisted members of the local union in negotiating the agreement as did S. E. Roper, in charge of the A. F. of L. activities in Alabama.

Augusta, Ga.—This city is rapidly gaining the name of being the American Federation of Labor's citadel in Georgia, if not the entire south. With all building trades having strong organizations, the street car men 100 per cent union, the printing trades functioning perfectly, the railroad shop crafts active, the metal trades and powerful locals of the American Federation of Teachers taking a promnent par. in the general movement, plus the added strength of the strong American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes' unions, the movement in Augusta rangs high.

The labor movement in Augusta enjoys the confidence and respect of the public. Leaders and members of the various A. F. of L. crafts are among Augusta's most highly respected citizens. At the semi-annual election of officers last Wednesday night, W. O. Owens, of the Molders' union, was elected president, succeeding F. J. Pritchard, who has led the movement for the past three years, but who is now connected with the state administration. Other officers elected were: R. C. Ramsey, vice-president; C. M. Etheridge, recording secretary; John A. Smith, financial secretary; T. B. Atkins, T. J. Fender and A. L. Mason, trustees; J. W. Ogletree, organizer and W. A. Burch, sergeant-at-arms. The auditing committee was named to consist of C. J. Gleason, Clint McDaniel and W. A. Rowe.

Columbia, S. C.—"Tell them to come on and be here early Thursday evening, certainly not later than Friday morning, if they want to attend the best convention ever held by a state federation of labor in the south," said Fred Hatchell, secretary of the South Carolina Federation of Labor, in his message Saturday to this newsletter. Secretary Hatchell says everything is in readiness for the opening of the convention Friday morning, June 24. Some really "big timber" is on the program for addresses at the convention. Report of the legislative committee, in which is contained accounts of the fine legislation obtained for the workers in South Carolina, is expected to be the most important part of the program.

Wilmington, N. C.—Early this year one J. R. Newell came into Tarheelia and started publication of "The North Carolina Labor Journal." The gentleman had no authority nor indorsement from any branch of the A. F. of L., national, state or local. He solicited advertisements in the name of the State Federation of Labor and in the name of the City Central Labor union in whatever city he was working.

President C. A. Fink, of the North Carolina Federation of Labor, tried to stop the man. Commissioner of Labor A. L. Fletcher tried to stop him. He wouldn't be stopped. Several weeks ago President Fink was notified that Newell was in Wilmington, soliciting ads, telling the merchants, it is in evidence, that proceeds from the advertisements were to be applied on the expense of holding the state convention here in August.

President Fink came to Wilmington, and he and C. B. Kornegay, president of the Wilmington Central Labor union, signed a warrant for Newell's arrest. Newell was tried last week in superior court, found guilty, and Judge N. A. Sinclair gave the young man two years in prison, sentence to be suspended upon refund by Newell of all money he collected from merchants for advertising and upon payment of all costs in the case.

Thus hi-jacking business men in North Carolina in the name of the State Federation of Labor and the A. F. of L. is believed to be finished.

Shreveport, La.—E. H. Williams, president of the Louisiana State Federation of Labor, announces that the strike of the taxi drivers has been satisfactorily settled, agreement having been reached June 18.

Baton Rouge, La.—The chemical workers of Federal Labor Union No. 20272 returned to work after a five-week strike, the workers having gained full seniority and other benefits which had heretofore been denied. Also one member was returned to work who was laid off several weeks prior to the strike. Mr. Holt Ross, of the Common Labor and Hodcarriers' International, and Organizers C. M. Fox and E. H. Williams, of the American Federation of Labor, assisted in bringing about this settlement.

LaFayette, La.—Much interest is being manifested among the building trades and mechanics and the desire to organize is so strong that a mass meeting is being called on June 21 at Parish courthouse. On this date these men will be given an opportunity to come into their respective organizations.

Should

RAILROAD WAGES

Be Reduced?

Railroad management should pay wages fully compensatory for the value and character of services performed. But management owes a duty also to those whose savings make railroad employment possible, and to the Public. Management, also, is limited in what it pays by the money it has available.

Employes are entitled to "bargaining," collective or individual, as they themselves may prefer, without coercion from any source. They are entitled to fair wages and good working conditions. But the amount of wages must depend on the productivity of each man's work and the funds available therefor as well as other necessary expenses.

On August 1, 1937, basic wage scales on the NC&StL were the highest in railroad history. On that date, and again in October, after negotiations held under the partial influence of a strike vote, railroad wages were increased still further—a tragic error in the opinion of the management of the NC&StL.

Between August 1, 1937 and May 1, 1938 the total income of the NC&StL from all sources was $10,171,961.00. Of this employes received $5,821,126.00; taxes took $704,848.00, and about half of these taxes were for the direct benefit of railroad employes; essential materials, such as fuel, lumber, metals, etc., cost $2,064,952.00; bond and equipment trust holders received (making due allowance for interest earned but not payable in that period) $518,865.00; owners of leased lines received $598,620.00, and the people of the State of Georgia, who are the owners of the Western & Atlantic Railroad, got most of this; other essential expenses took $1,155,183.00. Stockholders received nothing—and have been paid nothing since August, 1931. Result—in these nine months the NC&StL's total income was $10,171,961.00, total expenses $10,863,594.00 (without any dividends), loss $691,633.00.

Security owners (including the owners of leased lines) have invested in the total railroad plant which the NC&StL operates the sum of about $23,000.00 per employe. They have some rights. Yet capital (and capital is just the accumulated savings of men and women), which makes the jobs of NC&StL employes possible, has received in interest on bonds and equipment trust notes and rental for leased lines (August 1, 1937—May 1, 1938), making due allowance for interest earned but not payable, less than one dollar for every five dollars paid to employes. Money received and spent by investors helps general prosperity just as much as money received and spent by employes. Many investors need money as much as employes do.

Only five officers on the NC&StL make as much as ten thousand dollars per year. Only ten officers on the NC&StL earn as much per hour actually worked as many NC&StL locomotive engineers.

Since January 1, 1931 through April 30, 1938, the NC&StL has lost $2,693,965.00, but during that time NC&StL employes have received $59,479,355.00 in wages. Capital invested in the NC&StL, taken as a whole, has taken terrific losses during those tragic years, while NC&StL employes, as a whole, have fairly prospered.

Traffic so far this year is 19.1% under the same period of 1937 and 18.1% under the same period of 1931. Subsidized competitors are taking a heavy toll of all business available for transportation.

The NC&StL cannot continue to be well maintained and give the Public good service with the present level of wages—giving no consideration to stockholders, who financed approximately 74.7% of the investment in the properties owned by the NC&StL.

The NC&StL would like to continue paying its full normal forces at present wage levels, but it neither has, nor takes in, enough money to do so. Under these circumstances the management of the NC&StL submits to its employes and the Public that a reasonable reduction in wage scales is not only fair, but, in the end, best for all. A bankrupt railroad is a disaster to investors, employes, and the Public alike.

Employes have neither the legal nor the moral right to share in prosperity without likewise sharing in adversity. Strikes to perpetuate the wage scales of prosperous times during periods of severe economic adversity cannot, the management of the NC&StL submits, be consistent with the public interest.

Are those who suggest that the present all time high of railroad wages be continued in the present desperate depression willing to pay their employes on the same scale? How many are actually doing so? How many of those who so suggest give anybody jobs at any pay?

Should not railroad wages, in all fairness and common sense, be reasonably reduced? What does the great Public which in the end, jointly with investors, must foot the bills, think about this?

MORE ABOUT WAGES AND HOURS ACT

On assurance from the administration that ample opportunity would be afforded to perfect the bill in the house of representatives, the American Federation of Labor agreed to facilitate its passage by the senate. The senate passed it.

However, consideration by the house was blocked when the house rules committee refused to permit the bill to come out on the floor. The American Federation of Labor condemned the suppressive action of the house rules committee.

A government of congress provided an interval during which the American Federation of Labor subjected the bill to close and careful scrutiny. This investigation showed the bill, as drafted, was thoroughly bad and dangerous.

A. F of L. Model Bill.

Therefore, when the special session of congress was convened last fall, the American Federation of Labor announced its findings, declared its unalterable opposition to the pending bill and submitted a new, model bill of its own. These fundamental points were emphasized:

1. That a sound wage and hour bill must establish a universal rock-bottom floor below which wages could not descend.

2. That it must establish a universal ceiling above which hours of work could not rise.

3. That it must be simple in administration.

The Black-Connery bill failed to meet any of these fundamental specifications. It established a wage of not more than 40 cents an hour, but provided for the creation of a new federal board with sweeping power to fix wages at any point less than 40 cents an hour in any industry or locality.

The bill established a work week of not less than 40 hours a week, but authorized the board to raise hours to any point above forty hours a week. Thus the board, if it so desired, could establish a rate of one cent an hour and a 70-hour week. Of course, the spirit of the legislation was not so aimed. But we had learned, through our bitter experiences with the national labor relations board, that once a federal board is given wide discretionary authority it proceeds to make its own laws.

C. I. O. Lined Up Against A. F. of L. Bill.

Every bit of logic and reasoning supported the federation's opposition to the bill on the obvious ground that it actually was not at all a minimum wage and maximum hour bill. Every sound-thinking person could not help but agree that the primary objective of a minimum wage bill would be defeated by geographical differentials. But the C. I. O. leaders, ignoring the economic industrial and social interests of the workers, continued to support the Black-Connery bill and threaten its opponents with hysterical diatribes.

Their attitude seemed to be "we want any kind of wage and hour bill, regardless of consequences." But the C. I. O. dictators were not even consistent in this position. Because when the American Federation of Labor submitted its model bill, the C. I. O. frenziedly opposed it.

The American Federation of Labor's bill provided in essence:

1. A flat minimum wage of 40 cents an hour without differentials.

2. A flat minimum work week of 40 hours for the entire country.

3. Infractions to be prosecuted by the department of justice and punished by the federal courts with heavy fines.

Because of the complicated legislative situation in the house the federation bill did not receive a hearing. When the house version of the Black-Connery bill was called up, the American Federation of Labor threw its weight against it and it was recommitted. This meant the bill was killed for the special session. An attempt was made to substitute the federation bill for the committee bill, but this failed. The special session adjourned without further action.

Satisfactory Bill Followed White House Conference.

When the present session of congress convened, the administration realized no wage and hour bill opposed by the American Federation of Labor could be passed. Therefore, President Roosevelt called a White House conference to which I was invited as president of the American Federation of Labor, together with President John P. Frey, of the Metal Trades Department; President Joseph A. McInerney, of the Building Construction Trades Department, and President B. M. Jewell, of the Railroad Employes' Department.

At this conference, the administration agreed to support the fundamental principles fought for consistently by the American Federation of Labor. As a result the house labor committee, despite C. I. O. opposition, drafted a new wage-hour bill fairly satisfactory to the American Federation of Labor.

Again the house rules committee tried to block this bill. But the American Federation of Labor urged its friends in the house to sign a petition to take the bill away from the rules committee and bring it to the floor for a vote. Breaking all records, the petition received the necessary number of signatures in two hours and thereafter the bill was adopted in the house by an overwhelming vote.

Compromise Bill Reflects AFL Fundamental Requirements.

The senate and house bills then were taken up in conference by committees from both houses. A group of senators, seeking to perpetuate workers in their home communities, threatened a filibuster unless concessions were made. And because many members of congress were anxious to adjourn and get home for political reasons, the present compromise measure was drawn up.

The compromise bill meets the fundamental requirements laid down by the American Federation of Labor in these major respects:

1. It establishes a rock-bottom and universal minimum wage of 25 cents an hour for the first year, to be raised to 30 cents in the second year. Below these figures, the law will not permit wages to drop in industries engaged in interstate commerce.

2. It establishes a universal ceiling for hours, by providing a top 44-hour week for the first year, a 42-hour week the second year and a 40-hour week thereafter.

Some Provisions Are Faulty.

The bill fails to meet the standards of the American Federation of Labor in certain other respects.

The method of administration, while an improvement over the original bill, is cumbersome and undesirable.

In permitting differentials by industries and by classifications within industries on wages between 30 and 40 cents an hour, the bill also treads on dangerous grounds.

The provision requiring certification by the national labor relations board with regard to exemptions from maximum hour provisions where contracts with organized labor exist, appears to be an unwise delegation of new powers to that board.

However, the bill contains such vital concessions to the principles for which the American Federation of Labor stood and which the C. I. O. opposed that we should not condemn it in entirety for its undeniable faults.

Must Be Perfected.

Furthermore, the American Federation of Labor is not and never will be satisfied until the bill is perfected.

The good features of the present bill, when it becomes law, will become effective almost immediately. Operation of the bad features, by the very nature of the law, will be deferred for some time. Before that time arrives, the American Federation of Labor hopes to have the faulty provisions righted.

The mere threat of a filibuster in the closing days of a congress auxious to adjourn should not be permitted to block the democratic processes of our government or work a permanent defect into our law.

Idle Fishermen Demand Aid.

St. Johns, Newfoundland. — The local magistrate of Bonavista conferred with government officials recently on demands of 1,500 fishermen and unemployed there for immediate relief from the government. At a public demonstration, vigorous action was threatened unless the demand is met. The fishermen are without supplies and the unemployed fishery hands without food.

Pay Cut Is Imposed On Circus Employes

Rochester, N. Y.—John Ringling North, president of Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey circus, told his approximately 1,600 employes that they must accept a 25 per cent wage cut. Otherwise, he said, the circus would return to winter quarters. North claimed the pay slash was made necessary by economic conditions which had reduced attendance. "Without a wage reduction, the show cannot go on," he declared.

GOOD RELIEF of constipation by a GOOD LAXATIVE

Many folks get such refreshing relief by taking Black-Draught for constipation that they prefer it to other laxatives and urge their friends to try it. Black-Draught is made of the leaves and roots of plants. It does not disturb digestion but stimulates the lower bowel so that constipation is relieved.

STEP TAKEN TO ENDORSE L. D. MILLER

Resolutions Asking Support of Miller Accepted for Regular Action.

Two resolutions from local unions were presented to Central Body last night asking that Judge L. D. Miller be given labor's support in his race for congress.

According to the laws of Central Body, the resolution was accepted and referred to the proper channels for indorsement. Final action will be taken at a later meeting of the Central Labor union.

It was brought out in the discussion of the resolutions that Judge Miller had a perfect labor record while serving in the state legislature.

Atlantic Beer Signs Contract

Agreements Signed in Every Brewery That Takes in All Employes.

Erskine Fischer, secretary of Local 79, Brewery Workers, announced this week that the Atlantic Brewery had just signed a new agreement here that makes the entire brewery 100 per cent union. The pact includes not only the brewers and bottlers, but takes in all engineers and everyone connected with the plant in any way.

Mr. Fischer stated that similar agreements were in effect in every one of the Atlantic units in the country.

An increase in pay was secured and a reduction in hours makes the agreement a distinct advance for workers in this industry.

MILNE CHAIR CO. MUST GIVE BACK PAY TO 47 MEN

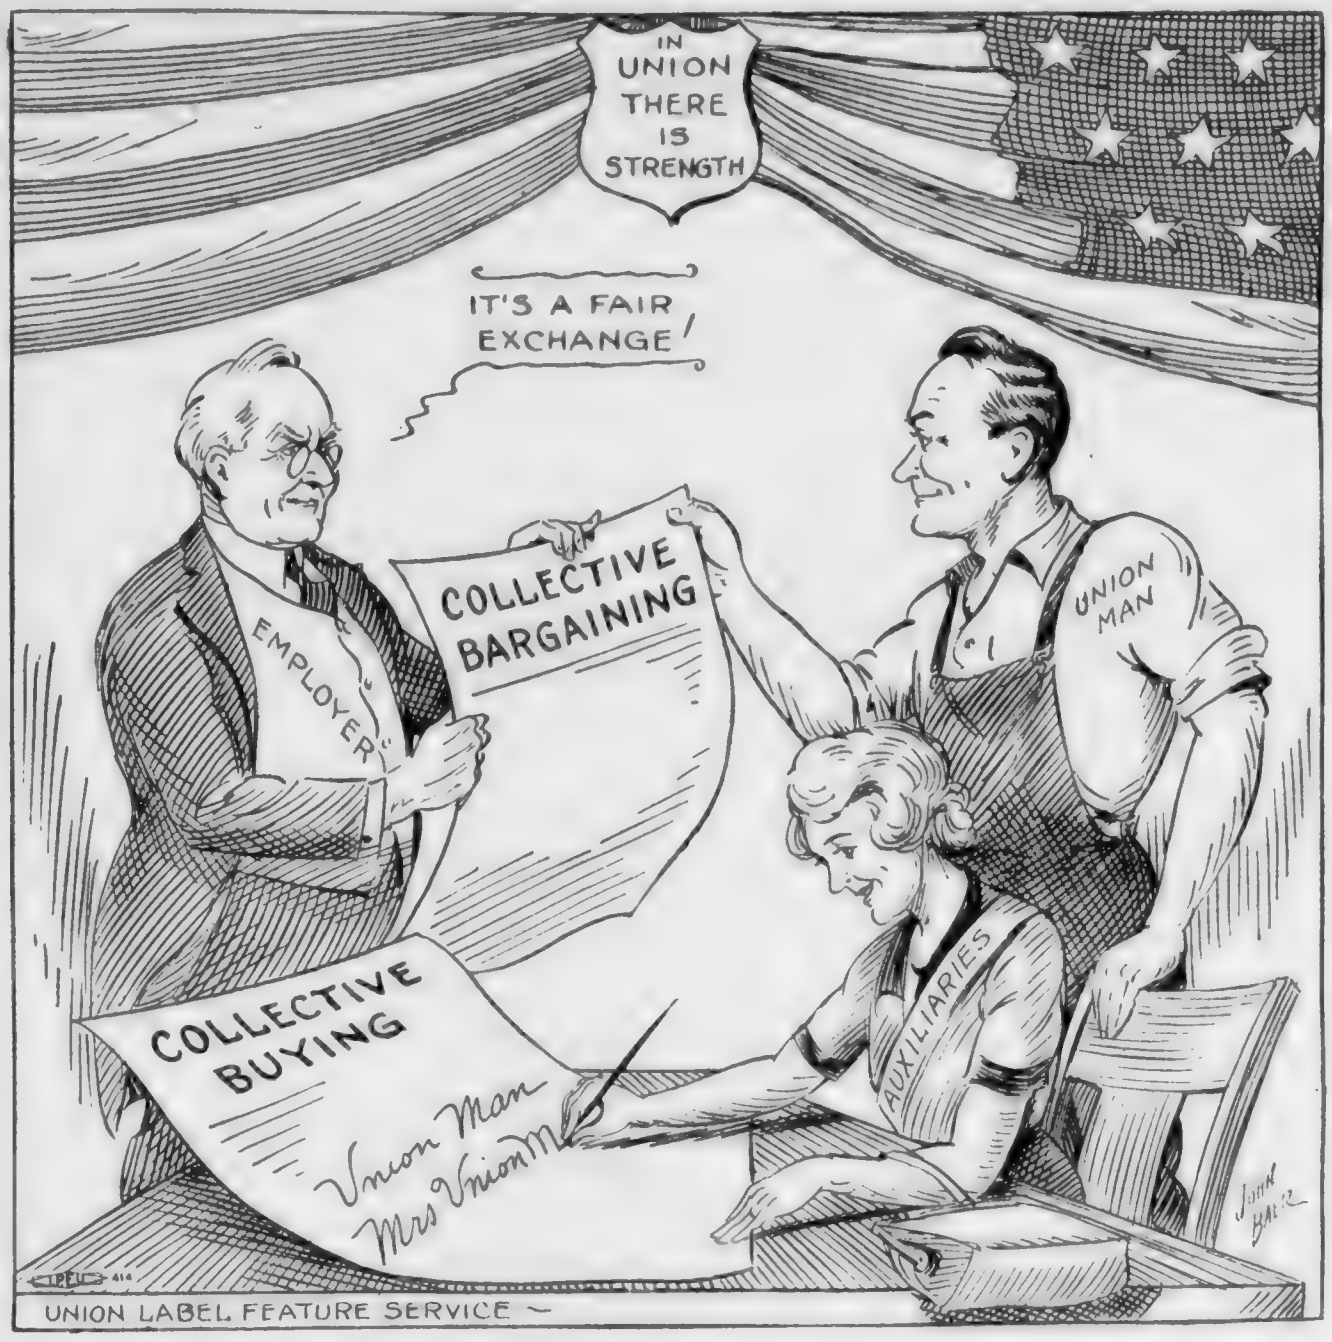
For Two Years Time— All Company Unions Dissolved.

A last minute news flash to The Labor World says that the National Labor Relations Board has ruled that the Milne Chair company is guilty of fostering dummy unionism, and that forty-seven members of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners must be put back to work with former seniority standing, and they must be given pay for the two years they were out of their jobs because of being fired by the company.

The order also said that the Athletic club, the L. D. U. and the Industrial Council in the Milne plant are company unions, and they must be dissolved at once.

Any written agreements existing with these three dummies are of no value and must be considered as non-existent.

The Milne Chair company decision is the result of charges filed by Local 1882, Carpenters.



HOUSING TRIO RETURNS FROM WASHINGTON

Six Millions Asked to Pep Business and Relieve Poor Housing.

With their plans for a $6,000,000 housing project in Chattanooga laid before the United States Housing Authority, a committee from the Chattanooga Housing Authority returned from Washington Saturday morning.

The Chattanooga committee was given an "attentive hearing" and representatives of the USHA went thoroughly into the plans for the proposed white and colored building project here, P. H. Wood, chairman of the local committee, said Saturday.

"It will be a week or ten days before the USHA announces the earmarking of preliminary allocation of funds,'" Chairman Wood reported. Although it was felt that Chattanooga is certain to receive funds for the building project, there was no indication as to the amount that might be allocated.

"With the announcing of the earmarking of funds for Chattanooga, the United States Housing Authority will send a representative to Chattanooga to scrutinize every angle of the property and construction plans," Chairman Wood stated. "They will give particular close attention to the location of the sites."

The Chattanooga authority committee asked that $6,000,000 be earmarked for the local project. They submitted to the USHA briefs in which was combined much of the information that had been included in this city's previous application to the PWA some two years ago.

The plan calls for a white and colored project on which construction will begin immediately, Wood stated. Two years later another white and colored project would be started in Chattanooga by the local authority.

TEACHER UNION BACKED BY CLU TURNED DOWN BY COMMISSION

Teachers Union's request not to pass the Ziegler salary schedule constructed by a group of principals was bluntly refused by the City Commission last Tuesday by a vote of 3 to 2, Commissioners Cooke and McMillan voting to uphold the union's request. Mayor Bass stated that he was pledged to the support of Ziegler's plan and made the motions to pass the ordinance on second and third readings. He was supported by Commissioners Bryan and Betterton. Curtis Sims, president of the CLU, spoke in support of the teachers request.

Stanton Smith, president of the Teachers' Union, pointed out today that the ordinance will not increase teachers' salaries but merely provides a basis for distribution of any money that might be available for salary increases. "In view of Mayor Bass' prediction of decreased revenue for next year the teachers will be lucky not to receive a cut instead of increases," Smith said.

The new ordinance would require more money than the 1935 teachers salary law if put into full operation and for this reason it appears that there is little chance of the schedule being fully effective for many years, it was pointed out.

Army and Navy Union Backing Senator Berry

Johnson City.—The Army and Navy union, U. S. A., organized in 1886, and today the oldest active veterans' organization in the United States, in a statement issued by John J. Crim, national legislative chairman, indorsed the candidacy of Senator George L. Berry for return to the senate.

"In these troublesome days that we are now experiencing we need such men as Major Berry in our United States senate. His past record of service to his fellowman is ample proof of his ability and integrity, and if we had more men in the United States senate like George Berry, we would have no fear of the future of this country," said Crim.

"We, as veterans of the armed forces of our country, know of the unselfish services of Senator Berry not only during the period of the World war, but ever since those days of 1918 he has been an active and ardent worker for our disabled comrades," stated Crim.

Senator Berry's stand on the principles of Americanism is one that should win the commendation of all true Americans who believe in our present day democracy, and I feel certain that not only the veterans of Tennessee but every true citizen of this great state of ours will rally to the support of Senator Berry and send him back to the United States senate with the greatest plurality ever given a distinguished son of Tennessee," continued Crim.

"We, as members of the Army and Navy Union, whose rolls have carried such illustrious names as Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Admiral Dewey, Gen. Funston, and every president of the United States since McKinley, are proud to have such a man as Senator Berry in our organization," added Crim.

Taxicabs Must Insure Safety To the Public

Central Body Succeeds in Fight for Welfare of Citizens.

Central Labor union succeeded last Tuesday afternoon in its campaign to force every taxicab in Chattanooga to carry insurance for its patrons.

Although a city ordinance had been passed many months ago which would force taxis to carry insurance, the law had not been enforced. A demand was made by Central Body that the law should be carried out so that public conveyances would guarantee reparation for damages caused by accidents.

At the city commission Tuesday the city dads unanimously passed a motion that within thirty days the ordinance would be strictly enforced.

This gives the various cabs thirty days' time to either secure insurance or post bonds to the amount of $5,000 per cab.

Ry. Trainmen Not Connected Labor League

Lodge 215, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, this week asked The Labor World to state that they were not affiliated with Labor's Non-Partisan league in any way. The league was organized on a national basis several years ago for the purpose of re-electing Franklin D. Roosevelt. After the presidential election the American Federation of Labor turned thumbs down on the league because of a predominance of "radical" elements in it, according to AF Lleaders, and since that time the league has been in disfavor.

Settlement Workers Warn Of Politics in Relief

Pittsburgh.—A plea to "keep politics out of relief and work programs" while barring curtailment of federal relief measures as partially responsible for the current depression, was made at the closing session of the National Federation of Settlements.

A statement issued as the federation closed its 26th annual convention also urged expansion of the social security program to "overcome its defects and shortcomings."

While praising the "substantial contributions of the WPA," the federation warned:

"We urge, especially in a campaign year, that there shall be renewed vigilance to keep politics out of relief and work programs, without restricting citizens' rights."

Dear Mistur Editur:

Seems like to me that there ain't much real news in the papers about all this here 'lectioneering for different good payin' jobs like governur, senitur, Congresman, Sherif, and the like, so I'm goin' to sort of try and pep things up a little so that we will have one of those good old time campains when us folks from up here in the mountins used to fork oursefs over the mule and go down to the lowlands and visit with our cousins and listen to some real preachin' with a barbycue thrown in to keep the folks nice and quiet while some candydate for sumethin' used big words none of us mountin folks understood but liked to listen to cause us folks up here in the mountins like to hear a man with book larnin' even iffen we don't get much of it.

Now speakin' of book larnin', one time after listenin' to Cordell Hull, who is now up to Washington a-helpin' Mr. Rusefelt and all them ambassadys what to do, I up and decided I'd get me one of them there dicshunarys that tell you what the different words mean and how to spell them right so I bought me a big paper back one that was writ by a powerful smart man by the name of Webster. I like to come from around Knoxville way. Well, now sir I brot that paper back dicshunary back home with me and I made up my mind that I would get some of this book larnin' so I'd know what these here city fokes mean when I listened to their speechin'.

Some about four or five days after I cum home and had rested up from my trip down to the lowlands I desided to start gettin' my book larnin' and swear and behold when I went to get my paper back dicshunary I cudn't find hair nor hide of it. I luked every place I knowed of and asked everyone in the cabin if they'd seed it but nary a one knowed where it was. Well, as you know every day I'd keep alookin' and all threw the winter I kep alookin' but I culdn't find my dicshunary. Then one day I went to see Pappy, who lives all to hisself in a cabin up the mountin apiece, and whilst I was there I went out to Pappy's whatsis and yer know what I found there—yessir yer right, my dicshunary and Pappy had used all threw it. Sometimes in the "mmms" and sometimes "bbbbbs" and then sometimes he would skip over to the "yyyys" and "zzzzs." He just ruined my dicshunary, but seein' as how Pappy don't read nor write I culdn't say nothin' to him, but I did ask him how he got it and he said, Oh! that's just one of them there mail-order catylogs that cums every fall and I picked it up at your cabin seein' as how you had two of them. Course I culdn't say nothin' to him then, so Mister Editur if some of my wordin' ain't speld right you'll understand why.

Its' agettin' dark up here so seein' as how our ile is low I'll write you again next week about this politickin'.

Yours
"Politikal Sear"

P. S. The reason I signs myself the "Politikal Sear" is because I was alookin' in my dicshunary on one of the pages that Pappy hadn't used and I seed the word "nom de plume" and what it ment so I'm atakin' the "nom de plume" of "Politikal Sear."

Comment On World Events

The Hoang-Ho river has driven back the Japanese invaders. The flood has chased them from a large area conquered at a high cost. It has required them to shift their chief campaign from the territory and direction which it has maintained for months. And it cannot be understood easily without some slight sketch of the stream which has done these things.

The Hoang-Ho is probably the world's most erratic great river. It flows for literally hundreds of miles at a higher level than that of the country around it. There is a considerable distance at which the water at low level is more than 14 feet above the region through which it flows, and 30 feet above at high season. The lower Mississippi is a safe, comfortable stream compared to the Hoang-Ho.

It has changed its outlet eleven times in the last 1,000 years; and one change is astounding. Imagine the St. Lawrence flowing down the Mohawk and the Hudson into New York bay for a few hundred years, and then turning and flowing where it goes now. That is what the Hoang-Ho did in 1852; flowed on the north side of a big territory of hilly country instead of on the south, a shift of more than 250 miles.

"China's Sorrow," the stream is called. But if it will only be Japan's sorrow, the Chinese will burn joss sticks to it.

Trade unionism as a world power is described in the eighth Year Book of the International Federation of Trade Unions, just published. The year book gives a continuous survey of the international trade union movement and complete information concerning its growth, finances, geographical distribution and comparative strengtn as between one country and another.

The current issue is particularly valuable as it contains for the first time complete statistical information of trade union growth over a long period. It shows that in 1904 an aggregate membership of less than 2½ millions were concentrated in the national centers of the countries affiliated to the I. F. T. U.

Membership grew fairly steadily in pre-war years to a total of about 7¾ millions in 1913. It reached a maximum of over 23 millions in 1919. Post-war trade depression affected the unions in practically all countries affiliated to the I. F. T. U., but membership remained fairly steady between 1924 and 1932; and in 1937 reached a total of practically 19½ millions.

This is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that since 1933 the German unions, which affiliated previously a membership of nearly 5 millions, ceased to belong to the I. F. T. U. Italy's unions disconnected in 1926. Austria has also been absent from the I. F. T. U. since 1934, representing a loss of about half a million members. Other smaller European countries such as Latvia, Lithuania, Danzig and the Saar are likewise now without representation in the international organization, in which about 25 countries are represented.

Long Respected Union Member Loses Wife

R. L. Malone, veteran member of Local 74, Carpenters and Joiners, and one of the oldest delegates to Central Body, suffered the loss of his wife last Saturday when she was stricken by a heart attack.

Mrs. Malone was stricken at her residence, 513 West Sixth street. She was a member of the First Baptist church and had been a resident of Chattanooga all her life.

"Whereas, Mrs. R. L. Malone, the beloved wife of our dear brother. 'Uncle Bob' Malone, was taken away suddenly last Saturday, June 25; and,

"Whereas, Mr. Malone has been a faithful member of Local 74, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, for a long number of years, and has represented his local in the Central Body; therefore, be it

"Resolved, by Chattanooga Central Labor union, that we express to Brother Malone our sincere sympathy in his bereavement; be it further

"Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be spread on the minutes and also published in The Labor World.

State's Labor To Probe Taxes

Creating a special tax study committee to inform its executive board of the effect upon labor's interests of special, punitive or discriminary tax proposals, and to work in co-operation with similar committees of other state federations "through a committee of the members of various state committees if deemed advisable," the Tennessee Federation of Labor in convention at Johnson City early in June equipped itself to cope with harmful tax plans of pressure-groups.

This action follows the general plan already officially adopted by state federations of Florida, Georgia, Alabama nd New Jersey. A resolution adopted by the Tennessee convention expressed concern that labor's entire program of benefits for workers may be endangered by a growing rebellion against necessarily higher taxes.

Higher governmental costs are breeding strong protests among powerful interests more concerned with escaping equitable distribution of the tax load, than with the welfare of wage-earners and buyers of consumer-goods, it pointed out.

The fascist-nazi doctrine of foreign policy is that Hitler and Mussolini have a perfect right to meddle in the affairs of any other country, and that it is a just cause of war if that other country thinks of retaliation.

CY KOLOGY, EDITOR

Railroad industry is in bad shape and will get worse, in all probability.

That is not news. Everybody knows it. Then why did congress adjourn without passing railroad legislation? There are many answers, but the real reason, if any existed, has not been divulged.

Railroad unions opposed legislation to give federal loans to railroads on easier terms, unless carriers agreed to drop demand for wage cuts. Labor's stand was one excuse given for failure of congress to act.

The attitude of labor does not seem large an insurmountable obstacle. Surely, there is enough statesmanship in the ranks of labor and management to have reached some agreement which would have at least permitted "stop-gap" legislation. Now only a special session of congress can bring action before January, when the next regular session meets.

* * *

Some congress leaders apparently want the railroads to "go through the wringer" with no effort to help them. Others apparently share the view of the congress leaders. This view would permit many of the railroads to go into bankruptcy, with all that would mean in deepening the present depression. Hardly intelligent, to put it mildly. Spends a good deal of money run by unemployed people. Certainly not in keeping with the idea of a planned society, which has been so closely associated with the present national administration.

* * *

Permitting a large part of the nation's railroads to sink into bankruptcy is not the co-operation between government and industry we have been hearing so much about. In some other fields, there are more encouraging signs of co-operation. New York Stock Exchange and Securities and Exchange commission (SEC) are doing more than merely talking co-operation. They are working to put into effect "clean-up" rules and policies to eliminate various stock exchange evils and obviate the necessity of drastic legislation.

Instead of the "crack-down" with its bitterness and time-killing controversy, there have been friendly conferences looking to agreement with a minimum of lost time and motion.

Similar tendencies are being shown in the relations of the SEC and the utilities.

Apparently some persons in government and industry are beginning to realize the truth of the words of Charles Steinmetz, great electrical engineer and champion of the workers.

There is one thing which no American will remember with pleasure from these times. That is the frequency with which local and state governments allow economic pressure, petty politics, prejudice or sheer stupidity to make them neglect the helpless who should be cared for.

Cleveland, Ohio, a city of about a million population, stopped all relief operations the other day. An advance loan of $400,000 was delayed; all city and state funds had run out; and at the state capital, the legislature was quarreling over methods.

The city director of finance was trying to borrow $1,000 help the sick and the babies, but the mayor said that would be "just a shot in the arm," for the city needed $1,000 an hour, anyway. And it has been very short of money for months.

Temporary? So is starvation. Nine days of it means death, which is generally considered permanent.

Urges Repeal Of Oleo Tax

Removal of all taxes on oleomargarine, butter-fat substitute, was urged in a resolution adopted by the Tennessee Federation of Labor in its annual convention early in June.

The resolution, copies of which go to the American Federation of Labor for consideration at its Houston convention, as well as the legislative committee of T. F. L., recalls that oleomargarine is a food product and is so recognized and conforms to all federal and state requirements of pure food and drug laws.

It further recites the fact that by reason of its economy, it is of general use especially among those of the lower income brackets, and holds there is no social or economic necessity for subjecting any food product to special and restrictive taxes.

The text reads:

Whereas, Oleomargarine is conceded by chemists and food experts to be a wholesome and nutritious food product; and,

Whereas, Oleomargarine conforms to all the requirements of the federal and state pure food laws and is sold purely on its own merit as an article of food; and,

Whereas, Oleomargarine is used primarily by labor, its families and low income consumers because of its price economy and adaptability as a table cooking fat in the home; and,

Whereas, the oleomargarine industry used nearly three hundred million pounds of domestic farm products in the manufacture of oleomargarine during the past fiscal year; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Tennessee Federation of Labor in convention assembled, That it is opposed to the taxation of this wholesome, nutritious and pure food product by federal and state governments, because such taxation harms both the low income consumers and the domestic farm producers of oils and fats; and because there is no social or economic necessity or sound reason for subjecting any food products that conform to the federal and state pure food laws to additional special and restrictive taxes or license fees or other harmful imposition; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the resolutions committee of the American Federation of Labor for consideration by the American Federation of Labor at its 1938 national convention to be held at Houston, Tex., in October.

Relief Funds Sought to Stimulate Michigan Automobile Industry

Washington. — Gov. Frank Murphy announced here he will establish a 12-man co-ordination board to expedite allocation of federal funds for Michigan in an effort to bring "millions of dollars" to his state and revive industry.

Murphy predicted the Michigan automobile industry could be "appreciably revived" this summer and fall through use of public works administration and works progress administration funds.

"It is very possible we can obtain very many millions under such a program," he said.

It was indicated Frank N. Isbey, Detroit produce man, would head the co-ordinating board which will act as a liaison agency between state and federal governments.

TAXI DRIVERS AGAIN STRIKE

Democracy Versus Individualism

By DR. CHARLES STELZLE

Executive Director, Good Neighborhood League.

The crudest form of civilization is that of "anarchy:" each man for himself, with no regard for the interests of the community. We sometimes speak of a simple form of government, but the "simplest" form of government is that of the despot, whose word is law and who carries out his will regardless of the wishes of the people; and despotism may have its seat in an institution as well as in a man.

A republican form of government, that is, a government for the people and by the people, is the most complex in its nature, because not only must the interests of the individual be considered, but the interests of the entire community. It quite naturally follows that the larger the number of people concerned, the more difficult becomes the administration of law which shall be just and fair to all men.

Thus, according to law, an individual man may not do as he pleases even with his own property. For instance, he may not burn down his own house, because the burning of that property may set fire to the property of his next-door neighbor. No man may do with his own children as he pleases. In every enlightened state he must send them to school in order to acquire the education which our present-day civilization demands of its citizens. In many states a man may not do as he pleases with his own life—that is, he may not commit suicide, because, in a very important sense, his life belongs to the state.

Whenever an institution, a custom or a busiress enterprise becomes a menace to society, the law provides that it shall be discontinued, or so rigidly restricted that its chance for doing harm will be reduced to the minimum. Based upon this principle, the government has the right to demand that business and industry shall be so conducted that they will not jeopardize the interests of the whole people, and it may insist upon certain standards of living. There can be no such thing as absolute economic freedom in a democracy.

By the same token, this principle naturally applies to labor, as it does to all other groups or persons. It is recognized that the danger in this respect, so far as labor is concerned, is slight. But labor needs to keep it in mind, for fear of a reaction in case it ignores this principle.

THE WORLD ABOUT US

Ant Mounds

By A. C. COLE, JR.

Department of Entomology.

Many kinds of ants construct mounds over their subterranean nests. These are made of soil, of sand or pebbles or of vegetable matter, such as twigs, leaves and pine needles. The largest mounds in the United States are probably those of the Allegheny mound-builder. This big red and black species builds huge domes of soil a meter or more in height and many feet in diameter. By far the greater number of mound-building ants lives in the far west. In the deserts and semi-deserts dome and crater-shaped mounds of sand and pebbles are very common. In the mountain forests of western yellow pine one species builds large domes of pine needles, and in the semi-desert region another kind of ant constructs millions of mounds of twigs and grasses.

Tennessee has its share of ant mounds also. Most common are the little hills of soil along sidewalks and in fields and woods. In the Great Smoky mountains there are several mounds about a foot high, and one of note lies along the trail to Brushy Mountain in the Greenbriar Cove region of the park. Large mounds have been reported from the highest points of Houston mountain.

Some mounds are perforated with nest entrances while many others have single "gates" located at the tops or bases of the domes or at the bottoms of the depressions of crater mounds. The mound aids in aeration of the nest. Frequently handfuls of seeds can be taken from chambers in the mounds of harvesting ants. The worker ants husk the seeds, discard the chaff and place the kernels in piles for a future food supply. Often the workers transport their young from the subterranean recesses of the nest to chambers in the mound which, during the warmer periods of spring and autumn days, serve as incubators for the brood.

Many western ants collect cinders from railroad right-of-ways with which to cover their mounds. Some mounds are even covered with bits of colored glass, and gold nuggets have occasionally been dug out of the ground by the ants and placed on their mounds.

DEFENSE BEGUN IN HARLAN TRIAL

London, Ky.—The defense, after vainly moving to dismiss the case against Harlan county mining companies, mine owners and deputy sheriffs, is going ahead with its case, putting on three witnesses for every one by the government. The prosecution has moved to dismiss the complaints against thirteen defendants; but the rest will have to go through.

According to the opening witness of the defense, the Harlan coal companies were perfectly willing to have a contract with the miners, but the United Mine Workers somehow managed to block this.

What Next?

Stephen Tamas, a Hungarian, has announced in Budapest an invention which may revolutionize the cigarette industry. He has developed a process for dispensing with cigarette paper, using instead a wrapper made from the tobacco plant. It is a special tissue in whose manufacture both tobacco leaves and stalk fibers are used. It is transparent and very thin.

Pattern Makers Vigorously Uphold AFofL in Dispute With CIO; Condemn Dictatorships

Chicago. — A fighting speech against the committee for industrial organization by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and the adoption of a resolution upholding the stand of the A. F. of L. in its dispute with the Lewis organization, were features of the eighteenth convention of the Pattern Makers' League of North America, held this year in Chicago.

Despite assaults of the CIO, Green declared, the federation is more solidly organized than at any other time in its fifty-seven year history.

Compromise Opposed.

The resolution upholding the A. F. of L. served notice on the labor movement that the pattern makers did not favor compromise with the rival organization.

Another equally vigorous resolution which, in its original form, condemned fascist dictatorships only, but was amended to include communism, was adopted by the convention.

Opposition to communism was also evidenced in the defeat of John MacDonald, executive board member of the Pattern Makers' league, on the basis that he was affiliated with the communist party. His defeat, which was recommended by George Q. Lynch, international president, was accomplished by Howard Rose, an A. F. of L. man. All other international officers were re-elected.

Union Shop in All Pacts.

Eighty delegates, representing approximately 8,000 pattern makers, were in attendance. Organized pattern makers in the United States and Canada have succeeded in establishing a union shop in all agreements, with an average hourly wage rate of $1.25 and a 40-hour week.

YOUR DOLLAR

YOUR DOLLAR will be a regular weekly feature. The facts and opinions given are based on the scientific research of Consumers Union, 55 Vandam Street, New York City, a non-profit organization whose object is to safeguard buyers by testing and examining all consumer goods. Write direct to the organization for more information on tests under which products are manufactured.

Tests of leading makes of refrigerators by Consumers union indicate that electrically operated models give better performance than gas refrigerators or a modern ice box. The tests also found that the gas-operated Electrolux would not provide low enough temperature for safe use when room temperature went over 100 degrees for an appreciable length of time. Moreover, the operating cost of electric models is low, at rates at rates prevailing in most communities that treat of refrigerators using manufactured gas. Gas refrigerators may be more economical, however, in communities having low cost natural gas. Ice boxes are lower in first cost, but they are less satisfactory and more expensive in use than electrical boxes.

It is interesting to note that despite all advertising to the contrary there have been very few outstanding improvements in refrigerator design in the last two years. That the manufacturers' efforts to persuade owners of old models to get new ones have been largely unsuccessful is shown by reports from independent dealers. In a recent survey, for example, only 5 per cent of the sales were found to involve trade-ins. Consumers' union points out that buyers can often save considerable sums by purchasing recently out-dated models.

Four models are recommended by CU as best buys, and a number of others are rated as also acceptable. The best buys are: General Electric JB6-3S ($145; 6.1 cu. ft.); Kelvinator 126EB62 ($178; 6.1 cu. ft.); Westinghouse HS62 ($160; 6.2 cu. ft.); and the Sears Roebuck [illegible] at $160; 6.4 cu. ft.).

Labor Conditions.

The average wage for the men who make refrigerators is about 60 cents an hour in union shops, or $24 for a 40-hour week. In non-union factories the pay may go as low as 35 or 40 cents.

At least four of the larger manufacturers operate under union contracts. Crosley is made by members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (AFL); Fairbanks Morse and General Electric, by the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers (CIO), and Kelvinator by the United Automobile Workers (CIO).

Two other brands are produced in organized shops where no contract exists. These are the Frigidaire and the Westinghouse, and the union is the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers. The Norge factory is said to have a unit of the United Automobile Workers, and the independent Mechanics' Educational society is reported functioning in the Leonard plant.

Men's Handkerchiefs.

From almost any point of view, the cheap handkerchief sold in 5-and-10-cent stores is a better value than the packaged product found in drug stores, railroad stations and elsewhere.

After careful tests of fabric and workmanship, Consumers' union technicians report that packaged brands often cost more than twice as much as handkerchiefs of equal quality sold in the chain stores. For example, the Paris handkerchief at three for 25 cents is no better than that sold in the 5-and-10-cent store for only 3 cents. And the 25-cent Mannattan is no better than the 10-cent fabrics sold by Woolworth and Kress. Although the widely sold Seal-packerchief is neatly made, the fabrics are fairly coarse compared with those from the 5-and-10-cent stores.

Consumers' Union Shows Gain in Year.

Reports made to 1,500 persons at the second annual membership meeting of Consumers' union, held in New York City last month, showed that the membership of this non-profit testing organization had increased 70 per cent, jumping from 37,000 to 63,000 during the past year. The average wage for employes has been raised by 17 per cent.

JOHN MORRISON, 74, DIES IN NEW YORK

New York City.—John Morrison, veteran trade unionist, died on June 19 at his home here at the age of 74. He was born in New York on Feb. 29, 1864.

A friend of the late Samuel Gompers, Morrison was president of the Carpet Weavers' International union in the eighteen eighties. Since then he had been associated with the trade union movement in various capacities. At his death he had charge of advertising for the American Federationist, official organ of the American Federation of Labor, and various union publications in the building trades.

Housing Loans Fund Boosted $300,000,000

Washington.—The $3,700,000,000 spending-lending recovery bill passed by congress just before adjournment included an authorization for the United States Housing Authority to make $300,000,000 additional loans for slum clearance and housing. The new authorization was backed by the American Federation of Labor, whose influence was largely instrumental in securing its adoption by both the senate and house of representatives.

Last year, congress authorized the housing authority to loan $500,000,000 for slum clearance and housing, a large portion of which has already been earmarked for housing projects in communities which have complied with the federal regulations prescribed for loans. The original $500,000,000 fund was also 100 per cent supported by the American Federation of Labor.

Furniture Workers To Meet in July At Cincinnati

Kenosha, Wis.—Furniture and bedding industry workers of the nation will meet in Cincinnati, July 2 and 3 for a conference to unify labor organizations in the industry, according to Claude A. Watkins, president of the A. F of F. Federal Labor union of Simmons company employes here.

The conference is being sponsored by the Simmons company union, which is said to be the largest single local in the country with a membership of 2,400.

Invitations were sent out May 26, Watkins said, and responses indicated that more than 500 representatives of locals will attend.

Hague Regime Shows Danger Of Anti-Union Propaganda, NLRB Member Declares

Boston.—Edwin S. Smith, member of the national labor relations board, told the Alumni Association of the Harvard Business school that Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City, is a fine example of how the anti-union propaganda of employers can threaten a democracy. He said, in part:

"A most disturbing recent phenomenon is the attempt by many employers to weld the entire community in which a business is located into a united front against workers exercising their constitutional right to strike. Many times this community pressure against unionization has actually been highly organized even before strike action has taken place or is in contemplation. All areas of our country have contributed their quota to an alarming growth of the vigilante spirit, in which the employer's will to destroy the union is substituted for the protection normally accorded American citizens in the exercise of constitutionally guaranteed prerogatives.

"A continuing outcrop of this sort of employer-fostered lawlessness gives aid and encouragement to the antics of such public officials as Mayor Hague, who in complete disregard of civil liberties wages his crusade against organized labor under the trumpery and hypocritical claim that he is protecting the citizens of New Jersey against an invasion of radicals bent on revolutionary action.

"As a matter of known fact, anti-union employers have been lured to Jersey City for years on the plea that it would be kept an open-shop town.

"Even the most conservative of Americans are obliged to hold their noses in the face of Hague's affronts to decency and to American political traditions. While a single politician of this sort may ride to a downfall as a result of his egregious escapades, the fact that Mayor Hague could have ventured so far and so freely is an indication of the extent to which anti-union propaganda issued on behalf of employers may result in substantial threats to our democratic system of government."

Teamster Local Delays Meeting Due to July 4

Officials of Local 515, Teamsters, announce that their next meeting of the union will be held on Monday, July 18, at the labor hall.

Ordinarily the meeting would have been held on Monday, July 4, but because of the holiday the meeting will be skipped and the session is postponed until the next regular meeting date.

Time of the July 18 meeting will be 7:30 p.m.

Benson Wins Nomination.

St. Paul, Minn.—Gov. Elmer A. Benson has won the farmer-labor nomination for governor again. Incomplete returns showed his majority at over 12,000. Nomination is almost equal to an election in this state. For that, and for other reasons, the belief is general here that there was a concerted move for republicans to vot for Hjalmar Petersen, formerly governor and Benson's opponent.

What ardently we wish, we soon believe.—Edward Young.

AFofL. Charters "Front Office" Forces of Chicago Newspapers

Chicago.—Victor A. Olander, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, has received word from President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, that an A. F. of L. charter had been granted to the Newspaper Commercial Associates of Chicago and vicinity. There are more than 400 charter members.

This charter covers the "front office" forces—circulation, advertising and business administration—of daily newspapers in the Chicago area.

The American Newspaper Guild is claiming jurisdiction over these employes in a petition which the guild has on file with the national labor relations board, and upon which testimony was taken before Trial Examiner George Bokat at the Chicago Federal building recently.

New Wage-Hour Law to Raise Pay of 200,000, Experts Estimate — Montana Railroad Disaster Indicates Lack of Proper Bridge Inspection.

Labor department experts estimate that the minimum of 25 cents an hour in the new wage-hour law will raise the wages of about 200,000 persons. It will help the sawmill and fertilizer industries of the south, a small number of textile mills, also in the south, where 9 per cent of the workers are getting less; and some garment factories scattered over many states mainly in the north, Pennsylvania and New Jersey being among them.

This is certainly a "moderate" start. At the middle of last summer, however, it is estimated that the 25 cent minimum would have helped only from 250,000 to 300,000—in factories. The 30 cent limit would help, even now, about 400,000, while the number whose payrolls would be improved by the 40 cent schedule is estimated variously at 870,000 to 1,350,000.

So many people are working part time now that the experts hesitate to guess at the numbers who would have their working week shortened—or their pay envelopes fattened by overtime after 44 hours. In the first half of last year, it was figured that 44 hours would shorten the work of 1,200,000 persons and 40 hours would relieve more than 3,000,000.

Discouraging? No. But it shows that the most needed reforms may take the longest time.

* * *

The Montana railroad crash at a washed-out bridge is not merely a horrible accident. Here is a paragraph from the account:

"As the locomotive crossed a bridge constructed over the creek thirty years ago, the center span gave way, railroad officials said. There had been no warning as to the condition of the bridge."

To every thinking citizen, that is a confession of neglect. Proper inspection could not have helped giving warning. Cloudbursts in the Rocky mountain region are nothing new. And another thing must not be forgotten:

This crash occurred on the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad, a line which with the "Pacific" left out of its name made the biggest bankruptcy crash of railroad history a dozen years ago, wiping out about $450,000,000 of investment in a series of financial devilments, and which has been staggering along ever since. But last year, it paid $66,000 in salaries to receivers. A tenth of that sum would have kept this part of the road inspected so that such a disaster could not have occurred.

Thirty-four years ago, a little later in the year, a worse disaster still occurred in Colorado. Eighty-eight bodies were recovered from the "cloudburst wreck" of a train on the Denver & Rio Grande—a road which has been so messed up by Gould family management that the following story was current in that region:

"Go 'long," said a Rio Grande porter to one from the Santa Fe. "The Rio Grande kills more people than the Santa Fe totes!"

On July 18-20, this year, there will be a National Health conference in Washington, and Thomas Parran, surgeon-general of the United States, will lay before that conference a six-year plan for the states and the federal government to run down and tag practically every case of tuberculosis in this country. The plan was drawn in New York, largely under the urging of Homer Folks, executive secretary of the State Charities Aid association, and was first given public utterance in Los Angeles. But that is a common thing with Washington news.

"Tuberculosis," Dr. Parran said in stating his approval of the plan, "is a battle half won." The death rate from this disease has dropped 50 per cent in thirty-five years, and this is a good time to make a drive at the rest of it. It calls for a drive at case finding, especially among families which have had a t.b. case already. The plan is to have an X-ray of each member of the family and of each person in close contact with the family.

It is expected to cost about $269,000,000 in six years, the federal government furnishing more than two-thirds of it; and when it is done, the hope is to have every case known and every case needing a bed to have it.

Green Deplores Senator's Death

Washington.—The death of Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, was deplored by President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, in a telegram to Mrs. Copeland which said:

"I was deeply shocked when I learned of the sudden death of Senator Copeland. Be assured that I share with all his loyal friends the feeling of sorrow they experience over his untimely death. No one who was more courageous, independent and devoted to the public service ever served in the United States senate. I extend to you and all members of the family my sincere sympathy in your sad bereavement."

Senator Copeland, only physician in the senate, died in his apartment here after a short illness, at the age of 69. He had not been well but death was attributed to overwork at the recent session of congress. He had worked unusually hard as chairman of the committee on commerce, which revised the policy of the federal subsidies to the merchant marine and worked out a mediation plan for settling labor disputes in the marine industry. He also helped to push through a new pure food and drug act and was active in other legislation.

Committee Named to Make British Labor Inquiry

Washington.—The president has appointed his committee to look into industrial-labor relations in Great Britain and into employe-employer relations in Sweden. The nine persons chosen are:

Lloyd K. Garrison, former head of labor relations board; Robert J. Watt, representing A. F. of L.; Gerard Swope, General Electric; Henry I. Harriman, former president of U. S. Chamber of Commerce; William H. Davis, former NRA official; Anna M. Rosenberg, regional director for social security, N. Y.; Charles R. Hook, American Rolling Mills company; Marion Dickerman, Todhunter School for Girls; William E. Chalmers, assistant U. S. labor commissioner at Geneva.

President Roosevelt sent them first a letter wishing them success in England and then another letter urging them on to Sweden.

Judge L. D. Miller

Here is my record while in the Tennessee Legislature, the 61st session. I have been consistent all the time since.

April 18, 1919.

Honorable L. D. Miller
Chattanooga, Tennessee

Dear Sir:

As Chairman of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, it affords me great pleasure to express to you my sincere thanks for your valuable assistance in the recent session of the General Assembly of the State. I think it is simply a matter of justice for me to state to you that I consider your services in the Legislature of more value to the masses—the common people—than the work of any other man in the Lower House in the Sixty-first Session of the General Assembly. * * * In fact, in every instance when I had occasion to call upon you in behalf of the toilers of the State, you responded so readily that I consider it my duty to express to you, as the Legislative Representative of the State Federation of Labor, the sincere gratitude of this organization.

With best wishes for your future welfare, etc.,

Yours very truly,

DAVE HANLY, Chairman,
Tennessee Federation of Labor.

The above letter was written nineteen years ago. I hope my record as a public official through succeeding years has been consistent with the sentiment expressed in Mr. Hanly's letter.

Labor to Benefit Heavily From Federal Spending, U. S. Officials Say

Washington.—Five government officials got together in the capital at a radio symposium to tell the country their ideas, at least, on how the recovery and relief program would help business and labor. They were Secretary Wallace, of agriculture; Harry Hopkins, of WPA; Nathan Strauss, of the U. S. Housing Authority; Howard A. Gray, acting chief PWA, and Gen. John J. Kingman, acting chief of the army engineers.

Mr. Hopkins said that he had to spend nearly a billion and a half of dollars in the next eight months, and asked who would get the money.

"We know from our records of the past three years," he said, "that $300,000,000 will go to buy materials, supplies and equipment, such as $100,000,000 for cement, brick and similar things; $70,000,000 for iron, steel, trucks and machinery; $25,000,000 for lumber and lumber products; and $25,000,000 for textiles.

"These things will give employment to at least a quarter of a million workers entirely apart from those on WPA jobs.

Direct Pay Biggest Item.

"The biggest item will go for direct pay to the workers. The average WPA worker makes about $55 a month, some as low as $30, and three dependents to support on it. Every cent of his pay check is needed immediately for the basic necessities of living.

"That is why we say the WPA dollar is the fastest moving dollar in America. It swells the stream of American trade where it is needed most, in the lowest stratum, so that the turnover is repeated the maximum number of times."

Even the food bill of $515,000,000, Hopkins said, meant $1,000 of trade to a half million food stores.

New Weapon Against Depression.

Nathan Straus said that while the housing program had not been designed for recovery, it has been increased for that end.

"As the Roosevelt program takes root in city after city, town after town," he said, "a new weapon against future depression is being forged. Local housing authorities have increased from 40 to more than 140 in the past three months."

Mr. Gray stressed the employing features of public works, the indirect employment particularly. General Kingman, of the army engineers, said that records show that river and harbor work and flood control spend 75 per cent of their money on labor.

CHEMICAL WORKERS WIN.

Baton Rouge, La.—The chemical workers of Federal Labor Union No. 20272 returned to work after a five-week strike, the workers having gained full seniority and other benefits which had heretofore been denied. Also one member was returned to work who was laid off seven weeks prior to the strike.

"Better a drowned land than a lost land!" cried the Dutchmen three and a half centuries ago, and made their words good. And the Chinese are doing the same now.

IN THE NEWS

HARRY S. TRUMAN

Harry S. Truman, senator from Missouri, was born in Barton county, that state, May 8, 1884. His father was a farmer; and after finishing school and getting the lowdown on finances by working in several banks, he went back to the farm as partner until 1917.

Then he helped organize two regiments of field artillery, and went overseas with one of them, the 129th, with the 35th division. He sailed in March, 1918. He was captain, and was ordered to command Battery D, 129th field artillery, where he served on the front until the armistice. Was discharged as major, and is now a colonel of field artillery reserves.

The year after the war ended he married and has one daughter.

He was elected to the county court of Jackson county in 1922, defeated in 1924, and elected presiding judge of that court in 1926 by a majority of 16,000. He was re-elected in 1930 by a majority of 58,000. He was elected senator in 1934 by 262,000.

Whether it is the remembrance of these climbing majorities that makes him so cheerful and good natured cannot be told. The fact is that he gets more boyish pleasure out of life than any other man on the Hill—and a number of those chaps have a keen sense of humor.

He is immeasureably more liberal than his colleague, Bennett Champ Clark. He alternated with Senator Wheeler, of Montana, in the probe of railroads. He has declared openly that he doesn't care for lending Uncle Sam's money to the railroads while they are trying to cut wages.

SOUTHERN LABOR "SPOTS"

Albertville, Ala.—Charter was installed here last week for a newly organized local union of Hodcarriers, Common and Construction Laborers. The new organization was perfected by S. E. Roper, director of organization for the A. F. of L. in Alabama, and Ben Scarborough, representative of the Common and Construction Laborers' International organization. Mr. Scarborough installed the charter and instructed the members in setting up their local union.

Baton Rouge, La.—An agreement was signed here last week between the management of the Louisiana Chemical plant and a committee representing the union of which the plant employes are members. A strike had been in progress in this plant for a few weeks, but all workers returned to their jobs when the agreement was signed. E. H. Williams, A. F. of L. organizer and president of the State Federation of Labor, and C. M. Fox, A. F. of L. representative, assisted the union committee in the negotiations which resulted in adoption of the agreement.

New Orleans, La.—Charter has been applied for by newly organized local union here for Truck Farmers and Helpers with a large charter membership. L. B. Carter, A. F. of L. representative, organized the local union, which, his report indicates, will have a membership of more than 700 before charter is closed.

Knoxville, Tenn.—President Gerald Foley, of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, has called a meeting of the executive board of the state body to meet in Knoxville Saturday morning, July 2, and in Maryville on Saturday afternoon. This meeting is in keeping with a resolution adopted at the convention of the state body held in Johnson City recently. The resolution instructed the state executive committee to hold an executive board meeting in Maryville at an early date for the purpose of mapping a campaign of organization among the aluminum workers employed at Alcoa.

The board meeting is being held in Maryville with the local A. F. of L. union of aluminum workers in order to throw the influence of the powerful state federation of labor into the A. F. of L.'s unionization campaign.

According to announced plans, general state matters will be considered by the executive board at the morning session, which will be held at the Farragut hotel. In the afternoon, when the board meets at Maryville, the entire session will be devoted to the A. F. of L. local union's program among the aluminum workers.

Charlotte, N. C.—About ten weeks ago J. F. Elam, a truck driver employed by the trucking firm operated by Roy R. Regan, of Atlanta and Charlotte, joined the Charlotte local of Teamsters' and Chauffeurs' International union. Soon thereafter Mr. Elam was discharged. The union said his discharge resulted from his joining the union. Several conferences were held about the matter, but no progress was made.

The Charlotte Central Labor union, through Secretary William S. Greene, and H. L. McCrorie, official of the teamsters' union, filed charges against Mr. Reagan before the national labor relations board. Within a few days Mr. Elam was put back to work, with pay for time since his discharge, and the misunderstanding had been cleared up.

This is but one of hundreds of such instances, and should be sufficient to convince the workers that they need have no fear of losing their jobs because of joining the union. It also ought to convince employers that they no longer can fire men just because they join the union.

Ragland, Ala.—A local union of the Retail Clerks' International association was organized here last week, and charter for the new organization has been applied for. S. E. Roper, director of organization for the A. F. of L. in Alabama, was requested to come to Ragland and form the organization. Upon receipt of the charter and its installation, officers will be elected and work of building the union will be started immediately.

High Point, N. C.—An agreement was signed here last week between the management of the Briggs Manufacturing company and Local Union No. 307, Upholsterers' International. A misunderstanding arose between the management and the local union four weeks ago, and a strike was voted by the union members. Discharge of some of the employes who were active in union affairs led up to the strike, it was charged, and the national labor board was appealed to. The agreement was signed, however, before the case was perfected, thus happily ending the controversy.

E. L. Briggs, general manager of the plant, and Major L. P. McLendon, attorney for the manufacturing concern, represented the company in the negotiations. W. B. Harris, director of the Southern States Council of the Upholsterers' International; J. R. Arrington, organizer, and a committee of the union represented the workers. Everett Morris, L. P. Greenway and A. W. Steele were on the committee representing the local union.

This is the first time that the Briggs Manufacturing company has ever signed an agreement with the Upholsterers' union, and the members of the local here have expressed a determination to cooperate with the company in such manner as to cause the management to place high valuation upon its agreement with the upholsterers' local union. The best of friendly spirit was apparent on both sides when the agreement was signed and the employes returned to their work.

Elberton, Ga.—Granite cutters and their friends held a mass meeting here last week celebrating the renewal of contracts between the local union of the Granite Cutters' International and the Georgia Granite corporation and other employers. The new agreements run for a period of two years, and the whole town greeted announcement of the signing of the agreements with satisfaction.

Commissioner of Labor T. E. Whitaker was here and contributed in large measure to the happy conclusion of the negotiations. Dick Hudson, representing the International Granite Cutters' association, assisted the local union officials in the negotiations.

During the week a local union of Painters and Decorators was organized by Charles W. Gill, international representative, and the charter has been ordered. A local union of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners is being formed, and will be completed just as soon as Representative Roland Adams can be here and properly instruct the men who have expressed desire for a local organization.

The Silk Mill local union is functioning nicely, and is planning to hold regular meetings again just as soon as the mill begins fair operations. The mill has not been running much during the winter months.

James F. Barrett, of the A. F. of L. staff, was principal speaker at the mass meeting here last week, which was held in the county courthouse. A large delegation from Atlanta attended the mass meeting, and a number of men employed on the construction jobs at Athens also attended.

Jackson, Miss.—President L. H. Jones, of the Mississippi State Federation of Labor, has issued formal call for the twentieth annual convention of the state federation to meet in Gulfport, Miss., on Monday and Tuesday, July 11 and 12. Great Southern hotel will be headquarters. In the call issued by President Jones he states that "due to the highly important issues before the organized labor movement in Mississippi, and the vital issues which will be handled at this convention," all local labor unions, all central labor unions and all other units are urged to have full delegations present.

Lewis G. Hines, director of organization for the American Federation of Labor, and Paul J. Aymon, southern representative of the A. F. of L., will attend the convention.

The latest Gallup poll shows that after ten months of persistent harping that the new deal caused the present depression, a scant 30 per cent of the people believe it.

Brainerd Parish To Have Picnic

The annual parish picnic of Our Lady of Perpetual Help will take place July 4 on the new church grounds at the corner of Anderson avenue and South Moore road.

The main purpose of this year's affair will be to assist in paying for the new church now being built. Unionists are proud to know that this church is being constructed under 100 per cent union conditions.

The public is invited to attend the celebration. Tickets for adults will be 50 cents and children will be 25 cents.

TFL EXECUTIVE BOARD HAS BUSY TWO-DAY SESSION IN KNOXVILLE, TENN.

Offers Services in Taxi Drivers' Strike—Lends Hand to Aluminum Workers' Union.

Knoxville, Tenn.—Taking action upon many matters of interest to labor throughout the state, the Tennessee Federation of Labor's executive committee met here last Saturday morning, went to Maryville in the evening for a session at that place, reconvened Sunday morning, working throughout the day, and the members remained over until Monday in order to meet with the management of the taxicab company here in an endeavor to settle the strike of that concern's employes.

Many delegations appeared before the executive board during the sessions, which were held at the Andrew Johnson hotel. Careful study was given each presentation, and the influence of the board is to be felt in many sections of the state. Gerald Foley, of Nashville, is president of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and chairman of the executive council. Other members are T. R. Cuthbert, of Chattanooga; T. O. Denham, Nashville; W. R. Hughes, Johnson City; Maynard Baird, Knoxville; Erskine Mabee, of Chattanooga; Carl Vester, Nashville; J. W. Rush, Jackson, and George McNamara, Memphis.

President Foley made report of his actions in refusing to meet with labor's non-partisan committee, which is made up largely of leaders in the CIO. President William Green and the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor had urged this action upon all state bodies. The executive board of the state body upheld President Foley's action. The board urged local unions, central bodies and building trades councils to be on the alert regarding the expenditure of money through WPA and PWA, explaining that labor is to be given a fair deal in the expenditures of the billions provided by congress for aiding business to get nito the upswing.

TFL URGES BAN ON ALL CIO SPONSORS

AFL Membership Asked Not to Participate in CIO Affairs.

Knoxville, Tenn.—In one of the most constructive statements ever issued by any one of labor officials, the executive council of the Tennessee Federation of Labor in session here Saturday and Sunday, "respectfully urged" members of local unions and city central labor unions to refrain from attending events sponsored by the CIO. The statement, which was ordered sent to all affiliated locals and central bodies in the state, is as follows:

"The executive board of the Tennessee Federation of Labor respectfully urges members of local unions and city central bodies affiliated with this federation to refrain from joining in any activities with CIO union officials. We deem this word of advice necessary because of the practice of CIO officials to stage community events under CIO sponsorship and then attempt to bring some degree of dignity to such events by having outstanding A. F. of L. members attend and either take part in these events or accept seats of honor thereat.

"Reports come to this board that CIO officials often use the names of A. F. of L. members as well as the name of the central labor union in a city to obtain halls, promote advertising schemes, dances, etc. When our members attend such events and their names are printed as being present or taking part in such events with the CIO officials, the public is led to believe that the A. F. of L. and the CIO are working hand in hand.

"The CIO is a dual organization. It is trying to destroy the American Federation of Labor. No member of our unions should, therefore, permit his name or his presence to be used by scheming CIO officials for the purpose of deceiving the public or confusing our membership."

Negro Swim Pool Is Completed

One More Splendid Feature of Parks and Playgrounds Program Accomplished—Finest in Whole South.

The south's finest swimming pool for colored people was dedicated last Friday, July 1, at Lincoln park when Commissioner Bob Cooke formally presented the pool to the colored citizens of Chattanooga and it was accepted in their behalf by the Rev. J. B. Barber, one of Chattanooga's outstanding colored pastors. The pool was built by the city of Chattanooga and the WPA, and its financing has been so arranged as to cost the taxpayers of the city absolutely nothing. The total cost of the pool was approximately $60,000, of which amount the city issued bonds in the amount of $29,000. The profits of the pool are so marked as to retire the bonds, thereby giving a much needed recreation facility, yet at no expense to the taxpayers.

The pool is modern in design and equipment and is 80 feet in width by 200 feet in length with a sand beach adjoining with a width of 24 feet. The department of public utilities, grounds and buildings, of which Bob Cooke is commissioner, and the WPA worked hand in hand to give to Chattanooga one of the finest structures possible and the pool will always be a monument to those who had a part in its development.

"BOB" COOKE

At the dedicatorial exercises, Dr. Spencer McCallie was the principal speaker and he was high in his praise of the splendid record Commissioner Cooke is making with the recreational program in Chattanooga. Dr. Lin B. Cartwright, well-known pastor, urged the colored citizens to preserve and maintain the pool.

A. M. Pennybacker, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and a number of other leading citizens, white and colored, participated in the dedication, each highly praising the work of Commissioner Cooke in parks and recreation matters.

Approximately 10,000 people attended the ceremonies dedicating the pool, including outstanding citizens, both white and colored. The completion of this pool and its use by colored citizens is but another achievement in the excellent recreational program so ably led by our own Bob Cooke.

ABEL DISABLED

White Abel, secretary of Local 165, Pressmen, will be in Erlanger hospital for a few days, undergoing an operation.

S. C. Labor Federation Holds Big Convention

Columbia, S. C.—The annual convention of the South Carolina State Federation of Labor, held here, was the largest and most harmonizing and constructive meeting ever held by the state labor body.

Paul J. Aymon, acting southern representative of the American Federation of Labor, told the delegates that "the C. I. O. is making big claims for political effect." He said he would not vote for any candidate who is indorsed by the C. I. O. and warned the workers in South Carolina to be on their guard against the political activities of C. I. O. leaders.

NOTICE

Chattanooga Central Labor Union will meet Monday night in regular session, Central Labor Hall, West Seventh Street, at 7:30 p.m. All delegates are requested and expected to be present.

CURTIS SIMS
President

ERSKINE MABEE,
Secretary.

UNUSUAL

When a public project is completed, it is usual for the dedication ceremonies to be attended by nearly all of the city and county officials to honor the head of the department under whom the project is placed. Just a matter of courtesy.

It was quite noticeable that when Commissioner "Bob" dedicated the fine swimming pool that only one other official attended to honor the occasion.

All the others stayed away in droves.

Much speculation is given as to why. Some say that it is an indication of possible line-ups in March.

Nashville Body Gets "Hot" For Public Power

Condemns Nashville Management of TEPCO as Labor-Haters.

In a regular session of the Nashville Trades and Labor council, the management of the Nashville properties of the Tennessee Electric Power company are accused of pursuing a labor antagonistic policy and of paying wages that are much less than organized utility systems in the south.

The Central body also declared for public power in Nashville. The resolution says:

Whereas, the citizens of Nashville, Tenn., are giving much thought and discussion concerning Tennessee Valley public power, which would afford to users of electricity at cheaper and more reasonable rates, thereby saving taxpayers many thousands of dollars annually; and,

Whereas, the Tennessee Electric Power company, a monopoly of power distribution and generation in Nashville, Tenn., at present has consistently adopted a most bitter anti-union policy, being successful in battering down organization of its workers in the past through every known method used by labor-haters; and,

Whereas, the Tennessee Electric Power company is paying wages that are less than organized utility systems in the south, and even pay its Nashville employes less than anywhere else in the TEPCO system, working its employers long hours and dominating them in many instances through fear of discharge and actual discharge; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Nashville Trades and Labor council, in regular session, That we go on record in favor of public ownership of electrical distribution, that we favor the Tennessee Valley Authority, and that we advocate immediate steps be taken to allow Nashville to remedy the unfair and monopolistic policies of the Tennessee Electric Power company.

Crime is contagious. If the government becomes a lawbreaker, it breeds contempt for law; it invites every man to become a law unto himself; it invites anarchy.—Louis D. Brandeis.

BILL TO GIVE LAKES TUGMEN 8-HOUR DAY IS PUSHED

Washington.—It looks at the present writing as if the tugmen on the Great Lakes would get their 8-hour day after all.

Very early in the session, James Mead, of New York, introduced a bill in the house, establishing an 8-hour day for these men. It was stymied in the merchant marine committee. Then, later, Senator Shipstead, of Minnesota, introduced the identical bill in the senate, and on June 7 the senate passed it.

The chairman of the merchant marine committee, Schuyler Otis Bland, of Newport News, Va., was not in favor of the bill. His committee members have reported themselves in favor of it; and Bland is reported to have withdrawn his objections. It was planned to pass the senate measure under suspension of the rules and chances for success seemed good.

TRAGEDY OF UNEMPLOYMENT IS PERMANENT, WPA HOLDS

Unemployment Insurance, Public Work and Public Assistance Seen as Necessary for Relief; 18,502,000 Persons Are Receiving Relief.

Washington.—Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, made public a work progress administration survey of relief and security programs which visioned continued unemployment as a permanent condition of the present economic order which can only be coped with by a permanent program of assistance for the jobless along the three integrated lines of insurance, public work and public relief.

The conclusions reached by the survey were drawn from statistics which showed that the peak of various relief and emergency employment activities was reached in February, 1934, when 27,606,000 persons from 7,897,000 different families received relief benefits of some kind, with the following figures of persons receiving relief in the same month of other years: 1932—10,510,000; 1933—23,716,000; 1935—21,112,000; 1937—18,614,000; 1938—18,502,000.

The extent of relief was indicated in part in the statement that from January, 1933, through December, 1937, a total of $13,148,000,000 of federal, state and local funds was expended, not including expenditures of the PWA, the bureau of public roads and several other agencies.

The survey was prepared by Arthur E. Burns and Edward A. Williams, of the works progress administration, and transmitted to Administrator Hopkins by Assistant Administrator Corrington Gill.

Ideal Labor Leader

By DR. CHARLES STELZLE

Executive Director, Good Neighbor League.

Earliest of labor leaders was Moses, the man who delivered from a cruel bondage the millions of Israelites who were slaves in Egypt, and who might serve as an example for the modern labor leader. The development of a leader is always a slow process. This is particularly true in the industrial world. For in the labor movement there is so much at stake, and there are so many interests involved, that the raw enthusiast cannot be entrusted with the power of leadership.

Enthusiasm there must be, but it must be an enthusiasm founded upon intelligence and a genuine experience. It required forty years of solitude in the land of Midian to transform the hot-blooded Moses, the adopted son of Pharoah's daughter, into the modest Moses whose name has become a synonym for meekness. "Learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians," nevertheless he needed the solitary life of the shepherd on the hillside to prepare him for the great task of leading out into liberty the slaves of the Egyptian ruler.

He came, too, with the consciousness of a sure victory, because he knew that his cause was just. But more than that, he was confident because he came in the spirit of a strong moral faith. This emancipation which he was about to witness was more than an economic deliverance dependent upon brute strength, and the ability of a mere man to exercise unusual power. He had back of him the Omnipotent God of Abraham, of Isaac and of Jacob, the forefathers of the afflicted Israelites. It was the religious element in this movement which made it all-powerful.

This day awaits another Moses—aye, many such. For again the masses need to be led out of bondage. Not always the bondage of the ancient Israelites, although there is still a call for such service, but the bondage which enslaves man to his lower self.

The qualities that were so conspicuous in Moses must be found in the modern leader. He must be of the people, fo rhe must understand their needs. He must have had an experience which covered him, so that he is familiar with the deeper, truer things of life. He must depend not so much upon his speech as upon his character. He must have the power which can come alone through the consciousness that his cause is just, and that back of him, too, as He was back of Moses, stands the God of the common people, Who is saying through him: "Let my people go."

Colorado Labor Holds Successful Convention

Colorado Springs, Colo.—The forty-third annual convention of the Colorado State Federation of Labor, held here, was one of the largest and most harmonious meetings in the history of the federation. Nearly two hundred delegates reaffirmed their faith in and allegiance to the American Federation of Labor.

At a mass meeting in honor of the delegates arranged by the Colorado Springs Federated Trades Council, Gov. Teller Ammons declared that union labor was the greatest safeguard for labor. He outlined his 10-year building program designed to provide jobs for the workers and a market for Colorado products.

John E. Gross, a member of the Pueblo Machinists' union, was elected president of the state federation for two years, and James A. Brownlow, a member of the Denver Plumbers' union, was elected secretary-treasurer.

Twelve vice-presidents were also elected, representing various districts.

The convention called upon organized labor throughout the state to fight to the bitter end all attempts of employers to enforce wage slashes. The resolution on this subject declared that Colorado "labor goes on record as opposing every attempt at wage cutting, and appeals to every business, manufacturing institution and citizen to refrain from adopting wage reductions as a medium to offset the present economic situation."

Things I never knew . . . that Archie Underwood had gone gallivanting around into space, hanging on to a rope of a balloon. Probably would never have found that either if there hadn't been an accident involving a balloon on the Fourth of July. Then the story comes out that when Archie was younger he was inspecting a balloon out at Warner Park and it went up, entangling his feet in the ropes. He says he was carried up about 15 or 20 feet before falling, but that he wasn't hurt. That was back in 1918. My goodness, Archie, how old were you then?

All of our delegates will remember the Longs at the convention in Johnson City, where Brother Long is president of the Central Labor union.

Mr. W. H. Jordan, secretary of the Nashville Typos, spent the Fourth in Chattanooga. Says that all the printers must have been away on picnics, but that he enjoyed sightseeing in our city.

All people who like to fish take note:

Elsewhere in the paper this week there is a story about San Diego's being the first city to have fish with the union label. Out in California they are putting a union label on fish that says that they were caught, shipped, butchered, delivered and sold by union workmen.

So if you go fishing and don't have any luck, you have a perfectly good excuse now. You can say you caught a lot of fish but threw them back in when they didn't have a union label on them.

NLRB Hearing Witness Makes Plain Broad Field of AFofL Activities On Behalf of Nation's Workers

By JOSEPH A. WISE

Chicago.—In support of his contention that the National Labor Relations act covers a much wider field than the single, isolated subject of "collective bargaining," Victor A. Olander, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, testified at considerable length at the recent NLRB hearing at Chicago in relation to the petition of the American Newspaper Guild against thirty affiliates of the American Federation of Labor.

The guild is attempting to stage a membership raid on the unionized mechanical departments and on the unorganized "front office" forces of American daily newspapers, A. F. of L. unions in charge.

Mr. Olander's testimony is too lengthy to be covered in one labor press story. More of his testimony, which is regarded as highly important, will be given later.

Legal Status of Labor Defended.

Under oath, Mr. Olander testified, in part, as follows:

"The American Federation of Labor gives particular attention to the legal status of the workers, to establish, defend and promote their rights as free citizens. It asserts and guards the interests of the workers in the development of national legislation in congress and advises and guides its affiliates in relation to state and local legislation. It asserts and guards the interests of workers as a body in relation to the attitude of the courts, particularly against harmful legal tendencies.

"It has brought about decided modifications of the old conspiracy doctrine which has often been used to hamper workers in their struggle for better lives. Its long and finally successful fight against the misuse of the equity power of the federal courts, the misuse of injunctions in labor disputes, is one of the great historic events of the life of modern America.

Federation Leads in Labor Legislation.

"It is carrying on a similar fight in the states, through the state branches, as relating to the state courts. It has made a great deal of progress in that respect.

"In the field of legislation the American Federation of Labor has been the leading factor in the initiation or development of many laws in the interests of workers.

"I cite some examples: The Norris-LaGuardia act to prevent the misuse of injunctions in labor disputes; the development of Section 7 of the national industrial recovery act, of the executive order, and the congressional resolutions establishing the national labor board, the first national labor relations board, and finally the law creating the present national labor relations board.

Brought Creation of Labor Departments.

"It originated and urged and succeeded in bringing about the creation of the United States department of labor and departments of labor in various states and of bureaus, national and state, specializing in the protection of women and children in industry.

"It is the most active force in support of the pending child labor amendment. It brought about the enactment of the contract labor laws, has been a leading figure in the urging and securing of immigration restrictions. It originated the present movement for health and safety laws of various sorts, national and state.

Promoted Big Field of Laws Aiding Labor.

"It brought about the creation of bureaus of labor statistics that we have in the various states, and also the bureau which is part of the United States department of labor; developed the factory inspection laws, the mine safety laws, the laws of sanitation, ventilation and cleanliness in working places; the abolition of sweatshops, the prohibition of child labor, special protection for women workers, employers' liability laws, workmen's compensation acts, occupational disease laws, seamen's laws, wage collection laws, wage assignment laws, laws relating to conditions of public employes, unemployment compensation, old age pension laws, mothers' pension laws, child welfare laws, vocational education and apprenticeship arrangements through public boards and law, and also active in protecting the whole load of what are now called the social security laws.

Federation Activities Are Open to All Members.

"It led in the fight for minimum wage and maximum hour laws and is busily engaged at this moment in promoting the passage of the pending bill in congress on that subject.

"It has been one of the most active promoters of public housing legislation, relief legislation and a number of other matters of that sort.

"And the workers who join the American Federation of Labor or who are members of it, directly or through its affiliates, have opportunities to individually and collectively take part in all of these activities relating to their conditions of employment, activities covering subjects that are not the question of settlement by collective bargaining.

AFofL Develops Spirit of Responsibility.

"The American Federation of Labor, from its inception, has held on many, many occasions, by official action, that when its members give their word for the performance of certain acts or the maintenance of a certain condition, that they live scrupulously up to it; that being a condition necessary not only to make employers feel that they are dealing with a responsible group, but also to prove to the public in general that the American Federation of Labor is that sore of an organization.

"Incidentally, I might remark that the records show that the printing trades unions, particularly those in the newspaper field, have been leaders on that particular point, or among the leaders on that particular point."

Sally Rand Boosts Union Label Goods In Radio Talk.

Chicago.—Sally Rand, world-famous originator of the "Fan Dance" and the "Bubble Dance," revealed she is a strong advocate of A. F. of L. organized labor and A. F. of L. union-made goods, in an interview conducted by Ed Burke over radio station WCFL, Chicago. Said Sally: "I'm interested in labor. First, because I'm a union member. Second, because I think labor will play a big part in putting the country back on its feet."

Miss Rand appeared in person at the A. F. of L. Union Label and Industrial exposition in Cincinnati in May. She talked to the assembled guests and, woman-like, admitted she enjoyed talking.

"What did you talk about?" asked Ed Burke.

"I talked about directing the buying power into channels which support labor and union-made goods," answered the dancer. "It was a lot of fun, and I only hope that I get another opportunity to speak."

THE QUERY BOX

Q.—If I name my son for you, he is your namesake. Is there a word to express your relation to him?

A.—A person for whom one is named is usually called the name-father, name-mother, name-sire, name-giver, etc. However, the word namesake is used in speaking of any person or thing having the same name as another; hence it is used for either.

There has been a wedding in the culinary workers' ranks. We told you there would be, but this one came as a complete surprise. Oddities in the History of Tennessee, gleaned from the files of the American Guide, Federal Writers' Project, Works Progress Administration, Nashville, Tenn.

CHATTANOOGA: In the National cemetery stands one of the most unusual monuments in history. It is a bronze replica of the Western & Atlantic locomotive, the "General," beneath which lie the "Andrew Raiders" in their last long sleep. On April 12, 1862, twenty-one soldiers, led by Capt. James J. Andrews, a Kentucky spy, tried to destroy the railroad, the source of contact between Chattanooga and Atlanta. Most of the "Raiders" were captured; some were hanged as spies; others escaped or were exchanged. Andrews himself was executed and is buried with seven of his fellows. The monument of the "General," which was erected as an everlasting reminder of their failure, stands guard over their sepulchre.

* * *

JONESBORO: Russell Bean, son of William Bean, the first permanent white settler in Tennessee, had been arrested, tried ,sentenced and jaild, for an altercation with one Allen. He broke out of jail, and the whole town was thrown into a panic when he threatened to kill Allen. Bean took his seat in his open cabin door, pistols across his knees, and a loaded gun by his side, and defied anyone to take him. Andrew Jackson was judge of the court at Jonesboro at the time, and ordered Bean brought in. "Bring Bean in dead or alive. Summons every man in the courthouse!" "Then I summon your honor first!" replied the sheriff. "By the Eternal, I'll bring him in!" replied Jackson, and started for Bean's cabin. When he arrived within shooting distance, Bean got up, dropped his guns, and shouted, "I'll surrender to you, Mr. Devil."

TENNESSEE has been spelled in many various forms. An English spelling of the word in 1707 was Tinnase, but among later writings and indicated maps were such forms as:

Tanase, Tannassee, Tannassie, Tanassee, Tanisee, Tanesih, Tannissee, Tannassy, Tenase, Tenasee, Tennassie, Tanese, Tenessee, Tennesse, Tenassee, Tenasee, Tenessee, Tenassy, Tennessee, Tinessee, Aenice, Tunassee, Tunnasee, Tunese, Tunesee, Tunissee.

The name was derived from the Overhill Indian village Tenase, which in the Cherokee language was pronounced Tanisi. The Cherokees gave their pronounciation of the name to the river along which they lived. This was in the area of the present Monoe county and the river now called the Little Tennessee.

The packing industry began in Tennessee in 1768. A Philadelphia firm, Baynton, Wharton & Morgan, sent Joseph Hollingshead to the region along the Cumberland and Tennessee rivers to superintend the packing of wild game killed by the hunters in that locality. The meat was packed in casks to be delivered to the New Orleans market and also to supply the Fort Chartres garrison in Illinois. As buffaloes were fattest during June and July, the industry was confined to rendering buffalo tallow; deer skins were also secured at this time. When the weather grew cold buffalo meat and venison were cured and casked. As many as twenty large pirogues were required to take the meat and tallow down the rivers to market.

day to the government's archaeological survey station. All those Indian skeletons makes us wonder that a thousand years from now if people won't be digging up bones of our labor leaders of today. This collecting of bones of prehistoric men is interesting, but still we wouldn't want to spend a day (much less a night) in that lonely section where this station is located.

Rail Safety Threatened—

Cutting of Maintenance Costs Endangers Workers and Public

Washington.—From the middle of July, 1937, to the middle of May, 1938, American railroads laid off just under 270,000 men. And two-thirds of these are men devoted to keeping up the way, structures and equipment of the railroads. In other words, the biggest cut is not in the men working the railroad property, but the men whose jobs are to keep the railroad property in shape.

Also, as usual, the men who could least afford to lose jobs are the ones who have lost most of them. Maintenance of way men have never been able to get more than subsistence wages at the best, and usually not that. The average wage for the last year for which figures are on hand was $1,084 per year. And the average wage never is the real wage, for the total sum paid in the year is divided by the "average" number of men employed by the middle of the month, and all the men who share the pay never are working on any one day.

To say that the railroads are playing with fire by this course is putting it mildly. The men who maintain the way, structures and equipment are precisely the ones who are working for safety first. The railroads have bettered their safety record very greatly in the last dozen years, but they cannot keep a good record and slight maintenance. The Custer Creek disaster on the Milwaukee in which forty persons were killed bears every mark of being due to neglect. No properly built bridge on the main line goes out before the engine comes to it.

A list of the principal lines and what they paid for maintenance of way the first four months of this year compared to what they paid for the same work in the first four months of 1937 is startling. Only four roads, the Atlantic Coast Line, the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, the New Haven and the Southern Pacific paid more this year than last, and their extra payments together come to $769,229. But the Chesapeake & Ohio spent $774,193 less this year than last; the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific, $856,272 less; the B. & O., $1,195,625 less, while the New York Central fell behind $8,077,909, the Union Pacific $2,314,498, and the Pennsylvania $5,147,490.

Steel Workers Organizing Committee Cutting Expenses

Pittsburgh.—Reduced dues income, caused by lack of employment in the steel industry, has forced the Steel Workers' Organizing committee of the CIO to tighten its purse strings.

"The SWOC is doing what every prudent organization must do in times of depression," Clinton S. Golden, regional director, said in answer to reports that the steel union is running into financial difficulties.

"We are cutting expenses wherever we can without endangering the stability of the organization," he added as he pointed out that the average steel production in the Pittsburgh district is 22 per cent of capacity and that the average for the nation is 28 per cent.

"This means men out of work, and when men are not employed, they can't pay union dues," he said.

FAMILY PURCHASES.

The average American family last year bought $1,000 worth of merchandise at retail, of which $125 worth was purchased on the installment plan and $875 worth was paid for in cash, according to a recent study.

NOW! Rentchlerized MEATS

Henson & Chapman are constantly seeking to improve quality and service. Now, to serve you with meats of a purity and flavor never before obtainable, we have Rentchlerized our refrigerators. This is a new, scientific method of sterilizing by means of ultra-violet radiation, just developed by the Westinghouse laboratories.

Rentchlerizing kills bacteria and molds, makes refrigerators and cases more sanitary. They can be operated at higher humidity, so that meat does not dry out and lose its natural taste and juiciness. Rentchlerized meats keep longer in the household refrigerator.

The "sterilamp" is the heart of the new system—a slender glass tube looking very much like a section of the familiar neon sign lights. That's what you see, but you taste a vast difference. Come in and let us tell you about our Rentchlerized meats.

Labor Retrenchment Not Economy

(From "The Week," in Tacoma Labor Advocate.)

When such a railroad wreck as took place over Custer creek occurs, with its sacrifice of life, it is usually customary to attribute it to an act of God. His shoulders are broad enough to take the blame. Now such accidents do not take place by God or by chance or by any fortuitous circumstance whatever. They take place because of man's lack of foresight, inspection and lack of careless regard for human safety.

And most of the roads right now are inadequately manned for proper inspection of right of way and regard for the continuous safety of those who travel over them.

There is no real economy in labor retrenchment on the permanent way—or elsewhere.

South Carolina Unions Approve Broad Program to Meet New Conditions Facing Labor

Columbia, S. C.—Adoption of new policies, to meet new conditions and responsibilities, formed the keynote of the 24th convention of the South Carolina Federation of Labor, held June 24-25, at Columbia.

This broadened approach to labor's problems, in accord with the rapid growth of the movement in the state and nation, was brought before the convention in the address of Paul J. Aymon, representing the American Federation of Labor as spokesman for George L. George, southern director of the A. F. of L., who was attending the International Labor Conference in Geneva. Speaking particularly of the textile industry, Mr. Aymon said: "We must create a new psychology among the workers for permanent unionism. We can no longer have the type of union which organizes today to strike tomorrow."

James Barrett, also representing the A. F. of L., made an eloquent appeal along the same lines.

Many Subjects Covered.

The convention, largest in state federation history, reflected this realization of broadened responsibilities in resolutions covering particularly every economic and social problem of the state and the south.

Among important actions were the following: Advocating that the civilian conservation corps be made permanent, but refusing to sanction its use for military training; instructing federation officers to cooperate with the conference of governors for equalization of southern freight rates; condemning layoffs and threatened wage cuts forrailroad workers; demanding the establishment of TVA wage rates on the Santee-Cooper project appointment of a representative of labor to the next vacancy on the Santee-Cooper Authority; advocating legislation requiring adequate rest for bus and truck drivers and strict enforcement of the "trucking law;" urging extension of civil service to all branches of public service; strongly urginr reductions in power company rates.

Tax Study Ordered.

The creation of a standing committee of three was ordered to study the effect of "punitive and discriminatory taxation" upon living costs and employment.

Support of labor's participation in the campaign for civilian relief in China was strongly indorsed.

After stirring debate, led by Earle Britton, president of the Columbia Federation of Labor and chairman of the state federation legislative committee, amendment of the law covering appointment of the labor commissioner was favored.

Officers Re-elected.

The proposed change would remove the clause requiring the governor to appoint one of three nominated by the state federation. "Let the governor assume the full responsibility for the selection of the man. The governor and not ourselves will then be responsible for his performance," declared Chairman Britton.

President Aloysius Flynn, Charleston; Vice-President Whitted, Spartanburg, and Secretary Fred Hatchell, Columbia, were reelected.

Take It or Leave It

Points of View Picked Up From Various Sources
CY KOLOGY, EDITOR

Stock market boils upward. Wall Street casts off its mantle of gloom, dries its tears and actually smiles. Brokers and their satellites have something to do beside manufacture and spread anti-Roosevelt jokes and quips. Washington officialdom exudes optimism and beams approvingly on talk that the bottom of the depression has been reached. The bottom has been enthusiastically welcomed more than once since the present slump began, some 17 months ago. But heretofore the bottom has been just another step downward. Now, "at long last," to use the expression popularized by a prominent ex-king, available facts seem to point more strongly to the end of depression than heretofore.

* * *

Nation has been fooled before on the end of depression and may be this time. In any case, all the "experts" and "authorities" think the upward climb will be slow. That means there will be no immediate rush to open factory gates. Unemployment is still the country's biggest problem and the total of jobless may be even larger before the summer is over.

Reports from industrial centers all over the nation continue to tell of shutdowns, wage cuts and other evidence of depression. The whole picture indicates that the boys at Washington who "planned prosperity" did a job far from perfect.

* * *

One of the bright spots in the industrial picture is the way the old line A. F. of L. unions continue to make progress despite depression handicaps.

The Cherry Tree has mentioned this before. It can stand a lot of mention, however.

Bakery Workers' International union is one of the outstanding organizations in bettering the conditions of its members. From coast to coast, the bakers have renewed contracts covering 50,000 workers, with wage increases of from 5 to 15 per cent. That's going some, in these hard times.

* * *

Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes is another union that has been going places. Since last fall, when business plunged downward, union workers on only three traction operations have taken pay decreases. Eighty-four out of 115 agreements made with employing companies have called for increases in pay. And in no instance has there been a strike.

"Through negotiation or arbitration," says the Union Leader, of Chicago, "thousands of dollars have been added to the incomes of Amalgamated association members in times like these, without the loss of one day's work or a minute's interruption of service to the public."

This record requires no comment.

* * *

Railroads are spending less on maintenance. That is bad news for the public, workers and railroads themselves. For a number of years, American railroads have made fine records for safety in carrying passengers and have cut down accidents among employes. They can't keep up the good work if they let equipment deteriorate. The disastrous wreck on the Milwaukee road in Montana, followed a few days later by a lesser wreck on the same road, is ominous of what is happening. Part of wisdom for the railroads is to strain every resource to keep equipment up to standards which have brought such good results in the recent past.

Q.—How far away can thunder be heard?

A.—Thunder never has been heard unmistakably more than about 20 miles from the flash.

BURSON LOWRY PLAYS JOKE; JOKE BOUNCES BACK AT HIM

Fellow Movie Operators Make Life Miserable Kidding Him About Being a "Sucker."

It happened like this:

Burson likes to play practical jokes on friends. His friends like to hook him when they can, too.

Burson got hold of a letter from that offered jobs to people to go on a temperance lecture tour. to act on the platform as a "horrible example." Friend Lowry thought of another friend, a movie operator in Mobile, Ala., named R E Morris—so he proceeds to send friend Morris the following letter, signed by "Rev. Paul W. Hallock."

Dear Friend:

"No doubt you have heard of me and my great work in the cause of TEMPERANCE. For several years I have been traveling about the country appearing on the lecture platform. Perhaps you are familiar with some of my better known talks, such as "Down With the Drink Evil," "Rum and Rebellion," and "There Is No Booze in Christianity."

BURSON LOWRY

"For the past three years I have had as my constant companion, a true and faithful friend, one Herman Fortescue, who used to sit with me on the platform, and I would point him out to the audience as a horrible example of the ravages of drink.

"Herman originally had a splendid background and was a man of fine education and family connections. During the years when he should have given thought to the moulding of his character he developed an insatiable appetite for rum, whisky and other strong drink. How much better he would have been had he turned to God.

"There were times when Herman's condition was pitiful. Here was a brilliant man who became a wreck of his former self. He would sit on the platform with me, drooling at the mouth and staring at the audience with blood-shot eyes.

"Unfortunately, during the winter, dear Herman passed away. A national research association has given me your name, and I wonder if you would consent to accompany me on a southern tour, to take poor Herman's place.

"Respectfully yours,
"Paul W. Hallock, D. D."

The next day a Western Union boy brought a collect telegram to Mr. Lowry. There was a small item of $3.24 to pay before he was allowed to accept the telegram. Thinking that it might possibly be official union business, Burson dug deep, put out the $3.24, and read the telegram.

Here is the telegram which Friend Morris sent to Burson on a hunch that it was Burson who was resbonsible for the first letter:

"J. B. Lowry,
"Local 259 IATSE
"Chattanooga, Tenn

"Deeply affected by death of dear Herman and you have my sincerest sympathy in your great loss (stop) Will be happy to accept your offer to accompany you on southern tour (stop) Scale will be one hundred and ten dollars per week drooling at mouth fifteen dollars week extra plus first class transportation (stop) Deposit two weeks salary with security department of IA as bond (stop) Send advance for transportations necessary to join you (stop) Will be with you soon

"R E MORRIS"

"My Gosh," exclaimed Lowry, "he didn't have to put all those 'ands' and 'Thes' in there. I'll get him back — just wait — sputter, sputter."

Don't send Burson any more collect telegrams. He won't take 'em.

Puerto Rican Employers Oppose Wage-Hour Law

Washington.—The extent to which "prosperity" for certain lines of business in Puerto Rico is linked to low wages for Puerto Rican workers was revealed in a radiogram received by President Roosevelt from four industrialists in San Juan claiming that the application of the federal wage and hour act recently passed by congress would result in a "serious embarrassment and grave economic disturbances." Embroidery industrialists in the United States recently told Gov. Blanton Winship that the minimum wage of 25 cents an hour, which under the law becomes effective the middle of next October, would result in wiping out a $9,000,000 needlework business with Puerto Rico.

The protest to President Roosevelt was signed by officials of the Puerto Rican Farmers' association, Bankers' association, Industrialists' association and Sugar Producers' association.

The Dutch let in the ocean 364 years ago to end the siege of their town Leyden by the Spaniards; and it may be that the Chinese let in the Yellow river to end the drive of the Japanese.

Special Upholsterers' Convention Is Held to Consider Problems Arising Out of the Depression

Cincinnati.—Organization, employment and other urgent problems arising out of the present depression were considered at a special convention of the Upholsterers', Furniture, Carpet, Linoleum and Awning Workers' International Union of North America opening here on June 27. The depression has hit workers in the furniture and allied industries particularly hard, President Sal B. Hoffmann, of the union, said.

At the regular convention of the international union last June it was announced there were 112 affiliated local unions with a membership of about 20,000. President Hoffman announced here that the organization is now composed of 148 affiliated local unions with a membership of 32,250.

The convention gave consideration to proposals which are calculated to help bring about stabilization in the industry so as to rase the wage levels and increase consumer demand. Union officials point out that one of the hindrances to the prosperity of the industry has always been the excessively high price mark-up by many of the furniture retailers, which has acted as a deterrent to volume sales.

Proposals were made to hold regional conferences for the purpose of establishing uniform wage scales throughout the industry and to bring about a general lowering of the sales price of furniture to the consumer. It is calculated that the profits from increased turn-over will more than justify the lowering of sales prices and at the same time will mean an increase in the volume of work in the manufacturers' plants.

Another subject dealt with by the special convention is the present chaotic situation due to a number of international unions organizing in the furniture field. President Hoffman said that the Upholsterers' International union is by far the largest and the attempts of other organizations in the same area merely confuse the workers and prevents thorough organization of the industry.

IN THE NEWS
ROBERT E. HEALY

Robert E. Healy, member of the Securities and Exchange commission, is a walking illustration of the power of environment over heredity. His name is a lot more Irish than that of De Valera. His features were hewn out of the granite rock of Vermont, where he was born.

Healy is one member of the SEC whom no Washington newspaperman ever had any doubts about. They knew him as chief counsel of the FTC in the long investigation of the utility industry. They saw and heard him build up, bit by bit, what is not merely an indictment of the utility magnates, but their conviction in the court of public opinion. They heard and saw him trace the write-up in case after case; till in some of the Duke power companies, there was two or three times as much write-up as actual investment.

Understanding figures as well as an accountant, always quiet of speech and never yielding a point, Robert Healy was a mighty help in making that investigation the classic that it is.

He was born in Vermont fifty-five years ago; and was admitted to the bar when 21 years old. He was an associate justice of the supreme court of the state. He is a Catholic and a republican.

Judge Rules Pickets Out After Labor Board Acts

Philadelphia.—Judge Oliver R. Dickinson, of the federal district court here, has ruled that the anti-injunction law, generally known as the Norris-LaGuardia act, does not apply in a case where the NLRB has taken charge. Therefore, he has issued an injunction to restrain four A. F. of L. unions from picketing the Union Premier Food Stores, Inc., operating stores in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Dalaware.

The unions are the Retail Clerks International Protective association, Retail Food Clerks' and Managers' union, Storage Warehouse Employes' union and Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen.

The unions mean to appeal the case immediately to the Third circuit court of appeals, fourteen of whose rulings were reversed by the supreme court in its last term. However, since three of the hard-shells on that Third circuit court have resigned, the unions feel that they have an even break.

What the NLRB will do has not been stated, but it is not expected to accept calmly Judge Dickinson's ruling.

A. F. of L. GOES ON THE AIR:
First "Labor Parade" Program On 55 Radio Stations About July 10

Wage-Hour Bill Dramatized As Leading Feature

Senate Ratification of ILO Treaties, Musicians' Convetion, Among Other Events Re-Enacted, Dramatized Labor News.

Washington. — The American Federation of Labor's first radio broadcast will be broadcast over more than fifty-five American radio stations on or about July 10. The transcriptions were shipped this week to stations which have agreed to broadcast the federation's series of thirteen programs.

In the initial recording the wage-hour bill is featured in dramatic re-enactment of the whole story of the measure, just signed by the president. Importance of this measure can only be guessed at thus far, but it is sure to have an effect throughout the nation.

Green in Star Part.

President William Green has the star part of the program to himself. He is the only character portrayed by the original. All other characters are impersonated.

President Green speaks in behalf of labor-employer cooperation in an episode dealing with his plea to American business to join in mutual recognition of rights and mutual advancement.

There is a humorous highlight in the program, but the humor serves to drive home a point. It concerns a union label fish.

Transcription Rings Bell.

Those who have had opportunity to "preview" the program are enthusiastic in their praise of the transcription. It is of the highest quality in every respect and is intended to show the A. F. of L. as it is, in its role as protector of the workers and as agency for social progress.

Central bodies in communities where stations have agreed to broadcast the federation's programs have been notified and have been given the name of the station. They are urged by President Green to appoint committees to support the station by increasing the listening audience.

Information Gladly Furnished.

Central bodies which have not received such letters have opportunity to call on their radio stations in an effort to secure agreement to use the program. It is being accepted by stations on a sustaining or non-commercial basis.

The program is prepared and produced for the federation by Chester M. Wright and associates, Carpenters' building, Washington, D. C. Either they, or President Green, it is announced, will gladly furnish central bodies or radio stations with any desired information.

San Diego First City to Have Fish With Union Label.

San Diego, Cal.—Butchers' Local Union No. 229 ordered labeling machinery to put a union label on all fish, to signify the fish have been caught, shipped, butchered, delivered and sold by union workmen. The labeler is in the form of a roller to be raked across the back or side of each individual fish. Manufacturers said the San Diego butchers request for a "fish labeler" was the first demand for such an order in their history and it is believed San Diego is the first city in the country to have union label fish.

Railroads and Unions To Confer July 20 On Proposed Pay Cuts

Chicago.—Representatives of 18 railroad unions and of the railroad management have agreed to confer on the proposed wage cut in this city on July 20. George M. Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives' association, made the announcement. The Pullman Conductors and the Train Dispatchers are not affected by the proposed cut, and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen is acting separately.

Mr. Harrison pointed out that the general conference could not be held until local consultations between men and managers, and that one-third of these were still to come.

Brotherhood officials insist that they will resist any wage cut.

Illinois Labor Double-Crossed On Sales Tax Law, Says Chicago Federationist, Demanding Repeal

Chicago.—Charging that "organized labor was double-crossed at Springfield" because urgently needed relief moneys are not now available in a state fund raised by special sales tax which labor was asked not to oppose on the ground of emergency relief, Charles F. Wills calls for repeal of the tax in a signed article in the Federation News, official publication of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

Recounting that organized labor throughout the country has strongly opposed the sales tax as being an unfair levy and because it was most burdensome upon the consumer making small purchases, Wills writes:

"However, labor was asked to withdraw its objection; that there were people starving and that the only method which would provide immediate relief was the sales tax. The Chicago Federation of Labor went on record as withdrawing its objection with the understanding that the tax was for the purpose of providing for relief funds.

"Labor Double-Crossed."

"Organized labor was double-double-crossed at Springfield. The tax is being used for general purposes. This tax was put over on the city of Chicago, but when we demand what we have paid into these funds, we are advised to economize. What does that mean? Well, economy and wage reduction are identical. No other method has ever been offered than to cut wages."

Wills pointed out that when the Chicago City council protested against increasing property taxes to aid relief needs it asked the state to use the whole of the sales tax fund for the purpose. One alderman is said to have reported a balance of $37,000,000 in the state [illegible] fund after relief disbursements had been made. The tax had raised $80,000,000.

"The Federation News advises that organized labor enter their protest against the misuse of the sales tax and further urges that steps be taken to bring about an early repeal," the article concludes.

New Jersey Comments.

Trenton, N. J.—President L. P. Marciante, of the New Jersey State Federation of Labor, commented on the Chicago situation as follows: "That sounds like a situation we had in New Jersey in 1934 when a sales tax was passed by the state legislature but was so vigorously opposed immediately that a special session of the legislature was called and the whole tax repealed only a few months after it went into effect. Organized labor helped in the repeal campaign. Also it simply points out one more reason why seven state federations of labor already have appointed special tax study committees to watch these special taxes and sound an alarm for labor when the taxes are unfair to labor's interests."

UNION HOSIERY DRIVE.

Charlotte, N. C.—The American Federation of Hosiery Workers will open its organizing campaign in the south July 1, Roy Lawrence, director, announced here. North Carolina headquarters probably will be in Charlotte, he said.

Three More States Soon to Pay Job Insurance Benefits

Washington.—With Iowa, Michigan and South Carolina making final preparations for launching their unemployment benefit programs on July 1, the social security board announced that the addition of these benefits will make unemployment insurance fully effective in twenty-eight states. The remaining states will enter the benefit-paying stage later this year and in the early months of 1939, so that by July of next year, all states will have begun payments.

More than $1300,000,000 in benefits had been distributed to unemployed insured workers by June 1 in the twenty-five states where benefits are now payable. Approximately 16,744,000 workers are covered by unemployment insurance these states and it is estimated that somewhat more than 2,000,000 covered workers will be added in the three states soon to begin payments: Approximately 307,000 in Iowa, 1,500,000 in Michigan, and 225,000 in South Carolina. The total coverage of unemployment insurance legislation throughout the country, that is, the number of workers who earned credits toward benefits in 1937 under the unemployment insurance laws of the forty-eight states, the District of Columbia, Alaska and Hawaii, is estimated at 25,500,000.

On July 1, the benefit payment programs of Iowa, Michigan and South Carolina will swing into action when unemployed workers who have acquired rights to benefits under the state laws begin to register for jobs and file their benefit claim at local employment offices.

U. S. COMMUNIST PARTY PART OF MOSCOW INTERNATIONAL, EARL BROWDER ADMITS

New York. — The communist party of the United States is part of the world communist movement having headquarters in Moscow, Earl Browder admitted here to a joint legislative committee.

Browder, general secretary and spokesman of the communist party of the United States was asked:

"Is that part of the communist party which exists in the United States a part and parcel of the communist international in Moscow, a worldwide organization looking to the teaching of Marx, Engels, Lenin and Stalin?"

"That is correct," he replied.

Senator John J. McNaboe, chairman of the legislative committee, read from the constitution of the communist party and said:

"This says you are required to 'abide' by any decisions of the Communist International."

"The decision is binding here only when the communist party of the United States has acted on it," Browder answered.

"Do you mean to tell us you may veto a decision of the Communist International?" the senator asked.

"That is correct."

"Have you ever vetoed one?"

"Everything we ever had to pass upon, we agreed with," said Browder.

Comment On World Events

The Securities and Exchange commission has uncovered and blocked off a scheme that bade fair to swindle thousands of persons out of hundreds of thousands—or perhaps millions—of dollars.

Two persons, Karl S. Ladner and Harry Ladner, seem to have been gathering trunks full of "worthless and obsolete" securities of corporations which have gone through receivership or reorganization. Three important companies are the old Studebaker corporation of New Jersey, the Richfield Oil company of California, and the Willys-Overland corporation. The new stocks of these companies are traded in on the New York Stock exchange. The old, obsolete stocks have no value whatsoever, but they were near enough like the modern stocks to be sold by personal solicitation.

The SEC found out about the scheme, got hold of a trunk full of these securities, and got a permanent injunction against their sale by the U. S. district court of Eastern Pennsylvania. It is trying to get hold of all the stocks, but meantime is spreading warning. The number of unsuspicious folks who have been saved from being bilked is almost numberless.

Figures have been brought before the National Education association by Dr. J. B. Maller, a research student of Columbia university, showing that the delinquency rate among children of New York has dropped more than 50 per cent in the last thirty-five years, since the children's court was founded. It is credited partly to the court itself, and partly to public and private welfare organizations.

There is nothing new about this. The great majority of juvenile offenders come from wage-earning families, from youngsters rightly called the "underprivileged class." In Chicago, they were found to be particularly frequent in families where the father's wages were too scanty to support the household, and the mother had to go out to labor, too.

In one case, juvenile offenses in one district dropped 55 per cent in a year after the opening of a boy's club; and an inspector came around to find out why the street lights had so low a mortality. But probably no other study has been so comprehensive as this one in New York.

"A boy," said one expert, "would usually rather do the right thing than the wrong thing, but he must do something." And it is true.

When it becomes known that the General Council of the International Federation of Trade Unions had rejected the application of the Russian "trade unions" for affiliation by a vote of 16 to 4, it did not come as a surprise to those who kept informed of the negotiations. The international has had too much experience with the dictatorship to permit it to do on the inside what it has been trying to do from the outside for twenty years—capture or destroy the international.

Moreover, the Russian "unions" are no more unions than are similar organizations in nazi Germany and fascist Italy. They are organs of the dictatorship ruledd by communist commissars. Their promised fight for democracy has the same value as Earl Browder's. Both have the value of a plugged nickel. That the British labor party has taken a similar course was also to be expected.—The New Leader, New York City.

COPPERHILL AFL MEMBERS RECEIVES COMMENDATION FROM TENNESSEE FEDERATION

Offers Help to Local Union Whenever Called Upon in Telegram Sent to Meeting in Session.

Copperhill, Tenn.—Members of the A. F. of L. local union here were greatly encouraged Saturday night upon receipt of a telegram from President Gerald Foley and Secretary-Treasurer T. R. Cuthbert, of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, pledging support to the A. F. of L. union here. The executive council of the Tennessee Federation was holding a meeting in Knoxville Saturday and Sunday, and the following message was received by the Copperhill union from the federation officials:

"Executive board of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, meeting in Knoxville, manifests the federation's interest in your problems by discussing them and deploring the continued delay on the part of the national labor board. The federation admires your brilliant fighting spirit and is grateful for your loyalty to the ideals of America's only legitimate labor movement. This board stands ready to aid your local union at any time you may call upon us.

"Gerald Foley, President.
"T. R. Cuthbert, Secretary."

Reference to the delay of the national labor board concerned the fact that, although the workers here held an election on March 18, which was won by the American Federation of Labor against the CIO, the labor board has not as yet certified the A. F. of L. as the bargaining agency. Workers here cannot understand the inexcusable delay on the part of the national labor board.

President Signs Measure Dealing Another Blow At Strikebreaking

Hyde Park, N. Y.—President Roosevelt has signed the Byrnes bill making transportation of strikebreakers across state lines a felony. Violation of the act is punishable by a fine of $5,000 or by two years' imprisonment.

Railroads and other common carriers are exempted. The men who hire and pay for the transportation of strikebreakers are the ones aimed at.

The bill was introduced by Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, to remedy a weak point in his earlier bill, enacted in 1936.

What Next?

A new use for sulphur dioxide gas in the destruction of grain field weeds is reported to have given highly encouraging results in experiments by Freeport Sulphur company. Gas is generated in a simple burner on a truck, and released under a large trailing "blanket."

Q.—Is the coffee table a modern invention in furniture?

A.—Yes. They were not used before the modern era.

State Labor Head Opposes Law Prohibiting "Sit-Down"

Shreveport, La.—E. H. Williams, president of the Louisiana Federation of Labor, said recently that while the American Federation of Labor is opposed to sit-down strikes it does not favor legislation to make them unlawful. "The American Federation of Labor," Williams said, "does not countenance or approve sit-down strikes. We are rather apprehensive over legislation which is designed to make such action illegal. We are fearful lest such legislation might contain sections which would prevent labor from exercising its normal and legal activities.

"We are opposed to any kind of legislation which interferes with picketing. It is our opinion that we must deal with the sit-down strikes question in some other way. We must find the way to prevent sit-down strikes rather than resort to legislation in an effort to do so."

Drastic Injunction Hits CIO Unions

New York City.—A drastic injunction, restraining two CIO unions from picketing Busch Jewelry company plants "in any manner," has been issued by Supreme Court Justice Salvatore A. Costillo.

The judge declared that the two unions have been guilty of threats, obstruction, propaganda and coercion toward the jewelry company, and that the state anti-injunction act of 1935 does not forbid an injunction in this case.

The unions are United Retail Employes, Local 830, and United Optical Workers, Local 208. Attorneys of the unions are planning to appeal, but the court of appeals will not be in regular session until fall.

Labor Members in Canadian House Denounce Government Tear Gas Attack on Vancouver Jobless

Ottawa.—A storm was raised in the house of commons when labor members denounced the Canadian government for using tear gas bombs to drive unemployed single men from the postoffice and art gallery in Vancouver, British Columbia.

For a month several hundred unemployed had been allowed sleeping space in these public institutions while daily they asked the government of Canada and British Columbia to provide work for them. When the ministers of justice ordered their eviction by the mounted police the young men asked that they be arrested and taken before the courts. This request was answered by a bombardment of tear gas bombs.

Government Terrorism Hit.

C. Grant MacNeil, laborite for North Vancouver, and a wounded war veteran, told the commons: "As a result of the policy of terrorism employed so unnecessarily by the Dominion government, 36 persons are in the hospital, numerous others need medical treatment, and 21 persons are in jail for no other crime than that of trying to call attention to intolerable conditions—conditions which we have repeatedly brought to the attention of the government."

J. S. Woodsworth, leader of the co-operative commonwealth party, sharply contrasted the treatment meted out to the unemployed single men with the government's complacent attitude to industrial magnates.

Exploiters Sheltered, He Says.

"In justice Turgeon's report on the textile industry," he said, "we have a shameful, sickening story of heartless exploitation, of wholesale robbery by men prominent in the public life of Canada. Inordinate greed, barefaced lying, and criminal fraud characterizes the career of this gang of high-class crooks. And yet this gang is sheltered within the protection of our tariff laws. The government recognizes that these men have evaded the tax laws, but has not taken criminal action against them."

Mr. Woodsworth pointed out that the unemployed had done no damage except wearing away public buildings by sleeping in them and had not resorted to any violence.

Wire Twisters

Plans are now being made for Local 175's annual picnic—Saturday, July 30. Brother Matheny is chairman of the committee. The place will be announced at next meeting, July 20. All the brothers are requested to be present so that a report can be made as to how many to plan for. We want to have plenty of eats and everything that goes with the regular kind of a picnic that 175 puts on.

Transportation will be furnished for all who haven't any way to get out.

All the brothers who were working at Pickwick dam have returned home.

W. B. Dyche used to be the official chicken-raiser for the local—says he is taking a year off this season.

Local 175 voted to contribute $10.00 to the home fund for Mrs. Samuel Gompers and also $5.00 for Brother Clare Killen's monument at Norris lake.

W. L. Cooper attended the races at Churchill Downs—guess he put two dollars down he didn't pick up again.

I was amused at the city hall the other day when I overheard two girls just talking their heads off in "pig latin"—something I hadn't heard for nigh on to thirty years.

Something of interest is being worked out in the local now, so that if a member is sick or disabled his dues will be taken care of with probably some kind of insurance plan. So be at the next meeting and give your ideas and suggestions.

I am trying to write these notes and listen to the Lookouts play ball. Looks like the Lookouts will drop this game.

P. S. They did—in a big way.

A DECISION OF MUCH SIGNIFICANCE

(From the Typographical Jonrnal)

A recent decision of the United States supreme court declared unconstitutional a city ordinance which prohibited the distribution of circulars because "it strikes at the very foundation of freedom of the press by subjecting it to censorship and license." The decision asserts that "the liberty of the press is not confined to newspapers and periodicals. It necessarily embraces pamphlets and circulars."

This decision is of greater importance than to many is apparent. Those employers and city officals who have, with unnecessary force or drastic punishment, interfered with union pickets and sympathizers whose only "crime" was the distribution of circulars setting forth a union's side of a labor controversy henceforth may do so only by challenging the authority of the supreme court of the United States.

Upon too few occasions has the daily press seen fit to give equal publicity to the cause of unionists as is granted employers in times of labor differences. When union men and women attempted to use the only outlet of printed publicity left them obsolete city ordinances have been revived or new ones passed outlawing this harmless method, and police or hired stooges have manhandled the distributors in the fashion popularized by Hitler.

Pay Raise for WPA Workers Decided Boost to National Buying Power—Stock Exchange Likes Idea of Wage Cuts.

By GEORGE L. KNAPP

Washington.—Just two weeks after congress passed a wage and hour law increasing the pay of perhaps 300,000 workers the first year, Harry L. Hopkins, carrying out the expressed wishes of the president, raised the wages of about 500,000 unskilled workers on the WPA.

Do not think for a moment that the WPA raise overtops the wage-hour raise. This is one place where counting noses doesn't work. The wage-hour bill, while almost no one is fully satisfied with it, is one of the most important measures passed in the last five years. But the WPA raise adds about $5 a week to the buying power of half a million relief workers NOW; and that is well worthwhile.

The WPA raise is distinctly southern. Starting with Virginia, it goes down the coast to Florida and over the gulf to Texas, with Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas and Oklahoma inland. Mr. Hopkins says that the new wages are still inadequate.

And in every anti-new deal newspaper, this increase is played up as being in some fashion or other linked up with the coming primaries.

* * *

The New York Stock exchange, according to all dispatches the other day, believes that the chance of a big corporation demanding a wage cut for its men ought to make the stock market boom.

A story goes out, no one seems to know how, that officials of the U. S. Steel corporation had promised not to ask a cut in wages to balance the cut in steel prices. Edward Stettinjus, chairman of the Board of U. S. Steel, denied this, saying: "No official of the United States Steel corporation has given any assurances that wage reductions will not follow the steel price reductions."

And this announcement, as the New York Times put it, "brought immediate recovery to a faltering market." Steel went up nearly $2 a share.

Apparently, the fellows on Wall Street think that even a possible chance of a wage cut is a sign of prosperity.

Steel Strike Hearings Soon.

Washington.—All the investigators of the senate civil liberties committee are in the field, and hearings of testimony on the smaller steel companies and especially on the interference of the Republic and Youngstown Steel companies with the organization of their workers are expected to begin by the middle of July.

The PWA has helped out sixty-seven tuberculosis hospitals, with a total of 6,354 beds, at an estimated cost of $26,000,000. This must be a peculiarly vicious case of boondoggling.

One paragraph in the report of the national mediation board on the dispute between the maintenance of way employes and the Chicago Great Western Railroad company helps us to understand why strikes on railroads have been almost unknown for twelve years.

"Mediation was begun on Jan. 19, 1938. Mediation was resumed on March 4, 1938, and continued until March 10, 1938. Further mediation conferences were held April 7, 16, 21, 23 and 25, 1938. Mediation was again resumed June 13, 1938, and under date of June 14, 1938, a mediation agreement was signed by the representatives of the parties to the dispute and witnessed by the mediator, disposing of the question involved in the invocation for the services of the boad."

Patience and perseverance, like dogged as does it, if at first you don't succeed, try, try again—the national mediation board must have a closet full of such mottoes—and the blamed things seem to work.

Power Prexy Urges Workers To Join Union

Georgia Power Company Believes Utility Aided by Union Recognition.

Atlanta, Ga.—Jerome Jones, editor of the Atlanta Journal of Labor and dean of labor editors in the south, emphasizes the important statements made recently by President Arkwright, of the Georgia Power company, who was speaking to his organized workers in the Macon district. Under the caption "President Arkwright Remarks," Editor Jones says:

"The Journal of Labor in its issue of June 17 gave front page prominence to the utterances of President Arkwright concerning the attitude of his company toward organized labor. We trust we may be allowed here to repeat some of his remarks for purposes of emphasis. Taking advantage of his presence with the electrical workers of the Macon division he asked the privilege of refuting a rumor that he objected to employes of his company joining labor unions. Please note this statement from one of the greatest industrial leaders in the electrical industry in this country:

"'Far from objecting to workers of my company being organized, I am wholeheartedly in favor of it. I believe men can do more for their own interest and more for my company's interest if they are banded together in a strong union. If my work was the sort that gave me the choice of being a member of a strong union or a non-union man, I would join the union without a moment's delay.'"

After breathing a prayer that every industrial leader might see the light as he has seen it, let us pass on to another meaty statement of his: "And when I say 'strong union,' I reach the whole heart of the matter. I want unions—in my company at least—to represent all of the workers in their particular trade or craft, not just a few of them. When I deal with representatives of a union, I want to feel that I am talking to representatives of all the men, every one of them, who work at the particular job represented. Then I know where my company stands and the men all know where they stand."

Now that every loyal union man has uttered a loud "Amen" to this statement let us find in the last paragraph a bit of good advice which every worker ought to take personally to heart. Mr. Arkwright says: "If I worked at a craft that was organized—such as the electrical workers, for example—I would want to belong to that union and take an active part in all of its work. I would want my own interests looked after through my properly appointed representatives because, otherwise, there would be nobody to plead my case and see that I was getting fair treatment, fair play and fair working conditions."

Now, pull out your union card and take a good look at it. Don't you feel just a little prouder of it? Don't you feel that you just must be a little more loyal to the things for which it stands."

MILLER ENDORSEMENT PASSES TWO READINGS IN CENTRAL LABOR UNION SESSION

Absolutely Perfect Labor Record Recognized—Must Pass Third Reading Next Meeting to Be Final.

Judge L. D. Miller, indorsed by many local AFL unions in Chattanooga, was considered by Central Body last Monday evening for an indorsement on request of those unions.

According to the laws of the Central Body, a committee appointed to investigate the candidate made its report, which indicated that Judge Miller had a perfect labor record and deserved the indorsement.

On a secret ballot the recommendation was passed for the first two readings by over three-fourths majority.

Final action must be taken next meeting of Central Labor union.

"Busy Bee" Is Not So Busy

The Busy Bee sandwich shop at No. 13 East Seventh street has slipped from the "straight and narrow" and has been placed on the nonunion list by the culinary workers, according to officials of Local 574.

The 1937 contract with this restaurant has expired and the management has failed to sign one of the present contracts. After much negotiation with the management, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Mitchell, without satisfactory results, the house card has been removed and the cooks' and waiters' organization ask their union friends and sympathizers not to patronize this nonunion house until the owners see fit to have the card returned.

A device which automatically times telephone calls has been developed in the Bell Telephone laboratories, so that telephone operators will no longer have to watch the clock.

Pennsylvania High Court Voids 44-Hour-Week Law

Harrisburg, Pa. — The supreme court of Pennsylvania decided that the 44-hour week law passed by the last session of the state legislature violated the state constitution. The law conferred upon the secretary of labor and industry authority to exempt, after appropriate hearings, certain industries from the provisions of the law. The supreme court held that this power to grant exemptions was a delegation of legislative authority expressly prohibited by the state constitution. The text of the law made it effective the 1st of January, but it was never enforced due to the action of long-hour employers in challenging its constitutionality.

"COALITION TICKET" FAVORED AS BROWNING CRITICIZED BY BROTHERHOODS, FEDERATION

Congressional Races Left Alone—To Be Decided by "Home Folk" in Different Districts.

The Tennessee Non-Partisan committee, composed of three delegates from the Tennessee Federation of Labor, one from the Railroad Telegraphers and four from the four railroad transportation brotherhoods, met in Nashville last Saturday to look over the records of candidates in the field.

Every action taken by the committee was unanimous with the exception of the United States senate race, wherein Mr. Tom Stewart was indorsed by a vote of eight to one, Senator Berry receiving one vote.

Gov. Browning was severely criticized, and the indorsement was given to Mr. Prentice Cooper, while Mr. W. D. Hudson was given the nod for utilities commission.

The committee decided to make no indorsements in the various races for congressmen.

Depression No Bar to Bakers' Progress

New Contracts Signed Covering 50,000 and Raising Pay From 5 to 15 Per Cent.

Chicago.—Despite "recession" and general talk of wage cuts by employers in this country, local affiliates of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers International Union in cities and towns from coast to coast have renewed contracts covering approximately 50,000 workers, without serious trouble, with increases in wages of from 5 per cent to 15 per cent.

A 40-hour week is guaranteed in virtually every contract and in no pact does the work week exceed 44 hours. Time and one-half is paid for overtime.

This A. F. of L. affiliate continues to march forward in different branches of the baking industry and in all sections of the country, and with close to 90,000 workers in its membership, finds itself in the best position in its history to be of service to all workers that come under its jurisdiction.

Gains in South and East.

Throughout the east the Bakers' International has succeeded in establishing contractural realtions with the principal firms in the baking industry.

Penetration of the deep south, long known for its anti-union attitude, has been accomplished. In New Orleans, La., contracts with wholesale bakeries, involving more than 400 workers, have been signed after a serious strike, during which representatives of the A. F. of L. and the New Orleans central labor body rendered valuable service. Also, big bakeries in several communities in Texas have lined up with organized labor.

Omaha Bakeries Sign.

In Omaha, Neb., the Continental, Geenerl, P. F. Petersen and Shultz baking companies have signed a union pact affecting about 700 employes.

After a strike of short duration, six major plants in San Diego, Cal., in the center of another section of the country long known as solidly anti-union, have signed a pact with Local No. 315, under which increases of $2 to $18 a week and reductions in working hours of as high as 20 a week were obtained.

St. Louis Dairy Union Wins Higher Pay Pact

St. Louis, Mo.—The Milk Wagon Drivers and Inside Dairy Workers Union here, an A. F. of L. affiliate, won a compromise agreement with two St. Louis dairies, controlled by the National Dairy Products company, of New York, following a six-hour strike. Five hundred employes were benefited by the settlement. It was stated the agreement would affect 45 concerns.

Inside workers received a blanket wage increase of $1.60 a week. They had been paid $18.50 to $26.40 a week. Drivers were continued at the old scale of $39 a week and commissions, but the companies agreed to assume additional credit responsibilities. The work day for drivers on special delivery wholesale routes was reduced from ten to eight hours, and three to ten days will be added to inside workers' vacations with pay.

The Czechoslovaks have held their Sokol festival in Praha as coolly as if Herr Hitler didn't exist.

Strikebreakers Raid Knox Labor Temple Friday

Strikebreakers, hired by the Knoxville Cab company, operators of Jolly and Yellow Cabs, maintained a perfect record of vandalism and sabotage of honest labor Friday evening when they attacked the C. L. U. labor temple on Morgan street in Knoxville, Tenn.

Bearing unidentified thugs, armed with blackjacks, clubs, etc., three Yellow cabs came into the temple vicinity while two or three union meetings were in progress. The human cargo was disgorged and the hirelings of the company advanced on the building, hurling bricks, stones and other missles to smash windows, and damage automobiles of unionists that were parked nearby. An iron pipe, thrown into the building by one of the strikebreakers, struck and painfully injured Sim Matthews, member of the Carpenters' and Joiners' local union.

The outrageous attack on the property of union labor was reported to Mayor Mynatt with a request for an immediate and thorough investigation. A conference between labor officials and the mayor has been arranged for Saturday afternoon.

Repair Loans Made for 1,500,000 Homes Under Program of Federal Housing Administration

Owners of Private Capital Lend Over $600,000,000 on Notes Insured by the Government, Thus Avoiding All Risk of Loss by Investors.

Confronted in the summer of 1934 with the nation-wide refusal of banks and other money-lending institutions to meet the demand for loans for modernizing and repairing homes, small business establishments and institutional properties, the United States congress passed a law authorizing the Federal Housing Administration to induce the owners of private capital to enter this field by means of a plan of government insurance of the loans, which it was believed would materially relieve unemployment in the housing field.

The lack of risk persuaded private capital to advance the funds for these loans with so much alacrity that up to April 1, 1937, when the loans were temporarily stopped by congress, the Federal Housing Administration, according to Stewart McDonald, FHA administrator, had insured 1,451,000 notes amounting to more than $560,000,000. On Feb. 3, 1938, the plan was restored and liberalized under amendments to the national housing act. Since then 92,000 loans, amounting to $44,000,000, have been insured by the FHA, and the present rate of insured loans is more than $4,000,000 weekly.

It is interesting to note that residential units represent about 90 per cent of the loans, the owners of more than 1,500,000 homes having taken advantage of the government's modernization plan. The remaining 10 per cent of the total was represented by small business establishments and institutional properties.

Mr. McDonald pointed out that under the plan as provided in the amendment, borrowers may obtain amounts up to $10,000 to repair or improve existing structures and amounts up to $2,500 for the erection of new structures. Repayment of the loans for modernization and repair work may be spread over five years and loans for the erection of new structures for residential use over a period of seven years.

The purchase of machinery and equipment under the new amendment is limited to that which becomes a part of the structure, such as plumbing, heating plants and similar improvements. Individual borrowers, however, are permitted to make any type of structural repair, additions and alterations to home, farm, business, commercial, industrial and instittuional property.

Collective Bargaining Not Only Aim Of National Labor Relations Act, Witness Tells NLRB Hearing

By JOSEPH A. WISE.

CHICAGO.—Opposing the position taken by the American Newspaper Guild that "collective bargaining" is the central idea, the chief purpose, the crux of the national labor relations act, Victor A. Olander, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, while on the witness stand testifying as an expert for the American Federation of Labor at recent National Labor Relations Board hearings in Chicago, declared that "some very grave errors may be made" if the NLRB upholds the position taken by the guild.

Mr. Olander testified under oath, in part, as follows:

"For many years the American Federation of Labor sought to organize the newspaper writers. It did succeed in bringing into existence some local trade union in a few cities, like Boston, and I think there was one in Philadelphia.

News Laws Aided Orfianization.

"Then came the national industrial recovery act with Section 7-A that gave to the workers everywhere a greater opportunity than they had ever had before to organize with safety, without opposition on the part of employers, as [illegible] years, and that at the [illegible] beginning with Section 7-A of the recovery act, grew and the labor board [illegible] and finally the establishment of the national labor relations act, each group as the guild that had had, is the newspaper writers that had had very little opportunity to organize before—got together, first in these local unions, generally under the banner of the American Federation of Labor. That was true of the guild.

National Body Formed.

"Then these locals, having got what seemed to be a fair start, and, in the case of the guild, the American Federation of Labor, being under the impression that they were a particularly intelligent group, more capable, perhaps, than some of the less cultured laborers to operate their own affairs, they were thrown rather quickly into a national organization.

"That's where the guild originated and where it came from. This combination—this national combination—is of very recent origin in that connection.

"Now, wherever there are workers found who want to come into the A. F. of L., who have no place to come through one of the national or one of the international unions, they come in through one of the two gates that I have mentioned here, which, with the nationals and internationals, cover the whole field of working people.

Aim Is to Protect Workers.

"Well, as I understand the purpose of those sections and the act as a whole, it is to protect the workers in the exercise of their right to organize in trade unions and to carry on normal trade union activities as known and understood by congress and the world at large at the time of the passage of the act, as a means of establishing a greater degree of equality and recognition of mutual rights between the contracting groups—the employers on one side and the workers on the other—thus to diminish [illegible] elements of the sort that tend to interfere with commerce.

"As one of the means of accomplishing that end, one of the things congress provided for the [illegible] bargaining, which is being discussed at this hearing for the purpose of setting up a so-called bargaining unit.

Legal Status Is Basic.

"Now we have arrived at what to me is an extremely difficult phase of this procedure. Basically we are dealing with the status of the worker; that is to say, with his personal contract of service. Therefore, with the status of the worker himself in relation to his job, his employer and the law.

"Collective bargaining doesn't move a train or sew a seam. Trade unions themselves do not do it, and the act (national labor relations act) doesn't do it, groups do not do it. That is done by individuals, and all this machinery that we set up and these processes and these laws relate basically to just one thing, and that, traced to the ultimate, is the legal status of the workers, and unless that is taken into consideration in connection with activities of the sort in which we are engaged here, and such laws as the national labor relations law, some very grave errors may be made."

AFL Urges Higher Pay And Wage Slash Fight

Masses Must Have Large Buying Power If Business Is to Prosper, Survey Asserts.

Washington.—Emphasis on the necessity of organized labor using its strength both to secure increases in pay envelope contents and to prevent wage slashes featured the current issue of the monthly survey of business of the American Federation of Labor.

Reviewing business and labor conditions for the first six months of 1938, the survey said:

"It is clear that an increase in industrial production is the nation's chief economic need; equally clear that production cannot increase if buying power is cut away. With rising production unit costs will be reduced; the danger of widespread wage cutting will fade out as business improves.

"But there is still the possibility that some industry employing a large number of workers might cut wages and start off a series of wage cuts throughout industry. If this happens it would have so strong a deflationary effect as to offset the beginnings of improvement and start business into a further decline."

Business Reports Brighten Outlook.

Declaring that a number of industrial reports had recently brightened the business outlook, the survey said "it is too early to tell whether they mark a temporary or a more permanent improvement," adding:

"The railroads are still in serious difficulties with possible receiverships looming for a few roads. The downtrend of prices is not yet clearly checked. Steel and the heavy industries are still at very low levels, many operating in the red. There is still some talk of wage cuts. Although the supply of bank credit is liberal and rates low, business has not yet started to borrow.

Over Eleven Million Jobless.

"There are still 11,400,000 unemployed and workers' buying power is not increasing.

"The situation is still critical and it will probably be some time before the government spending program lifts industry to definitely higher levels.

"Union resistance to wage cuts is especially important. Union insistence on wage increases wherever industry can pay them is equally vital. This is the time for union cooperation to save costs."

No Time to Cut Wages, AFofL Survey Says

Washington, D. C.—The American Federation of Labor monthly survey of business gives a much needed kindergarten lesson to business on the value of high wages. After reciting the terrific unemployment, it says:

"Fortunately for business, however, the wage level has been firmly held, and there have been almost no wage cuts except in cases of actual distress, or among those few employers who pretend distress to impose unjustifiable wage reductions.

Higher Pay "Lifting Force."

"The higher wage level brought about by increases in the first nine months of last year has been a basic lifting force and has unquestionably shortened the period of business recession.

"The fact that workers' total income in spite of increased unemployment, has been only 9 per cent below last year has made it possible for retail stores, wholesalers and jobbers to sell off the large inventories of goods they accumulated last year. Business observers agree that these large inventories have been a chief cause of the drastic cuts in production and the decline of business generally."

"Situation Still Critical."

The survey closes with the plain warning:

"The situation is still critical and it will probably be some time before the government spending program lifts industry definitely to higher levels. Union resistance to wage cuts is especially important; union insistence on wage increases wherever industry can pay them is equally vital.

"This is a time for union cooperation to save costs."

Biggest Economic Problem in South, President Thinks

Washington.—The south presents the nation's biggest economic problem, President Roosevelt told southern leaders and Director Lowell Mellett, of the National Emergency council. Mellett met here with twenty-five industrial, civic and labor to survey economic conditions in the southern states and their relation to the new wage-hour act.

"It is my conviction," the president wrote to the conference, "that the south presents right now the nation's number one economic problem—the nation's problem, not merely the south's. For we have an economic unbalance in the nation as a whole, due to this very condition of the south.

"It is an unbalance that can and must be righted, for the sake of the south and of the nation."

Labor representatives at the conference included Carl White, A. F. of L. representative, Port Arthur, Tex.; Miss Lucy Mason, state representative of the C. I. O., Atlanta; H. L. Mitchell, secretary-treasurer, southern Tenant Farmers' union, Memphis.

Higher Pay Demanded By Sightseeing Guides

New York, N. The strikers demanded $7 a day, which might amount to a $42.50 week, including a bonus. Union officials said employment was not steady.

Iron Workers' Head Leaves for Europe

New York City—P. J. Morrin, president of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers and editor and manager of the Trades Council Union News of St. Louis, accompanied by Mrs. Morrin, sailed on July 2 for Blackpool, England, where President Morrin will represent the American Federation of Labor as fraternal delegate to the British Trades Union congress in September.

A committee of representatives of the Iron Workers' district councils of New York and northern New Jersey tendered Morrin a "Boon Voyage" dinner and dance in Hotel New Yorker, which was attended by over 700 guests, including many notables in union labor, political, professional and business circles.

Co-delegate with Morrin to the British Trades Congress is Daniel J. Tobin, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers. They were elected at the 1937 convention of the American Federation of Labor.

Labor Is Conscripted By German Government

Universal labor conscription went into effect in Germany on July 1, in accordance with the decree of Field Marshal Hermann Goering, Nazi commissioner for the so-called "four-year plan" to secure maximum economic output. German employers working on "especially important and unpostponable orders" were instructed to file their applications for conscript labor with local labor offices.

The administration of the conscript labor law is under Dr. Friedrich Syrup, president of the Reich Institute for Labor Placement and Unemployment Insurance, who said that the conscripts will be used as much as possible in accordance with their training and capacities and that they will not become economically worse off than before conscription. Employers were urged to keep all workers over 65 years of age who want to continue working.

OPERATING ENGINEERS STRIKE AT ETNA, PA.

Etna, Pa.—The Operating Engineers' union here, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, declared a strike against the Etna municipal light and water plant at the conclusion of a three-months' controversy over wages and hours.

The men involved had been working a seven-day, 56-hour week for $165 a month for engineers and $154 a month for firemen. The union demanded a six-day, 48-hour week at the same pay rate. The city council offered to grant the shorter work week if the men would accept pay cuts of $14 to $15. Ten out of twelve men refused to accept the council's terms, and were fired by the president of the council.

SOUTHERN LABOR "SPOTS"

Gulfport, Miss.—Mississippi today kept unbroken the record of southern states in having the largest conventions of state federations of labor ever held in the south, when the secretary's report showed the 1938 convention of the Mississippi State Federation of Labor has more affiliated locals and a greater number of delegates than ever before. President L. H. Jones and fellow-officers were highly elated over the increased membership as indicated in the secretary's report.

Headquarters for the convention are maintained in the Great Southern hotel. Lewis G. Hines, director of organization for the American Federation of Labor, and Paul J. Aymon, southern representative of the A. F. of L., are among the outstanding labor officials in attendance. Many international representatives are in Gulfport for the convention.

E. H. Williams, president of the Louisiana State Federation of Labor, was here for the opening day of the convention, bringing fraternal greetings from the sister federation. Because of the fact that the newsletter is sent out from the Atlanta office on Monday of each week, the proceedings of the convention cannot be included in this week's release.

Atlanta, Ga.—George L. Googe, southern representative of the American Federation of Labor, is expected to return to the A. F. of L. office here next week. He has been in Geneva, Sewitzrland, for the past several weeks, attending the International Labor Conference as a representative of the United States government, having been appointed to the post by President Roosevelt. During Mr. Googe's absence, Paul J. Aymon has been acting southern representative of the A. F. of L.

Miami, Fla.—At the regular meeting of the Building Trades council last week the reports of the business agents of the various building crafts showed that more union building mechanics are employed in Miami now than at any time during the past five years. Because the building crafts kept their membership intact throughout the period of the depression, when building operations started up again the unions had the men, and the wage scale had been maintained. Now the members of the building trades are reaping the reward for their faithful work during the dull period of the past few years.

Fayetteville, N. C.—Charter for a newly organized silk mill workers' union was installed here last week, with D. Z. Wooten, leading man among organized insurance agents, acting as installing officer. A mass meeting was held Saturday night, at which Mr. Wooten and A. M. Hughes, vice-president of the North Carolina State Federation of Labor, gave inspirational talks to the new members invited and guests.

High Point, N. C.—Charter for the newly organized central labor union of High Point will be installed Thursday night of this week, permanent officers will be named, and a campaign of organization will be immediately launched. Officers of the North Carolina State Federation of Labor will be present and assist in the installation of the charter, and it is said that delegations will come from central labor unions in Charlotte, Salisbury, Greensboro and Winston-Salem to be with the High Point unionists at the installation of the charter.

Home Owners Loan Corporation Helps One Million Families to Pay for Their Homes

Government Organization Set Up to Aid Those Facing Mortgage Foreclosures Has 750,000 Borrowers Who Are Meeting Their Payments—Interest Rate Reduced to Five Per Cent—Second Mortgage Practically Abolished.

One of the outstanding demoralizing effects of the business depression which began in 1929 was the continued victimization of wage earners and other persons of moderate means who lost their homes by mortgage foreclosures. To mitigate this distress, the United States congress in 1933 established the Home Owners Loan Corporation with authority to make loans on homes at more reasonable interest rates and less onerous conditions than were imposed by private lending concerns.

In celebrating the fifth anniversary of the establishment of the HOLC, Charles H. Jones, general manager, made public certain figures which strikingly reveal the protection which the government has given home owners. Over 750,000 borrowers from the HOLC are making satisfactory payments, he said. In addition, about 100,000 others are being aided and approximately 30,000 borrowers have paid their loans in full. A sum aggregating $200,000,000 has been paid back by HOLC borrowers, this sum representing 12½ per cent of the principal indebtedness.

Pointing out that when the HOLC entered the home mortgage field American homeseekers were pushed to their knees to completely own their properties by being required to assume not only one mortgage, but usually two and sometimes three, and that they usually paid off the second and third mortgages, with heavy fees, but renewed the first mortgage time and time again, Mr. Jones said the HOLC removed this condition by "popularizing the direct reduction plan. It introduced a 5 per cent interest rate. It helped to abolish the second mortgage. Its borrowers are becoming home owners in the complete sense. These modern contracts, all favorable to the homeseeker, have renewed the desire for home ownership."

In the field of statistics, Mr. Jones' report revealed that the HOLC has endeavored to help approximately 1,000,000 families by 900 home loans. Of these, about 620,000 have either entirely paid up their interest obligations or are less than three months in arrears. About 130,000 more are making regular monthly payments on their arrears. About 100,000 others still have a chance to save their homes.

Due to payment failures, the HOLC has been obliged to take over about 85,000 homes, the average foreclosure becoming effective only after borrowers are twenty months delinquent in both principal and interest, with taxes mounting to a point where the corporation, in protection of bondholders and taxpayers, is forced to act.

PENNSYLVANIA SUPREME COURT HOLDS 44-HOUR WEEK LAW IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL

The decision voided the major labor legislation of the 1937 state legislature and the "cornerstone" statute of Gov. Earle's "Little New Deal" administration in Pennsylvania.

Under the act no one employed in Pennsylvania industry could work more than 44 hours a week or five and one-half eight-hour days except on specific exemptions granted by the state secretary of labor and industry.

The act originally was found "unconstitutional, illegal and void" by Judge W. C. Sheely, of Adams county, sitting specially in Dauphin county court last March. The women's 44-hour law was not affected by the order. The decision was appealed to the state's highest tribunal.

The law's constitutionality first was challenged by Holgate Brothers Manufacturing company, of Kane, one of the world's largest wood specialties manufacturers. Later about 800 other employers joined in the suit. Labor organizations arrayed themselves with the state in defending the statute's legality.

The court cited two principal reasons why the act was unconstitutional. They were:

"1. It delegates to the department of labor and industry in conjunction with the industrial board the power to make law for the regulation of the hours of labor.

"2. It attempts to hand over to federal authority—whether congress, executive commission or other agency not yet appearing—plenary power to regulate working hours in Pennsylvania."

The decision was unanimous.

N. Y. Labor Official Backs Wiretapping Ban

Albany, N. Y.—Wiretapping by government officials unless it is specifically authorized by a court order was vigorously opposed by George Meany, president of the New York State Federation of Labor, in a statement here.

The question has assumed considerable importance by the introduction in the state constitutional convention, in session here, of a proposal to include in the state constitution a search and seizure amendment prohibiting the use of wiretapping against criminals except when ordered by a court of competent jurisdiction.

Declaring that organized labor in New York does not object to law-enforcement officers, charged with apprehending and punishing criminals, legally seizing or intercepting telephone or telegraphic communications, Mr. Meany said that "labor does most emphatically and uncompromisingly object to the unreasonable use of those methods without the express order of a court."

"The interest of labor in this particular subject is grave, other than its sincere desire to protect the liberties of our citizens," he added. "Labor's experience in this state, from Montauk Point to Niagara Falls, has been, in times of industrial strife, that agencies of government have come into the offices of unions, seized their books and records, and thus intimidated the workers."

He said there should be a constitutional protection against this sort of procedure.

IN THE NEWS

HARRY L. HOPKINS

Harry L. Hopkins, probably the world's greatest spender of money on anything but war, is a corn-fed product of Iowa. He was born there forty-eight years ago, raised there, educated there—so far as one is educated in school. He is rather above the middle height, with wide shoulders not encroached on by his waist, brown hair and unusually piercing brown eyes.

As a social worker, he was original enough to make Franklin D. Roosevelt as governor of New York draft Hopkins for the board of the state relief administration. As soon as the federal emergency relief act was passed, the long distance telephone called Hopkins to the White House.

"My first talk with the president lasted five minutes," says Hopkins, "and he told me just two things: first, to give quick and adequate relief to the unemployed, and second, not to pay any attention to politics or politicians." And in half an hour, he had a desk in a hallway of the RFC building and was at work.

From that time to this, he has been busy with one darned thing after another. A few items from the work of the WPA under his management may be told: 12,168 new public buildings and 46,255 miles of new highways, roads and streets, with in each case more than three times as much repairs and improvements as of new construction; 19,182 new bridges, 4,269 miles of water mains, 6,311 miles of storm and sanitary sewers; 3,330 storage dams and 15,855 dams for erosion control.

"Hunger is not debatable," says Harry Hopkins, and the basic principle of his political economy is the opposite to that of Herbert Hooper:

"Money put in at the bottom," says Hopkins, "strengthens the entire economic structure; that poured in at the top helps to make a top-heavy economy."

Right of All to Jobs Affirmed by Williams

Seattle, Wash.—The right of every worker to a job and a guarantee that if private industry fails to provide the job government projects will enter the field with work opportunities were emphasized as essential for American social progress by Aubrey Williams, deputy WPA administrator, in a paper prepared for the National Conference on Social Work and read to the social action section of the conference.

After reviewing the development of federal programs for relief of the unemployed, Mr. Williams said:

"From the point of view of social justice and economic efficiency the proper way to deal with the unemployed is for the government to provide every one with socially useful work at his regular occupation or as near as possible to it, and at his regular rate of pay.

"Under modern conditions of depressed purchasing power, this assertion of the right to work, the right to a job, is not visionary social idealism—it is simple economic realism, for it is the cheapest way to obtain full economic recovery."

Monopoly Investigation to Include Effects of Concentrated Wealth On Opportunity to Earn Living

Broad Study Now Under Way to Cover Loss of Economic Freedom and Working of Democratic Principles in Modern Industrialized Life, Says Chairman O'Mahoney.

By B. C. CLARKE

"We're not going in for any ill-considered trust-busting or to raise dust clouds about monopolistic investigation," says Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney senior senator from Wyoming and chairman of the temporary economic committee known as the "monopoly investigating committee," that has started work in Washington. The committee, made up of representatives of the house, the senate and government agencies, was authorized by the recent congress.

Senator O'Mahoney thinks the days of wielding the big stick, "muck raking," trust baiting and rambasting big business for the fun of the thing belong to an era that is gone, although a lot of the evils and problems of those trust-busting days are still with us.

"No, we are not out for just a trust-busting joy ride," he says, "because the problem or problems of today are not those of mere trust-busting. But we will hit any trusts if we find them.

Inquiry to Cover All Economic System.

"This investigation is much broader than a study of monopoly as it is traditionally known. It is a study of the transformation of the whole economic system that has been taking place, not only in the United States, but in the whole world. It is a survey to find out how well our democratic principles are functioning in the modern concentrated economic and industrial life of America."

Senator O'Mahoney admits this is a big order. "Of course it is," he asserted, "but who is there who claims that unemployment, restricted opportunity and lack of economic security for the American people are not big problems?"

The country is living in a new era, he maintains, and either does not know it or is guided by standards and rules of an age that is gone in trying to deal with its present problems.

To Study Set-Up of Political System.

"Possibly the economic system is developed far beyond the political system, and that's what we are going to find out," he says. "Maybe we have a 90-mile-an-hour industrial set-up and a 20-mile-an-hour political set-up. We want to know about that. Possibly the shifts in population and changes in occupational activities of the people have so entirely changed the whole system that methods in use today are out-moded and out of date."

There are a lot of thinks to think about, Senator O'Mahoney maintains. For instance, in 1880 the population of cities of 25,000 or more people had 17.2 per cent of the whole population, but in 1930 no less than 40 per cent of the people were living in such cities.

Among the 3,074 counties of the United States, 155 of them contain 74 per cent of all of the wage-earners and 81 per cent of all salaried employes. In these 155 counties 79 per cent of all wages, and 83 per cent of all salaries, are paid.

Interested in Curbs on Economic Power.

"We are not planning to establish big government at the expense of traditional institutions," he declares, "but we are interested in ways whereby the combined concentration of economic power and wealth can be presented from restraining or destroying economic freedom or political liberty.

"What is the biggest single question with the individual American today? It is the same question that exists in every country in the world—the guaranty of economic security.

"If we look abroad, we see the people of Russia, uneducated, turning to dictatorship and saying: 'Here, take our liberty, but give us security.' The people of Italy are turning to another type of dictatorship and saying: 'Come, take our freedom; take our democracy; take our liberty, so long as you give us security.' In Germany they are saying the same thing. We don't want that sort of thing to be said in this country."

Big City Control of Banking Seen.

Another thing that interests Senator O'Mahoney and his committee is that one-third of all bank deposits in the United States are concentrated in the two cities of New York and Chicago. Only 30 per cent of the nation's bank deposits are in country banks. This concentration has been steadily increasing, for thirty years ago the country banks had 45 per cent of the deposits of all banks.

"This simply means," asserts the Wyoming senator, "that to develop new industries of an important kind, such as oil and gas lands or mining operations or large manufacturing, the funds have to be found in New York or Chicago. That is where the individual has to go. And this growth in concentration of money and credit has been accompanied by a constant increasing use of the corporation as an agent of economic progress."

Giant Corporations Held Economic States.

With widely expanded ownership by stockholders, corporations are no longer the private enterprises that they were, he asserts, but have become endowed with a definite public interest. Giant corporations in which are concentrated so much of the mass production facilities of the country are in reality collectivist economic states, he believes. And then he gives figures,

> "Reports of the bureau of internal revenue show that 594 corporations have assets of $50,000,000 or more each and 211,000 corporations have assets of $50,000 or less. The 594 corporations constitute only .015 per cent of all of the corporations, but control 53 1/5 per cent of all of the assets of corporations. Doesn't that look like the tail wagging the dog? The 211,000 corporations have only 1.4 per cent of the assets of all corporations."

More and more, Senator O'Mahoney believes, the leaders of huge corporations are coming to realize and to say publicly that management in the big corporations is a position of trust, not only to the far-flung stockholders, but to the workers and to the public at large.

Must Encourage New Enterprises.

"What we need right now is to clear the way so that men of limited means will venture to invest their money in new enterprises," he says. "Men are not afraid to compete against men, but they hesitate to compete with corporate giants.

"There is no threat against legitimate business or legitimate business methods in this thing, but we are looking for those methods and practices on a large scale which limit the field of business opportunity, concentrate wealth and power in the hands of a limited few regardless of the needs of the mass of the people, and serve to defeat the fundamental objectives in democratic government.

"Whether those practices be in the super control of bank credit, in the concentration of mass production facilities, in the restriction of specifications for bids so that only great and vast combinations of wealth can enter bids, makes no difference.

Economic Freedom Must Be Safeguarded.

"The unemployed of cities cannot go into their own back yards and grow potatoes or gather a dozen eggs. They are dependent upon government when their savings are gone. This simply means that in the system that has grown up around us, economic freedom is more and more lost.

"No man is economically free who cannot support himself and a family, wherever he may be, by his own efforts. And when economic freedom is lost, political liberty is in danger. We propose to safeguard democracy in business as well as in government."

Long Struggle in Prospect Over Proposed Pay Cut of Rail Workers

Chicago.—Representatives of railroad managements and eighteen railway labor organizations are to meet in Chicago July 20 to begin negotiations on a proposed 15 per cent reduction in wages, which the unions have made plain they would resist with all the power at their command.

Labor organizations represented on the committee chairmaned by George M. Harrison, who heads the Railway Labor Executives association, with which the unions are affiliated, include the engineers, firemen and enginemen, railway conductors, switchmen, telegraphers, machinists, boilermakers, sheet metal workers, blacksmiths, electrical workers, carmen, firemen and oilers, railway clerks, maintenance of way employes, signalmen, longshoremen, masters, mates and pilots, and marine engineers.

The proposed cut in pay, voted by the Association of American railroads April 29, was to have taken place July 1, but action taken at this preliminary hearing automatically retains the present wage scale at least until July 30, as no action can be taken under the railroad labor act, until ten days after the conferences have been completed.

A prolonged battle over the proposed wage cut, against which railway labor is determined to make a fight to the finish, was seen, as both sides indicated the matter would be processed under the railroad labor act.

Two unions affiliated with the Railway Labor Executives association, representing the dispatchers and sleeping car conductors, are not taking part in the negotiations. The conductors are working under an agreement which has not yet expired and the dispatchers are to negotiate on a local basis.

The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen is no longer connected with the Railway Labor Executives association and is to carry on separate negotiations with the railroad managements beginning July 18. The date was set at a preliminary conference which followed the conference between the carriers and the other unions.

UNIONIST HERO NABS HOLD-UP SINGLE-HANDED

Elevator Constructor Gulley Happens Along and Acts Vigorously.

The proprietor of the Central Dining room (a union house) is glad that the Elevator Constructors' local union had a meeting last night.

As L. C. Gulley, member of Local 77, Elevator Constructors, was passing the Central Dining room, 105 East Seventh street, on his way to the meeting two waitresses ran out and yelled "Stop him" as a hold-up man was running away.

The bandit who obtained $18.30 in the hold-up at 7:30 last night was captured a few seconds later after a spectacular foot race in which he was run down by L. C. Gulley, 1803 Vance avenue.

The hold-up man, who later admitted his guilt, gave the name of Chester Sparks, 29, of Winchester, and said he came to Chattanooga three weeks ago.

Two others, charged by police with conspiring with Sparks to rob the restaurant, were later arrested. They are Foster Stubblefield, 28, painter, of 15 East Fourth street, and S. A. Hall, 32, whose address was not listed.

Sparks admitted he was the man who held up Mrs. Mae P. Davis, proprietress of the dining room, as she was preparing to close for the night. The bandit's "lookout," believed by police to have been Stubblefield, was standing outside the restaurant entrance, and the pair fled as Gulley walked down Seventh toward Cherry.

"I had just gotten off a street car at Seventh and Georgia," Gulley said. "I was going toward the union hall and just as I passed the restaurant two waitresses ran out and yelled 'Stop him.' I caught the guy with the money in an alley just off Cherry, around the corner from the dining room. His buddy ran up and knocked me loose from him, but I took out after him again and caught him on Sixth street, just behind Penney's store."

"I don't know what became of the guy's pal," Gulley said. "He ran on after hitting me. A crowd of people gathered at the second place where I caught the man with the money, and I guess they figured we were fighting."

Mr. T. H. Cuthbert, Secretary,
Tennessee State Federation of Labor,
310 West Eighth Street,
Chattanooga, Tennessee.

Dear Sir and Brother:

The fine record which Senator George L. Berry has made during the period he has served as United States Senator from Tennessee justifies me in calling upon the officers and members of the American Federation of Labor and all their friends in Tennessee to support Senator Berry in his campaign for re-election to the United States Senate.

Senator Berry is a part of the organized labor movement. He is President of the Printing Pressmen's Union, an organization chartered by and in affiliation with the American Federation of Labor. Senator Berry has been true to the membership of his organization which he has the honor to represent, and to the people of Tennessee as well, through the fine service which he rendered as a member of the United States Senate.

The officers and members of the American Federation of Labor have a special interest in the re-election of Senator Berry. We always endeavor to elect friends of the American Federation of Labor, and particularly those connected with the American Federation of Labor to legislative positions. Through the re-election of Senator Berry labor will honor itself, because his success means the election of an outstanding representative of the American Federation of Labor to the United States Senate. Labor in Tennessee will promote its economic and industrial welfare through the re-election of United States Senator Berry.

I respectfully call upon the officers and members of the American Federation of Labor and all their friends to give Senator Berry a full measure of support, to become active in his campaign for re-election, and to render all service possible all during the ensuing campaign to insure his re-election to the United States Senate.

With kind regards, I am

Fraternally yours,

W. Green

President,
American Federation of Labor.

Nashville Opens Its Public Power Campagin July 29

On July 29, at the War Memorial building in Nashville, there will be held a public mass meeting, sponsored by the TVA Power Consumers' League of Nashville, with headquarters at the Tulane hotel, to force the issue of a municipal distributing plant for Nashville and vicinity and the use of TVA electric power.

It is believed there are many people in Chattanooga interested in this matter, to the point that they will want to drive to Nashville and be present at the mass meeting. There will be a number of speakers—senators, congressmen, some officials of the TVA, judges and other prominent men who will speak on this subject.

An appropriate program has been laid out.

It is reported that over two thousand pounds of meat and no telling how many potatoes, loaves of bread, cabbages and relish were consumed, but everyone went away feeling that they had plenty.

Maryville, Tenn.—In accordance with plans adopted two weeks ago by the executive council of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, organization work among the aluminum workers here and at Alcoa is now in full swing. Organizers representing the aluminum council, the state federation of labor and the American Federation of Labor are here at work. It is believed that a splendid report of these activities will be ready for the regular meeting of the aluminum workers Saturday night.

GOVERNMENT EMPLOYMENT OF ALIENS RESTRICTED

Washington.—The legislation enacted by the recent session of congress prohibiting the employment by the United States government of aliens who had not filed their intention of becoming American citizens prior to May 23 was applied here in the dismissal from the social security board of George W. K. Grange, a British citizen who came to the United States in 1927. He was employed by the board as an actuary.

Unemployment and Industrial Accidents

By DR. CHARLES STELZLE

Executive Director, Good Neighbor League.

The decline in industrial accidents and deaths over a period of years, or the increase of such deaths and accidents during a given period, should, in general, always be considered in the light of the number of workers employed, and the number of hours worked.

Obviously, when more men are employed, there will be an increase in the number of industrial accidents and deaths. However, a chart prepared for a study made by Max D. Kassoris, of the United States bureau of labor statistics of the department of labor, shows that while there was a sharp decline in employment from 1929 to 1932, injury frequently was proportionately lower in 1929 than it was in 1932. But during the next three years, when conditions became better, the proportion of injury frequently was greater than the proportionate increase in the number of workers employed.

This is accounted for by two principal factors: first, as business conditions become worse, employers are apt to pay less attention to safety devices, and as conditions improve, inexperienced men or those who have lost their skill are re-employed, with the result that accidents are increased. Also, during periods of depression, workers, even when employed, are worried, and become careless about safety habits.

A study made in one great American industry shows that employes with less than one year's service, although consisting of only 15 per cent of the total number of the employes, had 33 per cent of all the disabling injuries in the plant, whereas those employed five years and over, and consisting of over 48 per cent of the total number of employes, had only 31 per cent of all disabling injuries—or less than one-third of the total number of accidents in the plant.

It was shown throughout, that as the number of years that a man was employed increased, the fewer were the chances that he would be injured. It is probably true that there were many more accidents than were reported during depression periods—particularly of a minor character — because the workers were afraid of losing their jobs if they reported their injuries.

It will be seen, therefore, that unemployment not only results in the well-known suffering due to poverty, but there is an increase in industrial injuries incurred when the unemployed begin to get back on the job, because of their lost efficiency, and because of their weakened mental alertness. This deterioration can be avoided only through steady employment.

Perhaps the worst effect of unemployment during the depression has been the influence it has had upon the morale of the workers. But they will not be the only sufferers—in some way we will all have to pay the price for their affliction, for no affliction can befall even the lowliest among us, without all of us being compelled to share it with them.

ST. LOUIS STRIKE TIES UP CITY BUILDING JOBS

St. Louis, Mo.—A strike involving 1,000 mechanics employed on municipal construction projects was called by the St. Louis Building Trades council as a persuasive measure to create a more sympathetic attitude on the part of city officials toward the wage demands of the unions affiliated with the council. The walkout followed a strike of the hoisting engineers employed by the city, who demanded an increase of 25 cents an hour to conform with the $1.75 and $2 paid by private contractors.

City laborers, including those employed at the city waterworks, asked for $1 a day above the present scale, which ranges from $3 to $5. Electrical workers seek a 5-cent hourly increase to the prevailing scale of $1.25. Carpenters employed in city institutions want $190 a month instead of $160. The building trades council also demanded the employment of union plumbers by the city. Officials of the council said that city plumbing jobs are now political appointments.

Employer Labor Press Advertising Not in Violation of Labor Act, NLRB Opinion Conclusively Proves

Washington.—Mendacious propaganda against employer advertising in the labor press on the ground that it violates the national labor relations act is given a body blow by an opinion by Charles Fasey, general counsel of the national labor relations board, in correspondence with labor editors and labor executives.

The opinion, with copies of explanatory correspondence, is being communicated to the labor press by Matthew Woll, president, and R. E. Woodmansee, secretary-treasurer of the International Labor Press of America.

Fahey's opinion supports a similar opinion given last year by Patrick J. Taft, legal counsel, International Labor News Service, and Chester M. Wright & Associates.

Bona Fide Ads Approved.

In reply to an inquiry by Mr. Woll, the NLRB general counsel sent a copy of a letter to Robert J. Siffrin, secretary of the Massilon, Ohio, Trades and Labor assembly. The letter, signed by Fahey as general counsel, said:

"In reply to your letter to the national labor relations board, enclosing a copy of a letter sent out by the Massilon Chamber of Commerce to its members, it is true of course that the national labor relations act prohibits financial support to unions; but the act does not prohibit the bona fide purchase of advertising space in a labor publication.

"As you know, the board does not decide cases in advance, but the bona fide purchase of advertising space is prohibited by the act and I am sure would not so decide if such a case came before it."

Opinion Clear, Says Woll.

General Counsel Fahey also sent Mr. Woll a copy of a letter to the Labor News Publishing company, Aurora, Ill., in which he said:

"I can say that in my opinion the ordinary bona fide purchase of advertising space by an employer in a paper such as yours is not a violation of the labor act."

Commenting on the opinions of the labor board's general counsel, Mr. Woll said it seemed quite definite and clear and added:

"It is to be noted that the general counsel distinguishes between 'a bona fide purchase of space' and the purchase of advertising space for a consideration or purpose contrary to the generally accepted purposes of advertising.

Propaganda Is Spiked.

"By reason of the foregoing, it is therefore safe to assume that the trade union publications and the labor papers are not prohibited from soliciting or accepting bona fide advertising from employers or others and that employers or others are not prohibited from purchasing bona fide advertising space from trade union publications and journals.

The NLRB correspondence, as sent to Woll, is looked upon by International Labor News Service as overwhelming controversion of the allegation that the labor act prevents employers from spending money in labor paper advertising.

Cannon Mills Cut Wages 10 Per Cent

Concord, N. C.—The Cannon mills, one of the largest towel manufacturing concerns in the country, has placed in effect a wage cut for "all employes." President C. A. Cannon declined to comment on the reduction, and no official statement was made other than the announcement that a pay cut had been instituted. The decreases were estimated at 10 per cent.

The appointment of Gov. Allred, of Texas, to the federal district court carries out President Roosevelt's avowed purpose of getting more young men on the federal bench. He has vowed that if he can find any help for it, he will not name any man to the bench above 60. Allred is 39.

Labor Unions Must Pay Old Age Insurance Tax

Social Security Board Warns That Penalty Is Applicable If Payment Is Not Made by July 31.

Washington.—The social security board issued a statement here calling the attention of trade unions which are employers to the fact that they are required to pay the old age insurance tax levied under the social security act, payments for the second quarter of this year being mandatory by July 31, with suitable provisions for the payment of back taxes for 1936.

"Attention, union officers!

"Has your union paid its social security taxes?

"1. Any union with one or more employes, paid officers, organizers, office assistants, committeemen, or any other employe, is liable, as an employer, for old-age insurance tax under the social security act. This tax for the quarter ending June 30 must be paid by July 31, to avoid penalty.

"2. Any union with eight or more employes (including officers paid or unpaid) is subject, as an employer, to a federal tax payable in January of each year under the unemployment compensation provisions of the social security act. Against this tax, however, the union is entitled to credit for contributions to the state unemployment fund.

"By special provision of congress, unions and other employers of eight or more who failed to pay this federal tax for 1936, and their contributions to the state unemployment fund for that same year, may do so on or before July 26, 1938, and claim their credits against the federal tax accordingly.

"Tax return blanks and all necessary information may be obtained from the United States collector of internal revenue for your district."

A. F. OF L. TIGHTENS ITS DRIVE FOR AMENDMENTS TO LABOR RELATIONS ACT

President Green Tells Glass Blowers That Administrative Defects in Wagner Act Must Be Remedied — Reiterates Determination of Labor to Achieve Remedy.

Atlantic City.—The American Federation of Labor is determined to obtain amendments to the Wagner labor relations act that will revise and stabilize its administration, declared President William Green in an address here before the sixty-seventh annual convention of the Glass Bottle Blowers' association.

The pronouncement of the federation president was deemed of especial significance in view of complaints that have been raised in recent weeks in employer circles concerning the administration of the law.

"The American Federation of Labor is responsible for the enactment of the labor relations law," said Mr. Green. "But we regret that the act has been applied in many instances in a way we never dreamed of, entirely out of accord with its spirit and letter, by those with the authority to administer it."

It is the intention of the federation, he continued, to mobilize its strength in a determined effort to amend the law in accord with the original intent.

Assertions of President Green brought to mind the outspoken objections to the mode of administering the law that were voiced in the last annual convention of the American Federation of Labor.

President Green's talk was followed by one by President L. P. Marciante, of the New Jersey Federation of Labor. He discussed the effects of technological progress in glass, wire, rubber and pottery industries upon employment and union membership.

Accurate Old-Age Insurance Reporting Saves Employers Extra Work

With employers' quarterly old-age insurance reports due Aug. 1, Louis R. Stein, Jr., manager of the social security board's Chattanooga office, today pointed out that business men can save themselves unnecessary work and help their employes get the benefits due them by avoiding errors in reporting wages.

The return covers employes' wages during April, May and June. It is the second quarterly report to be made on the new Form SS-1a put into use in 1938 in place of the three forms used in 1937. Taxes are payable at the time of filing the quarterly return. This new procedure for wage reports helps materially to simplify the work required of employers.

Ordinarily, the due date for the report is the last day of the month following the quarter for which it is filed. However, since July 31 falls on Sunday, bureau of internal revenue regulations provide that the report may be filed on the next following business day, Aug. 1.

In urging accurate reporting, Mr. Stein explained that, when the board is unable to make corrections in erroneous wage reports, the incorrect items must be returned to the employer for correction. This makes double work for the employer and also delays the posting of these wages to employes' social security accounts. Accuracy in making their wage reports will protect employers to a great extent from this extra burden.

Five common causes of inaccuracy have been found by the board in previous reports from employers:

1. Transposition of digits in typing employe account numbers.
2. Incorrect and partial names of employes.
3. Omission of account numbers for some employes.
4. Omission of employer identification numbers.
5. Illegible handwriting.

Employers' wage returns must show each employe's name and social security account number, and the amount of taxable wages paid to him during the quarter. After auditing these reports, collectors of internal revenue send them to the social security board, where wages for each employe are credited to his account by means of his name and number. The employe's benefits are based on his total wages from employment covered by the old-age insurance plan.

The names of employes should be listed exactly as they appear on employe account number cards. For this reason the employers should see that the names shown in their payrolls conform exactly with the names of their employes' cards.

In order that each employe's social security account number may be given in the wage report, employers should keep a permanent record of these numbers. If an employe fails to apply for a number, the employer is required to file an application for him. Applications may be made at Mr. Stein's office, 214 James building, or at any of the social security board's other 317 field offices located in principal cities throughout the nation.

Employers who do not have identification numbers should also apply for them at the nearest board office. In most cases, Form SS-1a, when sent to the employer, bears his identification number. If it does not, and the employer has been notified of his number, he should enter it beside his name and address.

Special Hidden Tax Study Plan Approved by Mississippi Body; Pres. Jones Warns Politicians

Gulfport, Miss.—Adopting a resolution calling for a special study of hidden and punitive taxes, the Mississippi State Federation of Labor fell into step with seven state federations which already have taken similar action. Those states are Florida, Iowa, New Jersey, Tennessee, Georgia, South Carolina and Alabama.

Again labor's attention is centered on the problem of living costs and sound principles in relating living costs to income, in the view of labor officials here.

"We shall proceed under this resolution to make a thorough study of the situation," said L. H. Jones, of Jackson, president of the state federation. "I do not know what we shall discover, but I do know that we are not going to be fooled by politicians who have their own special ends to serve in so many matters of this kind. There must be sound principles in relation to taxation. Labor has long opposed the sales tax and I am sure we see no reason to favor a concealed sales tax while we oppose an open sales tax. Whatever we have, it should be in the open, it should be for constructive purposes, backed by sound reasons and free from any effort to destroy either the consumer and worker interest of labor or the opportunity to conduct lawful business with safety."

The resolution, as adopted, follows:

"Whereas, employment, trade, financial and social changes of the last decade have apparently created new demands for the revenues for federal, state, county and municipal governments; and,

"Whereas, these new demands are already resulting in higher annual taxes and greater total public debts to an extent that is arousing organized units of finance and industry to protect, although organized consumers' protest is only now crystallizing; and,

"Whereas, a definite trend towardhidden and punitive taxes is already manifesting, bringing a disproportionately higher share of taxation to bear upon the consumers, and especially upon wage-earners, by increasing living costs, reducing trade and causing unemployment; and,

"Whereas, widespread protest against all taxation will inevitably jeopardize the security of social benefits such as better schools, better supervision of public health, compensation protection of various kinds for workers, for which organized labor has fought for many years; and,

"Whereas, the Florida Federation of Labor and six other state federations have recently appointed special committees to conduct tax surveys relative to the effect upon labor membership of punitive taxes and certain types of distribution of living necessities; now, therefore, be it

"Resolved: 1. That this convention of the Mississippi State Federation of Labor, in session at Gulfport on July 11, express hereby its indorsement of the action of the Florida Federation of Labor and other state federations of labor in undertaking a vigilant study of taxes, and extends hereby its cooperation to the movement in every practicable manner.

"2. That the president of this federation be and he is hereby authorized and instructed to appoint a special committee of three members to study and report on the effect in Mississippi of so-called hidden and punitive taxes upon the living costs, employment opportunities and social objectives of labor, said report to be made to the executive committee of this federation and other properly interested bodies as directed.

"3. That this special committee be empowered to work in co-operation with similar committees of other state federations in any practicable manner.

"4. That copies of this resolution be sent to the secretaries of each state federation as information."

JOHN WEBER, BAKERS' AID, DIES IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—John Weber, reputedly the last surviving charter member of the International Union of Bakery and Confectionery Workers, died at his home here on July 12 after an illness of four weeks. He was 76 years of age.

For many years, until he retired six years ago, Mr. Weber was office manager here for Bakery and Confectionery Workers Local No. 118.

In 1936, at the fiftieth anniversary celebration of the founding of the International Bakers' union, held in Pittsburgh, Pa., he was honored as the union's last surviving charter member.

A native of Germany, Mr. Weber had been a resident of Washington for a long period. He was past master of Arminius lodge of Masons here and also belonged to Mount Horeb chapter, Royal Arch Masons.

Among survivors are a daughter, Mrs. Lillie W. Werntz; sons, John A. and Henry Weber, and five grandchildren, all of this city.

Steel operations the week beginning July 5 were 44 per cent higher than those of the previous week. Does anyone imagine there has been that quick a change in orders? If so, why shouldn't steel cut its prices some more?

Imports of Japanese Products Suffer Heavy Decline for Year

Report of Department of Commerce Shows Loss of One-Half of Japanese Trade With United States in 1938 Against 1937—American Exports to Japan Fall Off Too.

Washington.—Imports of Japanese goods into the United States in the five months ending with May declined by one-half from the mark shown at the end of the five months of 1937, according to the latest report of the department of commerce. For the first five months of this year these imports amounted to $17,848,000, while for the first five months of 1937 their value was $92,386,000.

The basic cause for the heavy decline in these imports is attributed both to the recession of feeling among the American people for Japanese atrocities in China, and to the concerted campaign which has been carried on by labor union groups and interests to put a stop to the flow of cheaply produced and low-wage goods from Japan. Indications point to this campaign as one of the most effective that has been conducted in the United States in recent years.

Food Products Decline.

A breakdown of the items coming into the United States from Japan in the first five months of this year show that cheap food products and electric bulbs and devices, which usually sell well in a season of business recession, fell off even more than the so-called "luxury" products.

Raw silk imports show the smallest per cent in decline, and attributable possibly to the fact that the processing and wage cost of silk goods in the United States is approximately eight times the original cost of the raw material. In the first five months of this year 17,622,000 pounds of raw silk came in from Japan, while in the same period in 1937, the raw silk imports amounted to 23,664,000 pounds.

The recent trend is in marked contrast with trade data for the early stages of Sino-Japanese hostilities. During the first seven months of 1937 imports of the United States from Japan actually increased by 83 per cent. During the next four months the increase continued, but was only 1 per cent.

Decline May Increase.

The explanation is that orders are placed months in advance, and are never immediately reflected in imports. This being true, the sharp decline of the last five months could continue with even more severity on the basis of trade advices from Japan estimating April orders at 80 per cent below the same month last year.

Observers in Washington say the business recession cannot account for more severe declines in imports of such Japanese items as canned tuna fish and electric lamps, competitively shipped for a low price market.

Imports of canned Japanese tuna dropped from 6,144,000 pounds in the first five months of 1937 to 1,632,000 pounds in the first five months of this year, a value reduction from $1,189,000 to $326,000.

Toy Imports Cut to Third.

Japanese electric bulbs, 47,326,000 of which poured into this country during the first five months of 1937, were reduced in volume in the first five months of this year to 10,446,000, a cut in terms of dollars from $342,000 to $99,000.

Imports of Japanese toys were cut about a third. Against $142,000 of dolls and parts in the first five months of 1937, only $54,000 were imported in the corresponding period this year, while other imported Japanese toys declined from $642,000 to $243,000.

Sharper declines were noted in imports of cotton products, but this was attributed to Japanese use of cotton for military purposes.

Some Japanese imports, labeling of which would not catch the eye of the purchaser, increased during the early part of this year. Zipper imports from Japan doubled. Imports of Pyrethrum flowers (which can only be obtained in Japan, and are used in insect powder manufacture) increased from $533,000 to $724,000 in value.

Exports to Japan Drop.

During the same period American exports to Japan were reduced, but the decrease was not so marked. Value of Japanese imports from America decreased from $140,447,000 in the first five months of 1937 to $109,659,000 in the corresponding period this year.

This was in a large measure attributed to the increasing difficulty of obtaining exchange permits in Japan, which the commerce department recently said is "a matter of growing concern to Japanese importers." The department recently advised American exporters to "have a confirmed irrevocable letter of credit in their hands before accepting orders for shipment to Japan."

The department said Japanese importers have no means of foretelling in advance whether their applications for exchange permits will be granted and "private Japanese importers are obviously not in a position to bind the ministry of finance in this matter."

SOUTHERN LABOR "SPOTS"

Atlanta, Ga.—"Maxwell House coffee is the non-union coffee of the United States and Canada. Practically every other brand of coffee that is carried in a grocery store is made under union conditions."

This is the information coming from Robert A. Rosekarns, president of the Coffee Workers' Local Union No. 21129, New York City, affiliated with the A. F. of L., the New York State Federation of Labor and the Central Trades and Labor Council of Greater New York.

Maxwell House coffee is owned by the General Foods corporation, a notoriously unfair and anti-union aggregation of "company-unionites" which has been able so far to resist every effort of the workers to form their union.

Tens of thousands of union members who have bought and used Maxwell House coffee are now telling their grocers to leave it on the shelf and give them another brand of coffee. Other hundreds of thousands of union members will, it is believed, refuse to buy Maxwell House coffee when informed of the company's unfair attitude. The fight is being carried still further, and many union members refuse to drink coffee in restaurants, cafes and hotel dining rooms when it is learned that such places use Maxwell House coffee.

Huntsville, Ala.—Charter for newly organized local union of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers has been ordered for this city, and upon its receipt permanent officers will be elected and installed, and the new unit added to the constantly growing A. F. of L. labor movement in this city and state. Lo Petree, of the organizing staff of the American Federation of Labor, assisted the workers in forming the local.

Ragland, Ala.—Charter for the newly organized local Union of Retail Clerks was installed here last week, officers were elected and obligated and the new unit added to the local labor movement. S. E. Roper, director of organization activities for the American Federation of Labor in Alabama, assisted the workers in forming the local union and officiated at the installation of the charter and obligation of the officers.

Birmingham, Ala.—Radio announcers of this city have completed organization of a local union and application has been made to the American Federation of Radio Announcers for a charter. S. E. Roper assisted the announcers in the organization of this highly important local union.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—For the past three months workers employed by the Nestles Milk Products company here have been attempting to obtain an agreement with the company. The local manager "passed the buck" most successfully throughout this long period. One day last week, the workers, worn out with the tactics of the company, walked out on strike. The farmers supplying the plant with milk were up in arms against the workers for walking out. A meeting was called by the strikers, to which the farmers and farm agents were invited. S. E. Roper, director of organization for the A. F. of L., presided.

Conditions were explained to the farmers by the strikers. The farmers had been grossly misinformed by the management. A committee was named, including three farmers, farm agents and strikers, and when the farmers and farm agents heard the true story of the trouble, they were no longer hostile toward the plant workers. Work was resumed pending further activities of the committee, and it is believed the "buck-passing" days of the management of the Nestles Milk Products are over. The farmers know the true conditions, and will be of great aid to the plant workers in remedying the intolerable conditions heretofore existing.

The British government is said to fear that Mussolini will break his word to withdraw troops from Spain. When did Mussy ever do anything else?

Actors File Charges On Ringling Circus

A. F. of L. Union Claims Show Management Violated Agreement in Discharging 1,500 Union Members.

New York, N. Y.—Ralph Whitehead, executive secretary of the American Federation of Actors, announced that the federation had filed charges with the national labor relations board accusing the Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey circus with violating the national labor relations act in connection with the closing of the show at Scranton, Pa., last month and the discharge of all members of the union, numbering about 1,500.

Pointing out that the union had a four-year closed shop agreement with the circus management, the complaint charges the dismissal of the union members violated the provision of the labor act which declares it shall be an unfair labor practice for an employer "by discrimination in regard to hire or tenure of employment or any term or condition of employment to encourage membership in any labor organization."

The Ringling show management, it was disclosed, after taking the show to winter headquarters at Sarasota, Fla., sent 21 carloads of feature attractions and equipment to Redfield, S. D., to join the nonunion Al G. Barnes-Sells-Floto circus, a subsidiary of the Ringling Brothers circus. John Ringling North, manager of the circus which closed at Scranton, Pa., is reported as having said that "the Barnes circus has been nonunion and has had no labor difficulties." It was charged that in closing the Ringling show the management intended to indicate opposition to the activities of the union and discourage membership in it.

The charges, filed with the labor board, also accuse the Ringling management with violating the section of the labor act which prohibits employers from interfering with, restraining, or coercing employes in the exercise of their right of self-organization. This violation, the union said, was achieved by the action of the circus management in denouncing the leadership of the American Federation of Actors, thus indicating the intention of bringing the federation into disrepute.

How long ago was it that as large a part of the Russian crop was harvested with sickles? And though the query is queer from America, are the soviets sure that they are not going too fast?

Andrews Will Administer Federal Wage-Hour Law

Washington. — The appointment by President Roosevelt of Elmer F. Andrews, industrial commissioner of New York state, to be administrator of the fair labor standards act of 1938, popularly called the "federal wages and hours act," places the important functions set forth in that measure in the hands of a man well equipped by experience to handle the many problems connected with a law which establishes a floor below which wages in interstate industries cannot go and a ceiling beyond which the length of the work week cannot rise.

Mr. Andrews was deputy industrial commissioner of New York state when Miss Frances Perkins was industrial commissioner, from 1929 to 1933, and became head of the state labor department when President Roosevelt appointed Miss Perkins to the position of secretary of labor.

A native of New York, Mr. Andrews is 48 years of age and lives with his wife and three children at Flushing. He graduated from Rensselaer Polytechnic institute in 1915, and in the next few years built railroads in Cuba and New York, worked for compensation-rating groups and piloted army planes during the World war. In the nine years he has been with the New York state labor department he has seen the personnel grow from 1,600 to 7,900.

He also served as a labor adviser for the national labor board in the coal mining districts of Alabama, Kentucky and Pennsylvania in 1933. In 1934, President Roosevelt sent him to Geneva, Switzerland, as head of the American observers at the International Labor conference. As the result of his report, the United States government became a member of the international labor organization of the Leagues of Nations. As industrial commissioner of New York, Mr. Andrews was largely responsible for that state's minimum wage law for women, extension of unemployment insurance and workmen's compensation.

PRETZEL DRIVERS WIN STRIKE IN CLEVELAND

Cleveland, O.—A three-day strike of the Pretzel Drivers of the A. F. of L. Bakery Drivers' union, Local No. 52, gained a new agreement with the pretzel firms guaranteeing seniority rights, two weeks' vacation on a graduated basis and stabilization of wages on a graduated basis, and pay for the duration of the strike. The agreement provides that men of three or more years of service are to get two weeks vacation with pay, effective immediately, the one week vacation remaining for the men of less than three years service. About forty drivers were affected by the contract.

That investigation last winter into the National Association of Manufacturers had at least one result: Piping down in the vociferous cry that what what may be deemed good for the consumer and the common peepul must in its nature be bad for business. But what the association learned by the investigation remains yet in the distance to be seen.

The first and best victory is to conquer self; to be conquered by self is, of all things, the most shameful and vile.—Plato.

Washington Facts

By GEORGE L. KNAPP.

Washington, D. C.—Labor has a large interest in savings banks. Nothing in recent savings bank history has keener interest than the action just taken by the banking department of the state of New York. It has ruled out $3,163,931,000 par value, of railroad bonds as no longer proper investments for savings banks of that state.

The railroads whose bonds have been ruled out in this way are not bankrupt railroads. They are railroads still managed by their officials; not under the charge of a trustee or a referee in bankruptcy. The New York Central leads the list with $348,184,000 of bonds no longer acceptable. The B. & O. follows with $325,994,000, and then comes Great Northern with $285,623,000, Illinois Central with $248,678,000, Southern Railway with $234,159,000, and so on down.

* * *

The bonds of railroads in trusteeship were ruled out as savings bank investments before. Of these bonds of bankrupt rails, there are about $3,481,000,000, par value. The par value of all railroad bonds is about $13,974,000,000. Add the bonds of bankrupt roads those just turned down by the state banking department of New York, and you find that rather more than 47 per cent of all railroad bonds outstanding are not considered safe investments in that state.

This ought to make it clear to any one why railroad workers refuse to patch the leaking railroad roof with their pay rolls.

On the list of bonds thrown out by the New York banking authorities are many that do not mature till after 1980; quite a number that are to be paid somewhere from 1994 to the year 2000, and two due in 2018. What utter childishness this unlimited confidence in the future now seems!

* * *

Uncle Sam's birthday party this year cost 358 lives—to date. An uncertain proportion of things reported as "injuries" usually turn out to be fatal. But in the immediate total 197 were killed in traffic accidents, 94 were drowned and 67 snuffed out from miscellaneous accidents.

Only two of these were killed by fireworks—which seems almost a miracle. But Philadelphia had 309 fireworks injuries, the highest on record, and New York had 849—very far indeed from the highest.

The automobile still is the deadliest device of America. It killed about 39,000 persons in this country last year. At the rate of the Fourth—191 per day—it would kill 69,715 this year. That, of course, will not occur; but there is no evidence that the auto death rate is going down.

The wheel of fortune turns incessantly round, and who can say within himself, I shall today be uppermost?—Confucius.

Radio Artists Win A. F. L. Union Terms

Two Broadcasting Chains Sign Agreement for Actors and Singers on Sustaining Programs.

New York, N. Y.—Representatives of the American Federation of Radio Artists, an A. F. of L. affiliate, the National Broadcasting company and the Columbia Broadcasting system, signed a contract at Radio City governing working hours and wages for actors and singers employed on sustaining radio programs in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles.

The minimum rate wages under the agreement provide for pay ranging from $8 for choral and group singers for a 15-minute broadcast on the west coast to $25 for soloists for a full hour's broadcast in New York or on a national hookup. The minimum scale for staff singers employed by the week ranges from $40 on the Pacific coast to $65 in New York. The agreement names the union as the exclusive bargaining agent for artists on sustaining programs originating on the key stations of the networks in the cities affected.

For the first time in the history of broadcasting the agreement limits rehearsal hours and provides overtime pay schedules for artists compelled to rehearse more than the agreed time. Working conditions for staff singers are specifically defined and there is a stipulation that artists be paid for program auditions.

The provision on rehearsal hours for actors calls for two hours for a 15-minute broadcast, six hours for a 30-minute broadcast and eight hours for a 60-minute broadcast. For singers, rehearsals will be one and a half hours for 15-minute programs, two and a half hours for 30 minutes and three and a half hours for an hour's broadcast. Provision is also made for the payment of rehearsal overtime at the rate of $4 an hour.

The contract covers only sustaining programs and has no bearing on commercially sponsored programs. It was signed in the NBC board room by Lenox R. Lohr, president of the National Broadcasting company; Lawrence Lowman, vice-president of the Columbia Broadcasting system, and Emily Holt, national executive secretary, and George Heller, assistant national secretary and treasurer of the American Federation of Radio Artists.

Cure for Worry

By DR. CHARLES STELZLE

Executive Director, Good Neighbor League.

Somebody once said that worry is the great American disease. Some people call it "Americanitis." But that's a mistake. It is not confined to Americans. No matter what a man's social condition or his nationality may be, he is not immune. Rich or poor, black or white, learned or ignorant—all are affected by it.

Worry is the most popular form of suicide. Worry is the real cause of death in thousands of instances where some other disease is named in the death certificate. It is just as certain as poison, only it takes longer. It is just as painful as a pistol shot, and as keen as a dagger, but it does not seem quite so cruel.

Work rarely kills, but worry, sooner or later, brings down its victim. A man can least afford to worry when he does worry, because at such a time he needs the force of every faculty to bring him to his normal condition.

What is worry, anyway? It is just a host of restless imps of fear, which, taken singly, could be conquered with hardly an effort. It is their multiplicity, their persistency, that discourages.

How may worry be cured?

First, by realizing the utter uselessness of worry. A dozen eternities spent in worry will not change a single fact. It is only by hard, faithful work that any worthwhile thing can be accomplished, and no man can work well, with a clear head and a steady hand, if he will persist in worrying.

Second, by taking a larger view of life. Most of us imagine that the world is confined to our own limited horizon. That is not quite true. There are really some good people and some good things beyond the line of our vision.

Third, by not "crossing bridges" until we come to them. As a matter of fact, nine-tenths of our fears are never realized.

Fourth, not only by remembering that tomorrow has not yet arrived, but that yesterday is already passed.

Fifth, by constantly recalling that the world has not yet gone to the devil. It may at times seem as though it had, but the presence of so many strong, good people in it, and the constant progress that we are making, disproves it.

Let's remind ourselves that "each new day may be as the beginning of life." Some pessimists will deny this. But haven't you noticed that most of the fears of the night before have vanished with the sunrise of the new day?

American Stores Sign Union Pact

Baltimore.—A union agreement has been signed between the American Stores company and Local No. 162 of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, A. F. of L., in Baltimore. The negotiations have been going on for some time. Attorney Fred W. Johnson and General Manager Fred Hearney represented the American Stores company, and Walter Hegeman, general organizer of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters, represented the Butchers' local of Baltimore.

An organization drive will start soon to organize all meat cutters and packing house employes in the meat industry. Hegeman said the American Stores are operating under 100 per cent union conditions.

Donnelley 'Phone Directories Hit In Nation-Wide Drive Against Firm

Merchants, Professionals and Other Advertisers Told That Money Spent for Classified Telephone Directory Should Be Spent for Local Publicity.

Chicago, Ill.—From many of the leading cities of the country reports are coming into the organization committee of the Chicago printing trades unions to the effect that local advertisers in the classified telephone directories printed by the anti-union concern of R. R. Donnelley & Sons are being canvassed to withdraw such advertising.

Besides printing all Chicago directories — alphabetical, classified and suburban—the Donnelley concern, the organization committee asserts, prints the Brooklyn and Manhattan classified, and both alphabetical and classified for St. Louis, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Salt Lake City, Denver, Indianapolis, Columbus, Dayton, Wheeling, Akron, Youngstown; the classified for Detroit and Cleveland, and hundreds of directories for smaller communities in Michigan, Ohio and Illinois.

The Donnelley concern, according to the organization committee, maintains a large staff of sales people who solicit local business and professional people for advertisements in their classified telephone directories. Time is bought on various radio stations to publicize the classified directories. In order to counteract this publicity many central labor bodies, innumerable allied printing trades coun cils and carpenters and painters' district councils are reported to be systematically carrying on campaigns of adverse publicity against advertising in these directories. These organizations are letting local advertisers know that union men and women and their friends do not use such directories.

Patronize Local Mediums.

Declaring that it is an utter waste of money to buy space in the Donnelley classified directories, the committee states that local unions in the cities using such directories are urging the advertisers to use the money they have been spending with the Donnelley enterprises for adverising in the local newspapers or for leaflets, posters and mailing matter carrying the union label.

Mr. H. M. Wicks, executive secretary of the organization committee of the Chicago printing trades unions, reports that hundreds of advertisers in dozens of cities have pledged themselves to refrain from further patronage of the Donnelley classified directories until they are notified by the printing trades unions that such directories are printed under union conditions. Many local unions of the printing trades have written to the Chicago committee thanking the committee for aiding them in keeping local printing at home, instead of letting the anti-union Donnelley outfit get it.

The organization committee of the Chicago printing trades unions requests all labor organizations who desire further information on how most effectively to aid in the drive against Donnelley products to write to the committee, whose address is Suite 1519, 130 North Wells street, Chicago, Ill.

STREET RAILWAY UNION SIGNS NEW PACT IN D. C.

Washington.—The members of Division 689, Amalgamated Street and Electric Railway Employes' uniong, affiliated with the A. F. of L., in a referendum here, voted overwhelmingly to accept the proposal of the Capital Transit company, thus ending negotiations for a new contract which had been under consideration for several months.

The agreement voted by the union provides for overtime after 10 hours instead of 11 hours; guarantees extra men a minimum of $100 for four weeks; establishes the 8-hour day in garages; grants one week's vacation with pay for all employes after one year's service, and establishes the closed shop for all employes except clerks in the offices.

Included among the objectives of the association, according to C. McMillan, international representative of I. B. E. W., who conducted the meeting, will be to establish standard working conditions for the electrical workers throughout the state of Tennessee. Also, a legislative program will be mapped and will be presented the next session of the Tennessee legislature, aiming toward protection of the state's electrical workers.

Court Orders CIO to Cease Attacks on AFL Truck Drivers

New Orleans Teamsters' Union Cites Numerous Acts of Violence as Basis for Injunction.

New Orleans, La.—A petition filed in civil district court here by officials of the American Federation of Teamsters' Union No. 270 and Leo B. Carter, A. F. of L. organizer, resulted in District Judge Walter L. Gleason signing a temporary injunction restraining CIO pickets "from interfering with American Federation of Labor truck drivers." Judge Gleason set July 16 as the date for a hearing on which a decision will be made for or against making the order permanent.

The petitioners told the court that on June 22 the A. F. of L. group signed contracts with the majority of the drayage companies in New Orleans and is "being forcibly interfered with by the CIO in carrying out the terms of the contracts." Three CIO organizers and all members of the Transport Workers' union, an affiliate of the CIO, were named as defendants in the injunction proceedings.

Five affidavits attached to the petition charged specific threats and interference on the part of the CIO with the A. F. of L. union. One affidavit claimed the signer was taken to CIO headquarters and compelled to sign a CIO membership card. Another claimed the signer was stopped in the streets and escaped by making a motion as though to reach for a weapon. Three others signed affidavits asserting their A. F. of L. membership cards were taken from them and torn up by three white men and five negroes on July 5.

The A. F. of L. Teamsters' union gave the court the names of fifteen trucking concerns which had signed closed shop agreements with the union.

SEATTLE BUILDING TRADES WIN PACT FOR 6-HOUR DAY

Seattle, Wash. — Following months of negotiation with the Seattle Master Builders, the Seattle Building Trades unions finalized an agreement guaranteeing the 6-hour day and continuing present wage scales.

Originally the 6-hour day was attacked by the business men engaged in building operations on the ground that the alleged higher costs of building under the short work day was responsible for the previous sales resistance of the public. Incontestable figures compiled by the unions demonstrating beyond a doubt that building costs are not higher in Seattle than in other places, compelled the builders to yield on this fallacy and sign the agreement. Reflecting the new spirit, J. B. Fowler, manager of the Seattle Master Builders, declared that "this contract means at least a million dollars of extra building business for the city of Seattle within the next 90 days."

Doctors Debate Merit of Public Health Movement

Fundamentals of Better Service Considered Amid Sharp Clashes of "Old" and "New" Schools of Doctors.

Washington, D. C.—The National Health conference had its character and aims most briefly stated by Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon-general of the United States.

"I believe," said Dr. Parran, "that this conference marks the ridge of the hill between the old indifferences to health as a matter of national concern, and a new understanding that health is the first and most appropriate object for national action."

The session was marked by sharp clashes precipitated by representatives of the American Medical association, who denounced practically all governmental "meddling' 'in medicine. Dr. Irving Abell, president of the A. M. A., strongly opposed a government action, and insisted that the association was making a study of medical needs of this country.

Dr. Hugh Cabot, consulting surgeon at the Mayo clinic, retorted that "it is not clear by what method physicians are to know about the people they never see."

Basic Facts.

Four facts were given emphasis:

1. Preventive health services for the nation as a whole are grossly insufficient.

2. Hospital and other facilities are inadequate, especially in rural areas, and financial support for hospital care is "precarious."

3. One-third of the population, including persons with and without income, is getting inadequate medical service, or none.

4. An even larger fraction of the population suffers from the economic burdens caused by sickness.

President Green proposed an amendment to workmen's compensation laws to provide compensation for loss of time and hospital and medical care for workers and families. He added that the workers should contribute to this, but that federal and local contributions were also needed.

75,000 U. S. WORKERS WIN HOLIDAYS WITH PA

Washington, D. C. — Approximately 75,000 employes of the federal government will benefit from the resolution passed by the recent session of congress and signed by President Roosevelt providing that per-diem, per-hour and piec-work employes who are prevented from working, or relieved from working, because of the occurrence of a holiday, or because a day is declared a holiday by federal statute or executive order, shall receive the same pay for such days as for other days on which an ordinary day's work is performed.

The resolution was introduced in the house of representatives by Representative Ramspeck, chairman of the house civil service committee, at the request of the American Federation of Government Employes, which received the assistance of the American Federation of Labor in piloting the measure through both the house of representatives and the senate.

In commenting on the enactment of the measure, the Government Standard, the official organ of the American Federation of Government Employes, said:

"The resolution had its inception in a plan to compensate per-diem and per-hour employes who lost a day's pay on Dec. 24, 1937, which was declared a holiday by executive order. In other words, a holiday for per annum employes simply meant lost pay for per-diem and per-hour workers, and the comptroller general's rulings have held on several occasions that the situation could be remedied only through legislation.

"At the suggestion of the American Federation of Government Workers, it was decided to cover similar happenings in the future. There is no retroactive provision in the resolution, but henceforth when a day is declared a holiday by executive order, federal employes will get a day's pay for it."

ARMY SCHOOLS AMERICAN INDUSTRY FOR NEXT WAR

Washington.—The war department announces it was driving ahead in the program of educating industry to produce war materials, for which the last congress appropriated $10,000,000, of which $2,000,000 will be spent in the next twelve months. Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson said the "educating" will be implemented by awarding small contracts for supplies required in war to firms which do not now produce them, but could by making slight changes in their plants. Then when congress declares war the plants, as a result of the education in peace times, will be ready to go ahead full speed in the production of supplies for the use of the army and navy.

SUGAR REFINERY STRIKE WON BY A. F. L. UNION

Philadelphia, Pa.—The American Federation of Labor Sugar Refinery Workers' union, Local No. 20225, unanimously accepted the agreement worked out by representatives of the union and officials of the Franklin Sugar Refinery company, ending a strike of nearly a month's duration. The contract was identical with the one concluded a week before with the Pennsylvania Sugar company and the W. J. McCahan Sugar Refining and Molasses company.

Principal clauses provide for what is practically the closed shop, with the company co-operating in encouraging non-member workers to join the union, a week's vacation with pay and membership in the labor pool established by the Pennsylvania and McCahan pacts.

The labor pool, devised to give greater job security, provides that an employe's seniority in one plant determines his seniority in the other two plants; that if a worker is laid off during a slack period in one refinery he will be called to work in another, according ot his seniority.

CENTRAL BODY DELEGATES QUESTION WILLIAM GREEN'S M'REYNOLDS' ENDORSEMENT

Vote to Ask Why Indorse a "Fair" McReynolds Record Over Perfect Miller Record—Letter Sent to Miller.

Last Monday evening Central Labor union waxed indignant over the action of President William Green's letter to Mr. Paul Aymon which indorsed the candidacy of Congressman McReynolds.

The indignation was on two counts:

First, that Central Labor union was ignored. It contended that political matters in the Third district should be handled by the Central Labor union in Chattanooga, which is the official body of the American Federation of Labor here. Letters on political matters concerning this district should be addressed to recognized authorities in the labor movement in Chattanooga, delegates insisted.

Secondly, it questioned Mr. Green's full information in the congressional race. He was requested to look over the labor record of Judge L. D. Miller, which is perfect in every respect. Also, the Central Body called attention to Mr. Green the fact that Congressman McReynolds voted to cut wages for postoffice employes, voted against the utilities holding bill, insisted that southern workers should be paid less than northern people.

Mr. McReynolds' close association with the Davenport hosiery mills, which in 1934 ruthlessly weeded out AFL unionists and which today is being painted by non-union painters, was drawn to Mr. Green's attention.

The indorsement of Judge Miller which had passed two readings in Central Body was dropped when it was found that a clause in the law prohibited indorsements to people who are not actually members of organized labor.

However, the following letter was addressed to Judge Miller, which told him that although he had a perfect record it was impossible to indorse him. The letter said:

Dear Judge Miller:

On request of various local unions affiliated with the Chattanooga Central Labor union to indorse you for the United Congress, a committee was appointed to make an investigation of your candidacy and report back to the Central Body. At our July 11 meeting your candidacy was indorsed on the first and second readings.

However, our laws prohibit indorsement unless the candidate himself is a member of organized labor. Therefore, despite your perfect record toward organized labor while in the state legislature, and your very friendly attitude toward Local 226, Painters and Decorators, through its business agent, Joe Farmer, extends its thanks to the public for the very fine cooperation it received for its annual picnic last week.

Commissioner R. M. Cooke comes in for special thanks for the splendid work in providing Warner park and its facilities, and the recreation departments assistance in entertainment.

Label League Supports Miller

Whereas, Congressman S. D. McReynolds is asking organized labor to support his candidacy for re-election to congress; and,

Whereas, Mr. McReynolds publicly fought the wage and hour bill on the grounds that there should be a differential between the wages of northern and southern workers; and,

Whereas, Mr. McReynolds voted against the utilities holding company bill which was on President Roosevelt's "must" list; and,

Whereas, Mr. McReynolds aided Mr. LeRoy Eldridge, of Hixson, Tenn., in securing the postmastership of Hixson over the earnest protest of organized labor. and,

Whereas, the Hon. L. D. Miller is opposing Mr. S. D. McReynolds for congress; and,

Whereas, Mr. Miller has a political record which is perfect in every respect; therefore, be ft

Resolved, by the Chattanooga Label league, That we urge every trade-unionist to vote for the Hon. L. D. Miller for congress.

Machinist Lodge 56 Discusses No Politics

Success Lodge No. 56, International Association of Machinists (an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor), located here in Chattanooga, Tenn., wishes to announce to the readers of The Labor World that at the regular meeting of July 25, 1938, the lodge went on record unanimously as strictly adhering to the organization's policy of not discussing politics, nor indorsing political nominees.

This local was organized in Chattanooga May 31, 1900, and has functioned continuously since that date.

Our aims are to benefit the machinist trade, by ever raising the standards of workmanship in our craft, instilling more and more self-respect in our membership, and creating amicable relationship between the employer and employe, thereby also increasing our civic interest in the affairs of Chattanooga.

Naturally we are alive to new ideas for benefiting ourselves and Chattanooga, and did interest ourselves in Labor's Political conference, only to soon after its formation withdraw our affiliation, and now we wish to apprise the public in Chattanooga and Hamilton county of the fact that we have no connection whatsoever with Labor's Political conference.

Teachers Ask County Resume Pay Schedule

Central Body Backs Up Request to Be Given County Court.

Two years ago the Hamilton county board of education adopted a single salary schedule for its teachers which included five annual steps upward. Last year the court failed to adopt the second step in this schedule, but said that they would merely suspend it for one year.

The teachers' union now is asking the court to see to it that the schedule is resumed, and through the Central Labor union the following resolution was adopted to be presented to the court:

Whereas, the Teachers'union has been working for many years to secure the establishment of a single salary schedule for Hamilton county schools; and,

Whereas, two years ago the Hamilton county board of education adopted such a schedule with a plan to put it in operation in five annual steps; and,

Whereas, the county court failed to appropriate money last year to provide for the second of these five steps but stated in a resolution formally adopted that it was not the intention of the county court to destroy the salary schedule, but merely to suspend its operation for one year for financial reasons; and,

Whereas, the teachers have overwhelmingly chosen to have the second step of the salary schedule in preference to other plans of increasing teachers' salaries that have been proposed; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Chattanooga Central Labor union, That we hereby respectfully request and urge the finance committee to appropriate enough money to re-establish the teachers' salary schedule and to restore sick pay.

Sam I. Whitman Not a Member, Say Bricklayers

Public claims made by Sam I. Whitman that he is a member of Local 6, Bricklayers' union, are absolutely false, says a communication from that local union to Central Body, bearing the seal of that local.

Mr. Whitman has said that he is a stonemason and is a member of Local 6, which has jurisdiction of that trade.

Pastors' Assn. Given Invitation to Send Fraternal Delegate

At its regular meeting last Monday evening, Central Labor union decided to extend an invitation to the local pastors' association to send a fraternal delegate to the Central Labor union meetings.

It is believed that in this manner the church and labor will be better able to understand each other.

GREEN SENDS GOOGE HERE TO BOOST BERRY'S RACE FOR UNITED STATES SENATE

Says American Federation Is Most Anxious That Pressman Head Be Re-elected—Googe Takes No Part in Other Races.

George L. Googe, southern director of the American Federation of Labor, recently returned from Geneva, Switzerland, where he attended an international labor conference, came to Chattanooga last night to help in the candidacy of Senator George L. Berry for the United States senate.

Mr. Googe was sent in by President William Green to personally ask Tennessee labor to leave no stone unturned to re-elect the president of an international American Federation of Labor union.

"It is very important to the interests of organized labor that Senator Berry be returned to the senate," said Mr. Googe. "We feel that trades unionists owe it to themselves to leave no stone unturned to accomplish this. I find over the state that organized labor has already become active for Senaor Berry, but it is our hope to increase that effort still further."

Mr. Googe stated further that he will not take any part in any other political race, Senator Berry's race being the one of interest to the American Federation of Labor in Hamilton county.

William Green's Letter

We print herewith a copy of a letter from AFL President William Green which was addressed to Mr Paul Aymon, AFL organizer, and which indorsed Congressman Sam D. McReynolds in his race for congress from the Third civil district. After the recitation of the letter we have a few comments to make.

Dear Sir and Brother:

The record of votes cast by Congressman Sam D. McReynolds, of the Third congressional district of Tennessee, upon measures sponsored and approved by the American Federation of Labor shows that he voted for each and every measure within this classification.

I regard his record as satisfactory, and his support of American Federation of Labor-sponsored legislation as highly commendable.

However, Congressman McReynolds gave concrete evidence of his friendship for the American Federation of Labor in many other ways not included in the record of votes cast. He served the American Federation of Labor all during his service as a member of congress in varied ways and gave us help many times when the sort of help he extended was badly needed.

I regard Congressman McReynolds as sympathetic toward the American Federation of Labor and its legislative policies. I am confident we can rely upon him to continue the service and support which he always gave the American Federation of Labor when he is re-elected.

Upon the record made by Congressman McReynolds, and because of my personal knowledge of his friendship and sympathetic interest in the American Federation of Labor in the Third congressional district of Tennessee to give him a full measure of support and re-elect him to the congress of the United States. I am confident that the best interests of working men and women in the Third congressional district of Tennessee, and the American Federation of Labor generally, will be promoted and advanced through the re-election of Congressman McReynolds by a most decided majority.

With kind regards, I am

Fraternally yours,

WM. GREEN.

Sincerely hoping that we are not committing "lese majeste," but at the same time exercising the American Federation of Labor principle of democratic exercise of American citizenship, we express surprise that such a letter was not sent to officials of the Chattanooga Central Labor union, which is the sole official agency of the American Federation of Labor in Chattanooga.

delegates seem to believe that President Green was not aware of the record of the opponent of Mr. McReynolds. This is borne out by the action taken last Monday night in Central Body when the delegates unanimously directed a letter be sent to Mr. Green, stating that, contrary to this Mr. J. D. Miller had a perfect record of legislative hours that is not just "good"—it is perfect.

The editor of this paper has assiduously refrained at the best from getting either as boosting Mr. Miller, although personally the editor is wholeheartedly for Mr. Miller over Mr. McReynolds.

However, since the American Federation of Labor head has stepped into Tennessee from Washington, and has publicly asked for support of Congressman McReynolds because of a "fair" labor record which is outgrown, apparently without being informed of the perfect record of his opponent, we feel that in all justice both sides should be given.

The Tennessee Federation of Labor committee recognized the sentiment coming from the Third district and refrained from making any recommendation in the congressional race.

We cannot get over the fact that Mr. McReynolds did say publicly that there should be a wage differential between the north and the south in the wage hour bill. The AFL records show an unfavorable vote from him on that measure when passed.

The AFL record now that Mr. McReynolds opposed the bill when would grant wage increases to underpaid federal employes.

Mr. Green's letter said that he voted unfavorably one time, while the records sent from the AFL office in Washington show he voted wrong twice. The railroad brotherhoods say that he voted wrong four times.

While the AFL records do not include the vote on the death clause in the utility holding bill, it is a fact that Mr. McReynolds voted with the utility companies. The AFL and President Roosevelt were most insistent that that measure be favorably acted upon. When Mr. McReynolds says that he is for the president, he did not go along with him and he did not go along on the wage hour bill. He refused to comment when the supreme court bill was being urged by President Roosevelt.

Much has been said about the vast influence which Congressman McReynolds exercises in Washington, yet when a friend of his, Mr. LeRoy Eldridge, of Hixson, came up for the postmastership, Mr. McReynolds could not or did not use that vast influence which has brought "billions and billions" to Chattanooga. Organized labor did not want Mr. Eldridge—he had tried to organize a vigilante committee to break up a strike, and labor did not like it. Senator Berry did try to stop the appointment, and he did succeed in holding it up for several months—but the appointment finally went through. With a man that can move kings and emperors in congress, a third-class postmastership in his own district was beyond his powers.

Abuses Arising in Patent Laws Studied by O'Mahoney Committee

Governmental Probe Starts With Searching Examination of Conditions Surrounding the Ownership and Use of Patents as Means of Fostering Monopoly, Price Control and Restricted Output.

Washington.—Control and suppression of patents as a means of fostering monopoly in commerce and industry will be the starting point of the investigation of the joint legislative-executive monopoly inquiry, headed by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming. The inquiry is getting under way for a thorough and comprehensive study of trade practices and methods, and the extent to which the consuming public is exploited, profits inflated and ranges of production restricted through such means.

Data on the use and ownership of patents is being collected and analyzed by experts of the committee, and in preparation of the first all-inclusive study of the subject by governmental authorities. This phase of the inquiry is under the direction of Assistant Attorney-General Thurman Arnold, a member of the committee, with the assistance of Chairman Garland Ferguson and Edwin L. Davis, of the federal tarde commission.

Broad Interest Involved.

Already the study is headed toward the target of the legal use of existing patent laws to build up monopoly in both an industry and a product, extension of corporate controls through patent "improvements," price control through patents, purchase and suppression of patents in "company graveyards," and methods of "patent pooling" as a means of reducing competition.

The subject is one of the most delicate that has been approached by a congressional or governmental agency. While there is indication that corporate groups are interested, perhaps unduly, in conditions that surround patents, yet hundreds of thousands of independent investors have interests also at stake.

Manifestly the objective of the study is possible amendment of the patent laws, and it is recognized that with injudicious or heedless effort, grave injury could be done to thousands of owners of patents who have not the remotest association with monopolistic set-ups.

Laws May Be Amended.

Evidence is that the great majority of abuses in patents come strictly within existing laws and are not of themselves a violation of the laws. For this reason it is believed that possibly the patent laws should have a thorough overhauling.

It is further pointed out that most of the patents that are being issued today are not basic, but come within the area of improved gadgets that permit legal extension of control by owning interests upon expiration of original patent deeds.

On the suppression side, there is indication that some companies have engaged in the practice of buying up improvements and shelving them rather than incurring the cost of changing machinery already in use in order to manufacture the improved product. In this manner, the improvements are kept out of the hands of competitors, and in trade parlance, are consigned to "company graveyards."

Lawsuits Under Scrutiny.

The committee also may study merits of suits and threatened suits for patent violations for evidence of intent on the part of large entrenched groups to tie up patents by litigation and thus combat competition by newcomers in an industry.

Early antitrust cases involving patents may be combed over for light on the problem.

One of the early antitrust cases involved a company that sixty years ago bought up more than eighty patents for spring-tooth harrows and was enabled thereby to control the output and price of harrows.

Another frequently cited is the so-called "bathtub case" of thirty years ago, in which an association, by patenting an enamel spraying process, was able to control prices in the whole bath-fixture industry.

One company that had a patent on a mimeograph machine was able to dictate the type of stencils and other supplies to be used with the machine, while another that had a motion picture machine patent determined the films that could be used on it, until finally stopped in the courts.

Washington WPA Affirms Right to Join Unions

Washington.—The works progress administration of the District of Columbia is the latest government agency to promulgate a personal policy affirming the right of employes to join unions and select representatives to handle disputes. The department of agriculture, following consultations with the American Federation of Government Employes, recently adopted a similar policy. The social security board has also taken action in this direction.

The first paragraph of the program made by the District of Columbia WPA reads as follows:

"This administration recognizes the right of its employes to affiliate themselves with a labor union and select representatives of their own choice without fear of interference, coercion, or restraint upon the part of any administrative officer or project supervisor or any representative thereof."

YOUR DOLLAR

YOUR DOLLAR will be a regular monthly feature. The facts and opinions given are based on the monthly reports of Consumers' Union, 55 Vandam Street, New York City, a non-profit membership organization whose object is to safeguard buyers by testing and reporting on consumer goods. Note especially the information on labor conditions under which products are manufactured.

Blindfold the average smoker and he can't tell Chesterfields from Lucky Strikes or Camels from Old Golds. Such was the conclusion from one part of an eight months' test on cigarettes just completed by Consumers Union and described in the July issue of Consumers Union Reports.

The average smoker can distinguish between Turkish and American tobaccos, but if you blindfold him and give him a series of American blend cigarettes to smoke he can't even pick out his favorite brand. And if two cigarettes of the same brand are included in a series of five, he is as likely as not to say that he considers one of the two duplicates one of the best of the series, and the other one of the worst.

Camel 109, Chesterfield 2.3, Domino 2.1, Lucky Strike 2.0, Old Gold 2.0, Philip Morris 2.2, Raleigh 1.8, Twenty Grand, 2.5.

Turkish type cigarettes were lower in nicotine content. Egyptian Prettiest, for example, had 1.3 per cent nicotine, Helmar 1.5, Lord Salisbury 1.4, Melachrino 1.3, and Murad 1.1.

Other conclusions which Consumers Union technicians reached as a result of investigation, were that cigarette smoking is probably slightly harmful to the human machine; that none of the popularly advertised brands appears to more harmful than ony of the others; and that, if you are going to smoke you should buy the cheapest brand of the type you prefer.

Cheap Gas O. K. for Older Cars.

Motorists who drive cars made before 1934 will usually find third-grade gasoline—which sells for an average of 2 cents less than the regular grade—entirely satisfactory. In fact, many cars made since 1934 can also use the cheaper gas.

Premium gas, selling for more than the regular grade, has a high octane rating that is required for relatively few cars. Although it will not remove carbon, it will eliminate the knocking that is caused by carbon.

Sun Glasses.

Sun glasses sold in the corner drug store or 5-and-10-cent store often have lenses with flaws that are serious enough to interfere with vision. Consumers Union bought 39 pairs of dark glasses, ranging in price from 9 cents to $5.25, and of the lot only five pairs met United States government specifications for lens quality. Practically all of the cheaper glasses were distinctly inferior.

The buyer can make simple tests that will reveal any serious defects. One method is to hold the glasses at arm's length and look through them at a window or some other bright object with a pattern of straight lines. Check whether the lines through the lens match those of the background; also whether they are bent or otherwise distorted. The glasses should also be rotated and moved back and forth; if objects seen through them appear to move, the lenses are imperfect.

Cheapest of the satisfactory glasses rated by Consumers Union are the Columbia (98c) and those made by the American Optical company ($1 and up). Other recommended brands are Optilene ($1.94), Ray-Ben ($5.25) and products of Optical Products corporation ($4.50). For casual use, less expensive brands will do, provided that the buyer checks the lenses.

Few Pennsylvania Workers Come Under Pay-Hour Law

Harrisburg, Pa.—The necessity of the enactment of valid state minimum wage and maximum hour laws similar to the federal wage and hour act recently passed by congress and signed by President Roosevelt was emphasized in a statement by Secretary of Labor and Industry Ralph M. Bashore in connection with the necision of the Pennsylvania state supreme court that the eight-hour day, 44-hour week law enacted last year by the Pennsylvania legislature was in violation of the state constitution.

Pointing out that the federal act pertains only to interstate commerce and that the coal and steel industries, which employ the big percentage of Pennsylvania workers, are already governed by union contracts which in most part provide for a work week shorter than the 44 hours and above the 25 cents an hour minimum fixed for the first year under the federal act, Mr. Bashore said "the industries that need such a law most—laundries, hotels and restaurants—the service industries—are purely intrastate and will not be effected by the federal law. What we really need is a state law, and we'll have to start all over to get one."

LOW INCOMES OF SOUTH HELD BURDEN ON NATION

Atlanta, Ga.—National prosperity of a stable and sustained sort is an impossibility as long as an area as large as the southeastern portion of the United States is low in wealth and low in the incomes of its people, said Dr. S. M. Derrick, economist of the University of South Carolina, in speaking before a convention of economists here. Similar views were expressed by other leading econimists who were in attendance.

Low income was accepted as the worst of the south's ills, with the view that it is the root of most of the other ills. At the same time, it was held that living costs in the south are approximately equal to the same costs in other parts of the country.

Dr. Derrick proposed a five-point program, starting with modifications in tariff rates, and including continuation of subsidies to agriculture, adjustment of freight rates to parity with other parts of the country and federal support of education.

Criticizes Quibbling.

"There is a tendency among our statesmen to quibble and fight over non-essentials," said Dr. G. W. Forster, of the North Carolina State college. They are not yet willing to determine the facts and, on the basis of these, to work together in the formulation of a comprehensive national program.

"Until they are willing to do this, there is little hope for the south's problem, or for the solution of any other regional problem."

W. E. Garnett, Virginia Polytechnic institute, sociologist, said his studies "confirm the president's statement that the south is the nation's No. 1 economic problem." He cited "human erosion" as the result of "overpopulation, low incomes and marginal standards of living."

"Human erosion is equally as grave a problem in all the southern states as soil erosion," Mr. Garnett declared. "Before there can be sound state and national development, the south's human erosion-producing conditions must be corrected."

Experiment in Nova Scotia

(By Bertram B. Fowler in Survey Graphis.)

Talk to anyone who has had the privilege of looking over the St. Francis Xavier extension work, and he will tell you that this is the outstanding work of rehabilitation work that is going forward on the American continent today. Men who a few years ago knew nothing of economic or social terminology, today run lobster factories, deal intelligently with dealers in Boston, operate stores, run credit unions in such a way that many of them have become the real banks of the communities.

With the economic advances go also new concepts of community responsibility. There are many cases like that of Roddy MacIsaac. Roddy had a few hundred dollars and a chance for a small contract on a new road that was being built. He went to his credit union and borrowed $500 to buy a truck. Shortly after he had put the truck in operation Roddy was taken to the hospital. Ordinarily he would have lost his truck to his creditors. He would have come out of the hospital with a burden of debt around his neck. But the credit union directors called a meeting to study Roddy's case. They hired a man to run the truck and put it back on the road. After the wages of the driver had been paid there was enough to keep up the credit union payments and return a substantial sum to Roddy's family. Therefore when Roddy went back to work he was out of debt.

IN THE NEWS

LEON HENDERSON

Leon Henderson, one of the economists on the monopoly inquiry, is a man of good height—though his six-foot four colleagues think him short. He has heavy shoulders, large head, hazel eyes. He was born in New Jersey; graduated from the Quaker college of Swarthmore in Pennsylvania; working his way through, and solemnly asserts that he had fourteen regular and irregular sources of income while about it. He went to the war, but didn't get over. He has been an associate professor of economics at the Carnegie institute, was for nine years with the Russell Foundation, and for nearly two years was director of the research and planning division of the NRA.

It was while he occupied this last place that he did the work which contributed to his selection for the staff of the monopoly quiz. Leon Henderson turned out a report on the automobile industry that is a classic among social studies. Here are a few almost chance chosen sentences:

"Many of the parts companies have in fact been the sweatshops of the automobile industry."

"The uncertainty of employment is the spectre which is haunting the automobile worker today and which has been haunting him for years."

"Favoritsm and direct financial demands on the workers by the foremen seem to have been common."

"Among the 500 single wage-earner families in Detroit in the automobile industry was a sample of seventy-four wage-earners who worked less than twelve weeks . . . (and) a sample of 187 wage-earners working twelve weeks and less than twenty-four."

Radio Concerns Give Pledges to Stop Practices

Washington.—The Philco Radio and Television corporation, of Philadelphia, and the Zenith Radio corporation, of Chicago, have entered into stipulations with the federal trade commission to discontinue certain representations in the sales of their products which are declared to be misleading.

Each company agrees to cease using or placing in the hands of retailers or others for their use, without proper qualifications, certain advertising matter featuring a purported price figure, either independently or in connection with a pictorial representation of or any allusion to a radio, so as to imply that the set to which such figure refers can be obtained by a purchaser for the price designated, or that the purchaser can obtain the benefit of the featured price without additional cost to him, when such is said not to be a fact.

According to the stipulation, the advertised radio in each instance was not obtainable at retail for the featured price alone, but the purchaser was required to buy additional equipment at extra cost in order to obtain the benefit of such price. This fact was not properly and conspicuously disclosed in the advertising, according to the stipulation.

Dear Sir and Brother:

The fine record which Senator George L. Berry has made during the period he has served as United States Senator from Tennessee justifies me in calling upon the officers and members of the American Federation of Labor and all their friends in Tennessee to support Senator Berry in his campaign for re-election to the United States Senate.

Senator Berry is a part of the organized labor movement. He is President of the Printing Pressmen's Union, an organization chartered by and in affiliation with the American Federation of Labor. Senator Berry has been true to the membership of his organization which he has the honor to represent, and to the people of Tennessee as well, through the fine service which he rendered as a member of the United States Senate.

Government and Taxation

There are about 130 millions of in these United States. We ve national government, forty-ght states, and over 175,000 lo-l units possessing the right to y and spend taxes and to incur debtedness. In the year ending ne 30, 1937, these units spent most 15 billions of dollars.

The total amount of taxes col-cted that year amounted to about 2 billions, or about 19% of the tional income, leaving the re-ainder to be borrowed. Of the 2 billions of dollars of taxes, five illions went to the national gov-rnment and about seven billions the states and the local govern-ent units.

The federal taxes are chiefly ollected from personal and corpo-ate income levies, tobacco and iquor taxes, customs duties, inher-tance, payroll and gasoline taxes. The principal state levies are on gasoline, auto licenses, sales, property, liquor, tobacco, estates and income taxes. And the local units derive most of their revenues from the general property tax, franchise and privileges taxes, fees and fines.

What Taxes Buy.

Assuming that we pay out about one dollar of every five of our income to the national, state and local governments, either directly or indirectly, what do we get for what we pay? To answer this fully and completely would require more time than patience to relate, but at the same time it would be an eye-opener to the citizen and the taxpayer who does not begin to realize the cost of providing the manifold services that the county, city, state and nation provide.

Briefly, we mention a few of the things taxes buy—schools, roads, health protection and investigation, sanitation, drainage, courts, charitable and penal institutions, public welfare agencies and relief, national defense, veterans and old-age pensions, regulation of communications, utilities, transportation, and labor conditions, inland waterways, regional planning, agricultural aids, conservation of forests and natural resources, protection of wildlife, fish hatcheries, police and fire protection, bank supervision, housing and slum clearance programs, sidewalks, parks and playgrounds, and a multitude of services too well known to mention, but seldom recognized as being provided for out of the tax payments.

Are Taxes High?

There is no question but that taxes are higher than they used to be. However before you investigate very much you will probably find it costs more than the taxpayers pay to supply all the services they want — possibly than they really need.

It is true that in the good old days when the roads and streets were either dust or mud, that tax rates were a lot lower. They were lower when we had no automobiles. They were lower when we had no bridges and viaducts, the use of which every citizen now enjoys and seldom notices. Just try to imagine what conditions would be like if everyone started to be his own garbage, junk and sewage disposal agent.

Striking Lumber Workers Driven From Mill Town

Police Join Company Union With Fire Hose and Clubs to Scatter 1,000 Workers and Their Families Over California When They Refuse 17½ Per Cent Wage Cut.

Westwood, Cal.—One thousand members of the Lumber and Sawmill Workers' union, an affiliate of the CIO, and their families are wandering through California after being driven from Westwood because of a labor dispute with the Red River Lumber company. The dispute started when the company announced a wage cut of 17½ per cent. The CIO affiliates refused to accept it and walked out.

The town was divided at once into two camps, with the Industrial Employes' union, a company sponsored enterprise, taking issue with the Lumber and Sawmill Workers' union. Bitterness increased when the company suddenly closed its mill, and followed immediately by the striking workers being evicted from the company-owned homes and company property.

Rioting in Main Street.

The town of Westwood is owned by the lumber company and controlled by the Industrial Workers' union. In an "indignation meeting," the members of this "union" set up a "kangaroo court," and with the support of the police department, which the "union" controls, too, they began to conduct the members of the other union, with their families, to the outskirts of the town and to order them not to return.

The exodus was not conducted without difficulties, however, for more than thirty men were injured in the rioting between the two factions that accompanied the expulsion effort. Two thousand men fought in the main street. Fighting started when several hundred members of the Industrial Workers' union attacked a picket line that had been established by the strikers.

The pickets were driven out, but reinforcements soon arrived, and the fighting became general. The attacking men announced their intention to drive the strikers from Westwood.

Police From Other Towns.

Firse hose was turned on by the police in al alleged effort to halt the ighting, and streams of water poured over the strikers as they overcame the combined police and "industrial union" forces. Scores of men on both sides carried clubs, blackjacks and other handy weapons, and heads were cracked and men fell to the street unconscious.

General Manager T. S. Walker arrived on the scene and sent calls to surrounding towns for assistance. As police from other places poured in, the strikers in small groups were rounded up and with their families taken to the outskirts of the town.

The escorting crowd gathered closely around a striker, and if his explanation was "satisfactory," a "thumbs up" signal was given and he went his way. If he upheld his allegiance to the strikers' union, the signal was "thumbs down," and he was told to pack his belongings, get his family and leave town.

Sheriff Gives "Protection."

Sheriff Olin S. Johnson, who helped to escort the men from town, said he was "not ordering them away," but merely getting them "out for their own protection." The ousted men attempted to hold a mass meetinfi in Red Bluff, a neighboring town, but citizens demanded that the police drive them on.

At one time during the session of the "kangaroo court," a voice called through the loud speaker: "Wanted, four men with rifles." When four men with rifles appeared, they were sent to the home of a striker to rout him, and the police did not interfere as they did so.

CANTORS FORM UNION.

Cleveland, O.—Ohio's first local of the Cantors' and Ministers' union was installed here under American Federation of Labor Charter No. 21676. The cantors are religious singers in orthodox Jewish synagogues.

CROWN PRINCE TELLS OF RISE IN SWEDISH WAGES

Employment and Wage Conditions Are in "Close Proximity" With Those in America, With Rapid Rise Since World War, Gustav Adolf Tells 75,000 Swedes in Chicago.

Chicago.—A more democratic country and government, with more genuine equality before the law than exists today in Sweden, can hardly be found anywhere on earth, said Crown Prince Gustav Adolf, of Sweden, addressing 75,000 mid-westerners of Swedish origin in a mass demonstration at Soldier field. The appearance of the Crown Prince was the climax of a three-day celebration of the anniversary of the landing of the first Swedish colonists in America. He said:

"It is always very difficult to make a reliable comparison between the wage conditions in two different countries, because the price level in both places may be very different, and I shall not attempt here to give any absolute figures, but it can be said as a general conclusion, that the wage level in the mentioned fields in Sweden—industrial work and labor in communications, commerce and the like—has risen uninterruptedly and has sometimes risen sharply during the last thirty or forty years.

Swedish Wages High.

"I should think that if one takes cognizance of certain factors, the wages in Sweden, which before the war were very much lower than in the United States, have now risen to such a high level that they are to be found in close proximity to the American. It is no exaggeration to say that really skilled industrial workers nowadays are well paid in Sweden, something which is just as it should be."

Turning now to the Swedish democracy, the prince told his fellow Swedes, "maybe many of you have your memories either directly or through hearsay from the time before the rise of democracy in our country. Those times are now long since gone.

People Are Contented.

"I can assure you that a more democratic country, a more thoroughly democratic government, and a more genuine equality before the law than exists in Sweden can hardly be found anywhere on earth. I also believe that the Swedish people are content because of this. We can in Sweden, in reality, not conceive of anything else than a free and democratic society, based upon confidence and cooperation between people of various social positions, between rich and poor, high and low."

Equal Pay for Women Workers.

Washington. — The minimum wage laws of five Latin-America countries establish the principle of equal pay for women for equal work, according to an article in the Pan-American Union. In Bolivia, the equal pay rule applies to salaried employes; Brazil and Mexico laws establish the principle for wage-earning employes; in Cuba, both salaried employes and wage-earners come under the equal pay provision, and Peru applies it to home workers.

When a firm, decisive spirit is recognized, it is curious to see how the space clears around a man and leaves him room and freedom. —Foster.

Organized Labor Raises Standards of Workers

By DR. CHARLES STELZLE
Executive Director, Good Neighbor League.

Organized labor raises the standards of the workers through the labor press. Probably no force is greater in the development of labor's cause, and to no one feature is organized labor more indebted than to the labor press of the country. With its record of progress, its constant urging toward better things through active propaganda methods, its lessons in technical training, thus making of its readers better workmen, its appeal to better living, its earnest attention to family life and welfare—these are some of the factors which make the labor press a power for good.

Organized labor is raising the standards of the workers by fighting the battles of all the people. It is carrying with it even the lowest and most degraded. Every victory won for the men and women at the top means a higher level for those lower down. While the trade unionist may, for a time, belong to the aristocracy of labor, he soon makes of that aristocracy a democracy for all.

Organized labor is raising the standards of the workers by compelling them to think rapidly and to speak clearly. The trade union movement has developed a company of speakers who are abundantly able to present the cause of the toilers. That is constantly being demonstrated at the national meetings of labor bodies, where statesmanship of the highest order is demanded, and where some of the addresses would easily rank with the best that are delivered in the conferences and conventions of national bodies, composed of those who are supposed to be intellectually superior.

Organized labor is raising the standards of the workers by the education of its members in special meetings and lecture courses, and in supplying special courses of study. The educational work being done for the preparation of intelligent and informed leadership is particularly important, because organized labor is being confronted by highly paid specialists, representing industry in the making of agreements which affect the well-being of many thousands of workers.

Organized labor is raising the standards of the workers by lifting the immigrant to higher levels. No organization has done more in this direction during the past generation than the trade union. It has been done not merely through ordinary educational processes, but by the example set by American workers who have been accustomed to standards expected of workers in our democracy.

Organized labor is on the alert to elevate, in every way possible, the general welfare of those who are bearing the burden of the world's work. Its task has just begun. There remains yet much to be accomplished, but unquestionably it will rapidly eliminate such features as stand in the way of its highest development, and push aggressively for the standards which should be attained by every honest toiler.

SOUTHERN LABOR "SPOTS"

Atlanta, Ga., July 25.—George L. Googe, southern representative of the American Federation of Labor, returned last week from Geneva, Switzerland, where he attended the International Labor conference. Mr. Googe was appointed by the state department, with the approval of the president, as one of this country's representatives at the Geneva conference. He was gone several weeks, during which time he visited several countries in Europe after adjournment of the conference, and gained much valuable information about labor conditions in other countries.

During the absence of Mr. Googe, the A. F. of L. organizing work was directed by Paul J. Aymon. Mr. Googe expressed keen appreciation for the manner in which the organizing forces carried on while he was away. He also expressed gratitude to the officers of the several state federations of labor in his territory, and to the officers of the city central labor unions, local union officials, and international representatives for their constructive work during his absence.

Beginning with next week's newsletter, Mr. Googe will write an article each week, dealing with particular subjects of interest to the workers in America. In this series of articles he will tell of the great work being done by the international labor organization, conditions of labor in various countries visited by him, and compare working conditions in America with those of other countries.

Asheville, N. C.—The Asheville union scale of wages has been adopted as the prevailing wage rate to be paid on the city auditorium, it being a PWA project, with the city officials as sponsors. Several conferences were held with Hon. Pat M. Burdette, city manager, and the city officials by a committee representing the Asheville Building Trades council, and announcement that Asheville's union wage scale had been adopted was most pleasing to the building trades membership and all other trade unionists and their friends.

Much concern had been felt over this job, because of the controversy between the Asheville Citizen-Times company and their contractor, L. L. Merchant, and the Asheville Building trades. The newspapers are having a new building erected to house their publications, and in so doing refused to pay the union wage scale. The two newspapers are owned and operated by one firm, which also owns and operates the only broadcasting station in western North Carolina. The newspapers are "rat" papers, that is, the publishing company refuses to deal with the printing trades union, and employs nonunion printers.

The president of the Citizen-Times company served many years as chairman of the open shop division of the Newspaper Publishers' association. It is charged by many trade unionists in Asheville that the publishers' efforts to beat down wage scale of the building trades was but another effort on the part of the newspaper publishers to destroy the labor movement in Asheville.

The building trades committee submitted to city officials a list of building projects which are in course of construction or have been completed within recent months, showing that the union scale is the prevailing scale of wages in Asheville, and that the Citizen-Times job is the only job where a lower rate is being paid. It was this evidence, it is said, which influenced the city officials to adopt the union scale as the prevailing scale for the city auditorium job. Citizens generally and union members particularly have expressed keen appreciation for the stand taken by the city officials in the auditorium matter.

Atlanta, Ga., July 25.—With Labor day only a few weeks away, central labor unions and local organizations throughout the south are making preparations for celebrations which, from all indications, will eclipse all such Labor day celebrations in the south's history. The A. F. of L.'s southern headquarters in Atlanta report more requests for Labor day speakers than have ever before come to this office. Reports from many central labor unions announce that programs for the day have been completed, leaving the Labor day committee free to devote their efforts to the preparations for carrying out their programs.

"This indicates the tremendous interest being taken in our American Federation of Labor unions," said George L. Googe, in charge of the A. F. of L.'s organization work in the south, in speaking of the unusual preparations being made for proper celebration of Labor day. Continuing, Mr. Googe stated that some of the central labor unions had requested certain speakers for Labor day early in the summer, even before his departure for Geneva.

Reports also indicate hat the general public is showing more interest than ever before in the celebrations to be staged on the first Monday in September. This is taken to mean that the public is becoming more keenly aware of the great importance of the American Federation of Labor, hence the desire on the part of the public to participate in the Labor day celebrations as a mark of their high esteem for the movement which has done so much for the permanent advancement of America and the nation's ideals.

Wilmington, N. C.—Charter for a newly organized local union of teamsters and chauffeurs has been ordered, and will be installed, union officers named, affiliation with the State Federation of Labor completed, and delegates named to attend the state convention which meets here on Aug. 8. The new union was organized by the organizing committee of the Central Labor union, headed by C. B. Kornegay, president of the central body. Other members of the committee are C. B. Gore, secretary of the Central Labor union; A. M. Hughes, state vice-president, and Jimmie Curtis, one of Wilmington's most active trades unionists.

Atlanta, Ga., July 25.—An agreement was signed here last week by the Pine Mountain Granite company, of Lithonia, and the Lithonia branch of the Granite Cutters' International association. The contract covers a period of one year and provides for closed shop conditions, a dollar an hour for work on building stone, 92 cents an hour for work on monumental stone, and 75 cents an hour for curbstone work. Price and a half for overtime, with 40-hour week, and other features of especial importance to the granite cutters.

This agreement makes the granite industry in the south an almost 100 per cent unionized industry. It will be recalled that more than a score of agreements were signed in the Elberton and Atlanta districts during June, these being renewal contracts which expired on July 1. Every granite concern of any importance in the south is now working under union shop conditions, with signed agreements with the granite cutters' international in effect.

Dick Hudson, southern representative of the Granite Cutters' International association, represented the organization in the negotiations with the Lithonia company. Mr. Hudson also organized the Elberton and Atlanta unions last year, and represented the organization in the renewal of the agreemtnts during June.

At Rion, S. C., where the Heywards have long ruled the roost and owned the rock, Mr. Hudson perfected organization of the granite cutters, and the union was certified as the bargaining agency. Heywards too kan appeal, and the matter is in the hands of the national labor board. When that spot is finally cleared up, Mr. Hudson says, the granite industry in the south will be one of the most thoroughly organized industries below the Mason and Dixon line.

I have always heartily supported such legislation as is calculated to produce better wages, living conditions, public health service, educational advantages and all other things beneficial to laboring people. Barkley and Lewis Indorsed by A. F. L.

Workers Asked to Support Progressives in Kentucky and Maryland.

President William Green made two extremely important political announcements this week. In formal statements, he urged the renomination of Senator Alben W. Barkley in Kentucky, and asked that Congressman David J. Lewis be selected in place of Senator Millard E. Tydings by the democrats of Maryland.

Mr. Green made his declaration concerning Barkley in the course of a radio address on Wednesday evening. He quoted from a letter he had written to the secretary of the Kentucky State Federation of Labor in which he described Senator Barkley's record as "indeed unusual and exceptional," and added:

"What more could a representative in congress do to merit and secure the support of the American Federation for re-election than to vote 100 per cent favorable on labor measures originated and supported by the federation?"

Pleading with Maryland voters to back Lewis, Green said: "I would classify his record as 100 per cent favorable to labor."

Additional significance was attached to the indorsements because it is known that enemies of Barkley and Lewis made strenuous efforts to induce the federation to remain neutral in the Kentucky and Maryland contests.

Douglas Corrigan plainly has heard that old song: "Nothing is too good for the Irish." And he'll make the authorities believe it.

Cooks' and Waiters' Scraps

Louise Tinker, Correspondent

Knoxville—Today, friends, we change our column the least bit. Your correspondent is up here in the heart of the Smokies. There's no local news in our collection this week. It will concern the labor movement of Knoxville. We're mighty proud of the culinary workers' alliance here—few members but much interest. The prospects of organizing this craft seems promising. We're getting cooperation from the Central Labor Union and all its affiliates.

Was among those present at Central Body Monday night. Yes, we were introduced and we spoke briefly—briefly. The delegation indorsed candidates for the forthcoming election in Knox county. Immediately after Central Body disbanded on Monday night several of us went out to Skeets' place (a union house). "Skeets" is a former member of the musicians' local, so we have been informed.

When in Knoxville stop at the Bar Sandwich shop for eats—it's a union house. We have been there more than once and we like it. The card in that restaurant really has helped their business. Lucile Thornburg tells me that it is impossible to get served there during the lunch hour because of the increased business. The room space is inadequate for the increasing customers.

We're working with Maynard Baird while here, and, folks, this Knoxville labor leader really has his whole heart in this campaign.

It is generally understood here in the labor movement that Erskine Mabee has paroled yours truly to Mr. Baird during our sojourn here.

The taxi drivers' strike here is getting to be something else. We were mighty proud to see on the bulletin board in the labor temple the donations from our own Central Labor union and the Painters 226. These boys really are a loyal bunch. They deserve help.

Well, folks, this is all for this time. Next week we hope to have a lot of interesting items for you.

LABEL LEADERS

Marie Reynolds (Mrs. Paul) has been sick for the last ten days with a throat and ear ailment. We hope she improves right along—we miss seeing her around.

The report came in the news service the other day that almost every brand of coffee is union-made except Maxwell House . . . of course, only our Rich-Maid carries the union label. Union people should insist on labeled merchandise. But, if you happen to be at a place where you cannot obtain Rich-Maid coffee, then do not buy Maxwell House.

I notice that Marie Moore is right up in the running in the Drums of Dixie contest. Marie is a member of Culinary Workers, Local 574, and we wish her luck.

* * *

TIME and LIFE are non-union. Do not buy these magazines. The Typos are putting on a concerted drive to unionize these publications . . . help them out by refusing to buy TIME and LIFE.

Wanta buy a bargain? Summer clothes are on sale in nearly all the stores now—and it's a grand time to get some really lovely dresses at reduced prices. I found some Phoenix sport sox at The Vogue yesterday—those heavy ones, you know, that feel so good with tennis and sport shoes—they sold for 50 cents a pair early in the summer and now they are just 29 cents.

* * *

And Wee Moderns has some grand buys for the kiddies, too . . . dresses, swim suits, play suits and such. As a matter of fact, I know a member of the Label league who is rather small and she found a dress for herself at that store.

White Abel is out and about again after an operation. He says nobody can make a sick man out of him for long.

MORE ABOUT GREEN EDITORIAL

The writer knows the trouble that the AFL had when the Davenport hosiery mill union employes suddenly began losing their jobs—after they joined the union. Only in recent weeks the labor movement has been treated to the spectacle of non-union painters painting the mill. Mr. McReynolds is closely associated with that mill.

Yet the hand that guides the destinies of nations as chairman of the foreign affairs committee has been unable to prevail upon his business associates to be fair to labor.

Mr. L. D. Miller does not have a congressional record. He has a record in our state legislature, however. And that record is to the effect that not only did he vote for every labor measure, but he actually sponsored many of them, followed them through committees, and fought for their enactment on the floor.

Since serving in the legislature he has been fair to organized labor, without any exception.

We have till now refused to write an editorial for the congressional candidates. Since an official communication, addressed to someone not directly connected with the Chattanooga movement was given to us with a request for publication, it is only fair that the complete record be given—of both candidates.

us before and since that time, it is not in accordance with our laws to give you our official indorsement because of the fact that you do not have a union card.

The fact that you do not have a union card, we realize, is because you have not worked at a trade or profession where it was possible for you to become a member of organized labor.

We take this means of informing you, as a courtesy to you, just why your indorsement was not passed on the third and final reading tonight in Central Body.

Respectfully yours,

Secretary, Chattanooga Central Labor Union.

C. P. Howard Is Dead; Printers' Union Chief

Succumbs to Heart Attack in Colorado Springs—Was 58 Years Old.

Colorado Springs, Colo.—Chas. P. Howard, president of the International Typographical union, died of a heart attack at the Antlers hotel here June 21.

Mr. Howard, subject to heart attacks during the last few years, went to his room in the hotel and lay down on his bed. A short time later his wife, Mrs. Margaret Howard, went to the room and found that he had died, apparently in his sleep. He was 58 years old.

He came to Colorado Springs the previous Sunday to attend a meeting of the trustees of the Union Printers' home. He had attended a session of the board just before going to his hotel room.

Mr. Howard was born in Harvel, Ill., Sept. 14, 1879. He worked in the Illinois coal fields in his youth. When he was 10 years of age, his parents moved to western Kansas, where he worked as a printer's devil after school hours. He lived in Oklahoma and Missouri until his father died, when he took up the printer's trade in earnest at 20 years of age in Chicago.

His first union office was the vice-presidency of the International Typographical union, to which he was elected in 1922. He became president a short time later when John McParland died. In 1924 he was defeated for the presidency by James M. Lynch, but came back two years later to win over Lynch. He had held the office of president ever since.

Mr. Howard was called to Washington in 1918 by Secretary of Labor Wilson to direct a governmental bureau for efficiency in industry during the war. During the existence of the national recovery administration, he served on the labor advisory committees and was spokesman for five international printing trade unions in conferences for codification of the industry.

The funeral services here were attended by a large number of labor leaders and friends. Interment was in the Union Printers' Home cemetery. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Howard.

Some of the Accomplishments of Sheriff Frank J. Burns' Administration

Paid Adv.

When Frank J. Burns was first elected sheriff of Hamilton county, his first duty to the public and himself was to choose a loyal, efficient and courteous staff of employes. This he did and to date he has no regrets, although he has found it necessary to make a few changes.

He promised the people of Hamilton county to cut out the evil of fee-grabbing. This he has done to the very best of his ability. No longer are the people robbed by fee-grabbing deputies. Every criminal warrant that is served is served by a salaried officer. Fee-grabbing will never be tolerated as long as Frank J. Burns is sheriff.

Sheriff Burns has installed in the Hamilton county jail a new, modern and sanitary dining room in which to feed the prisoners. This new addition bears the stamp of approval of the United States government. This new dining room eliminates the old unsanitary method of feeding the prisoners and enables all the prisoners, both white and black, to eat the same kind of food and all of it they desire.

Of all the major crimes that have been committed in Hamilton county during the past four years, only one case remains unsolved.

During the entire administration of Sheriff Burns there has not been one jail break.

Sheriff Burns has seen to it personally that the Hamilton county jail was kept clean and in a sanitary condition and has always received an excellent report from the federal authorities as to the proper care of the prisoners and jail.

To give you an idea of just how much work is done at the county jail alone: During the year of 1937 the sheriff and his staff handled 6,130 prisoners. During the four years of the administration they have handled approximately 25,000 prisoners.

The bookkeeping department of this administration has received an excellent report on all audits made of the records of his office. Sheriff Burns' office was the only county office to receive a report from the Griffin-Hagen auditors of Chicago, stating that the sheriff's records were in an excellent condition.

Sheriff Burns has installed a finger-printing system in the county jail office, which co-operates with the federal bureau of investigation. This is something that has never been done by a previous sheriff.

Sheriff Burns is at the present time working and planning on a radio system as fine as can be perfected to be installed to aid in the apprehension of criminals in Hamilton county. He hopes to install this system in the near future as soon as the money becomes available.

Plans have been made to have an old-fashioned handshaking get-together meeting in honor of Sheriff Burns, and a special invitation to come and bring with you your friends. A splendid program has been arranged with our good friend Hays Clark as toastmaster. There will not be a dull moment.

This meeting will be held at the courthouse on the night of Friday, July 29, 1938, at 7:30 p.m.

CHATTANOOGA BAKERY CLOSED WHEN MANAGEMENT REFUSES PAY INCREASES, UNION SHOP

Local Manager Asks for "More Time" as He Hastily Fills Warehouses in Preparation for Layoff to Fight "Dissension."

The Chattanooga Bakery was closed by a strike of members of Local 25, Bakery and Confectionery Workers, last Wednesday afternoon. The employes of that plant, which makes cakes and crackers, had organized themselves to about 80 per cent, and several weeks ago presented an agreement to be negotiated with the management through Mr. Richard Bean, in charge of the company.

Mr. Bean from the start flatly refused to consider the question of the closed shop, and insisted that wages already in effect were satisfactory with him.

Mr. S. C. Hutcheson, majority owner of the company, left for Hot Springs, Ark., after the first conference between the union and the bakery, which he attended. Mr. Hutcheson is in Hot Springs for his health, and Mr. Bean requested the union to hold off negotiations until Mr. Hutcheson's return.

In the meantime, Mr. Bean admitted frankly that he was as rapidly as possible filling all his warehouses with his products, telling his salesmen to try to load up his customers because "there would be a strike." Since organization started in the plant, some twenty-six additional employes were hired.

Feeling that further time should not be granted pending the return of Mr. Hutcheson, the union called for a showdown and the strike went on.

According to the union, wages paid in the unionized National Biscuit Company in Atlanta are double that paid here, and the hours in Atlanta are much less. Mr. Bean says that he cannot increase his payroll and make any money, due to the fact that he is "not a good manager and that the National Biscuit company has good management."

As is usually the case, the bakery holds that the closed shop would take away from the bakery the control of its affairs, stubbornly refusing to recognize closed shop conditions in this city in other plants which still retain "control" of its affairs.

Building Trades Elect

President, W. J. Everhart (Ironworkers).

Vice-President — Harry Davies (Bricklayers).

Recording Secretary—James R. Moss (Hodcarriers).

Financial Secretary and Treasurer—L. C. Batey (Plasterers).

Sergeant - at - Arms — W. B. Smythers (Sheet Metal Workers).

Outer Guard—H. F. Blansit (Truck Drivers).

Trustees—O. A. Cook, A. Crawford and F. H. May. A. Crawford was elected delegate to the Central Labor union.

A foreigner going through some of our states might wonder if the primaries he has been seeing are just a preliminary contest, what the big fight will be.

Wisconsin Unions Near Complete Organization

HEADS BAKERS' DRIVE

FRED KUNTZ

Milwaukee.—Two Wisconsin unions, the Teamsters and the Bakers, are within cheering distance of complete organization through gains made within the past year, especially recently.

According to William Nagosne, of the Milwaukee Truck Drivers' Joint council, the pending agreement with the Hillside Garage and Transit company, contractors for the A. & P. Tea company, closes the last unorganized gap in the state.

The Bakery and Confectionery Workers membership has considerably more than doubled during the year. With the agreement between the union and the A. & P., the present membership is given by Fred Kuntz, business agent for Local No. 205 and international representative for the state, as approximately 1,850 as compared with about 860 one year ago.

State Labor Helps.

Among newly organized or reorganized locals and those making outstanding growth in membership, Mr. Kuntz includes Fond du Lac, Oshkosh, Stevens Point, La Crosse, Green Bay, Eau Claire, Wausau, Racine, Kenosha, Manitowoc, Sheboygan, Madison and Superior.

"This leaves us with only one large unorganized bakery in the entire state," Kuntz said. "Of course, it must be understood that we had lots of help. Notable in this respect was that given by the state federation, and the local central bodies. Within our own ranks, the international office, and the district offices of Chicago, St. Paul and elsewhere rallied round in splendid style."

"Another major contribution has been the loyalty of union men and women in general in demanding the label on the bread they purchase.

"We have amply demonstrated, through improved working conditions, that the best weapon of the wage-earner is still his economic power. One union agreement, under which each individual employer must be directly concerned with and responsible for the welfare of his employes, is worth a thousand laws."

NOTICE

Chattanooga Central Labor Union will meet Monday night in regular session, Central Labor Hall, West Seventh Street, at 7:30 p.m. All delegates are requested and expected to be present.

WIRE TWISTERS EAT AND PLAY ALL DAY LONG

Contractors and Electricians Spend Saturday at Graysville.

Local 175, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, along with electrical contractors, journeyed to Graysville, Tenn., early last Saturday morning for a picnic and program which lasted until 7 o'clock that night.

The union supplied 125 fried chickens, thirty cases of soft drinks, a barrel of lemonade, potato salad and all the dressing.

The "bosses" put up some nice prizes, and with such a fine start, they all had a great time. Perry Daly, from the TVA local, was drafted to help out with the cooking, while Pickwick dam members were special guests.

It is charged that Brother Robert Duncan thought the picnic was to last all week, because he brought with him two chairs and an army cot.

Brother Matheny was chairman of the committee, and one of the Graysville residents said that it was the best picnic ever held there.

Truck Drivers Start Campaign

Local 515, Truck Drivers, placed the Arrow Transfer and Storage company, 1208 King street, on the unfair list of the local at the last meeting.

The Building Trades council joined the Truck Drivers' campaign and also placed this firm on the unfair list of the Building Trades council at the meeting Wednesday night.

ELEV. CONSTRUCTOR LOSES HIS MOTHER

O. A. WALKER BADLY HURT AS AUTOMOBILE OVERTURNS ON WAY TO CHATTANOOGA

Leg Broken and Face Bruised—Brought to Patten Hotel—Mrs. Walker on Way to Husband.

Hundreds of friends in Chattanooga were shocked to receive news last Wednesday afternoon that O. A. Walker, representative of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, suffered severe injuries as his car overturned on his way back to Chattanooga.

Mr. Walker was coming back to the city and was just out of Cartersville, Ga., when his car hit a greasy spot on the highway. The car went completely out of control and turned over several times.

He was brought to the Patten hotel, where he will stay until he is able to get back on his feet.

Mrs. Walker was immediately notified and is due to arrive in Chattanooga early Friday morning to nurse her husband.

Brother Walker is one of the most admired representatives of any international union, and his hosts of friends here consider him as a Chattanoogan so completely has he been accepted as a real fellow.

Hotel Unions Join in Organization Drive

Council Is Formed in Nation's Metropolis to Enroll 100,000 Employes in Ranks or Organized Labor.

New York, N. Y.—Six local unions of national and international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor established the New York Hotel Trades council here to carry on jointly the drive to organize the 100,000 employes in New York's hotel industry. Jay Rubin is president of the council.

It was disclosed in a report on a survey made by the unions that they have been certified as collective bargaining agency by the state labor relations board or have obtained agreements with the managements of forty hotels, employing about 12,000 workers.

The locals affiliated with the council are: Hotel and Club Employes' union, Local 6; International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 3; International Union of Operating Engineers, Locals 94 and 94a; Hotel Service Employes' union, Local 32a, and Firemen and Oilers, Local Union No. 56.

SUGAR STRIKE IS ENDED; A. F. L. UNION GETS PACT

Philadelphia. — The month-old strike of the Sugar Refinery Workers' union, A. F. of L., ended this week, when the Franklin Sugar Refinery company signed an agreement with the organization. Two other companies—the Pennsylvania and the McCahan firms — had signed up the previous week. About 2,700 workers are involved.

The agreements are identical, providing for the union shop, annual vacations with pay and interplant seniority rights.

Bakery Workers Win Election by Overwhelming Vote

Chicago.—Another decisive victory over the CIO has been won by the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International union, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor.

Local No. 452 of the Bakers was the almost unanimous choice of employes of the Up-To-Date Candy company, of New York City, who indicated their preference for the A. F. of L. union by a vote of 96 to 2 in an election ordered by the national labor relations board.

Immediately after the election, the Bakery Workers' local entered into a contract with the company which netted the workers a substantial wage increase, a 40-hour week, time and one-half for overtime, and vacations with pay.

In addition to the Up-To-Date Candy company, this local union is in contractual relations with six leading candy firms, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Meat Cutters Sign Up Seven Kingan Plants

Weekly Wage Rates of $1.12 an Hour Gained for Skilled Workers.

Chicago.—A general agreement with Kingan & Co., meat packers, covering their seven main plants, has recently been negotiated by the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America.

The contract stipulates that membership in the union is a condition of employment. More than 5,000 workers are covered in the contract.

Kingan & Co. is one of the oldest meat packing concerns in the United States. It was established more than one hundred years ago.

Minimum wages under the terms of the contract are 60 cents per hour and some of the higher skilled classifications stipulate wage rates as high as $1.12 per hour.

Sausage Firm Signs Pact With Butchers

Agreement With Oscar Mayer and Company Covers 1,100 Workers in Chicago and Madison.

Chicago, Ill.—The Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America have succeeded in negotiating a strictly union agreement with Oscar Mayer & Co., one of the largest and oldest sausage manufacturing companies in the nation. With the consummation of this understanding for the Mayer plant at Chicago, all employes of the Oscar Mayer company are now members of the union.

The company operates two main plants, one at Madison, Wis., employing 700 workers and their Chicago plant employing 400 workers.

The contract negotiated by the Butcher Workmen is the first strictly union arrangement that Oscar Mayer & Co. ever made with a labor union.

Taxicab Responsibility

Taxicab operators seem to be determined that they will not make themselves responsible to the public in case of accidents to pedestrians or passengers due to the hazards of the business. At the last commission meeting they told the city board that they could not secure insurance at a cost satisfactory to them—that if they did insure they would have to raise their rates, already far less than other cities in Tennessee which demands insurance safety.

The cabbie owners claim that the Central Body is attempting to force them to insure in order to unionize their non-union drivers, although it is well known that the chamber of commerce years ago originally sponsored the demand that our streets be made safe against the swarms of cabs which whizz and bang about with not much regard for safety, let alone concern or responsibility toward their victims.

How the insurance measure would force the cabs to become union was not explained.

However, the owners have never yet explained why a great many of their cabs are registered in drivers' names and not registered to the companies. Records show that in some instances the cabs use out-of-town license tabs.

As it is now, if a racing cab knocks down, maims or kills a citizen and the company is sued and a judgment is rendered, it is sometimes found that there is nothing to the company but a can of paint and a brush with which to paint on rapidly changing colors and names. Because of this many victims, if able to rise to their feet, simply thank their stars they were not killed outright and refuse to enter suit against a phantom company with no assets or responsibility.

Most public carriers are forced by law to make themselves responsible to its public for damage done.

Taxicabs should not be exempted, and it is hoped that the commissioner of police will take off the streets every cab not insured, even to the extent of removing from business every one of them if they decide to stage a "sit-down" strike against the law.

FOUNDRY STRIKE SETTLED.

Waukegan, Ill.—Federal Labor Mediator Harry E. Scheck announced here that the strike of CIO union employes at the Chicago Hardware Foundry company plant at North Chicago, had been settled. The strikers, out since June 6, went back to work with a 5 per cent wage cut, he said.

Comment On World Events

One chilly night in the fall of 1792 an adventurer named Necho Allen in the hills of the Appalachians built a small campfire and rolled up in his blanket for a night's sleep.

In the morning when he awakened, the fire, to his amazement, was still burning, a deep red glow—a fire from which came an intense and unusual heat. Allen investigated. Why, he wondered, had the fire burned all night, and still burned bright and hot.

He noted that he had built his fire beside some black rocks, and now it was the rocks that were burning and glowing in the morning's new light.

As early as 1180 an English monk had noted the finding of some black rocks "that burned," but nothing came of that.

Allen, the pioneer, was different. A forward thinking man, he realized that rocks do not burn, and that here in these black rocks was a new and unknown force.

Others were told of the remarkable "black rocks," and soon it was found that they in reality did burn.

An industrial revolution was at hand, to change our whole way of living. In the next fifty years the tremendous unforeseen forces of anthracite, which Allen had discovered, were harnessed. Man delved deep into the earth for the "black rocks," and with the use of them, launched the incredible march of progress in modern civilization.

Today from the "black rocks" comes the purifying force that changes ore to steel, drives mighty engines of transportation across the expanse of a continent, mighty ships on the bosom of the ocean and with the power generated, lights the thousands of cities and towns.

It is 146 years since Necho Allen built his eventful fire in the wooded wilderness. Today a third of a billion tons of "black rocks" are used every twelve months.

What new and mighty forces still remain hidden in the hills and plains of America? Have all of the nation's natural resources been tapped?

That question dwindles in comparison with the more pertinent question of the fullest and most competent use of the resources that have been uncovered. There are still new worlds to conquer—worlds existing in the forces that are in every daw use now.

Harper's magazine in a recent issue publishes a translation of a substantial part of the official nazi handbook for the instruction of youth in Germany. It is a revealing document, especially in the light of the abolition of German trade unions, with confiscation of their funds, by Hitlerites, and many union officials sent to the concentration camps.

"Even today the racial ideas of national socialism (nazism) have implacable opponents. Freemasons, Marxists (meaning real socialists) and the Christian church join hands in brotherly accord on this point.

"The worldwide order of Freemasons conceals its Jewish plans for ruling the world behind the catchwords of 'Mankind' or 'Humanity.' . . .

"Marxism has the same goal as Freemasonry. . . .

"The Christians, above all the Roman church, reject the race idea with the citation 'before God all men are equal.' All who have the Christian belief, whether Jews, bush niggers, or whites, are dearer to them and more worthwhile than a German who does not confess Christianity."

* * *

As to peaceful intentions.

"By German territory we mean every region of central Europe which is inhabited by Germans in more or less permanent settlements, and has received its cultural impulse from the German people. . . . The German reich, the political area of the German people, includes only a small part of the German territory."

* * *

Trade unions are entitled to claim credit for having brought a beneficent social reform into the forefront of legislative projects, said Sir Walter Citrine, general secretary of the English Trades Union Congress, speaking at Dundee in connection with the campaign organized by the Dundee Trades council. It was, he said, a most significant fact that a government committee, having exhaustively examined the whole question, had unanimously recommended that annual holidays with pay should, without undue delay, be made a part of the contract of employment of all employes. He attributed this strong consensus of view to the growing realization that modern conditions of work imposed upon the wage-earners an increasing nervous strain.

Rationalization, mechanization, speeding-up, and the multiplication of monotonous, repetitive forms of occupation, have deprived the worker today of the satisfaction which the craftsman used to be able to obtain from the actual performance of his job. It has become an absolute social necessity to provide the worker with fuller opportunities of leisure and recreation to relieve the strain and monotony of industrial employment. The Trade Union Approved Societies have evidence in their records that modern conditions are taking their toll of the workers in the form of an increasing number of cases of nervous breakdown.

That is one practical argument in favor of a reform which would enable the workers to enjoy a share of the benefits accruing from the immense and almost illimitable development of society's productive resources.

NEW YORK CLUBS SIGN A. F. OF L. CONTRACTS

New York, N. Y.—The Hotel and Club Employes' union, Local 6, an A. J. Obermeier, secretary-treasurer of the local union.

Miss Iris Finch, of our own organization, was up to see me one day last week. Miss Finch and I took a trip over to Norris dam.

The taxi strike is still in progress. There's a possibility of an early settlement. Conspiracy charges have been lodged against R. P. ("Pat") Patterson, erudite manager of the Knoxville Cab company, and twelve of his strikebreaker employes.

There's very, very few of our labor people here who smoke non-union cigarettes. Wherever one goes, whoever one sees there's Raleighs.

H. V. Ivester is here in behalf of the operating engineers. This is Mr. Ivester's home, but we knew him during his stay in Chattanooga.

We're watching with much interest the way that attractive blond, Marie Moore, is staying in the race of the Drums of Dixie. She's one of those culinary workers you know. Marie, we're pulling for you and every day we clip the coupon from the hometown paper.

Went out and bought ourselves a dictionary a few days ago. Who said we could get along without Webster anyhow?

Arthur R. Cook, of the Pittsburgh office of the A. F. of L., is here among the employes of the aluminum company at Maryville and Alcoa.

We were before Central Body on Monday night asking that they concur in some actions we might have to take during the week. Ere now and the time you receive your paper there will appear before the door of one restaurant in this town a young lady in full dress regalia—something new to the restaurant operators here.

Mrs. Louise Petty came over to see me this week-end.

George Googe, our southern representative, was here the first part of the week. We enjoyed more than one visit with him. "Uncle" Jim Barrett was here, too. Hope none of you missed Mr. Google's radio address on Tuesday night.

We have been informed that the picket at the Busy Bee in our own city makes one swell picket. To you, Miss Stoner, we say thanks and we know it will be a pleasure to work with you when we are home again.

W. J. ("Bill") Everhart blew into town—and Central Body—last night. We asked him for ten cents "hush" money to keep the things we knew about him to ourselves and he quietly drew a greenback from his pocket. We're always glad to see our homefolks.

Most of the restaurants here close on Sunday.

All of you know how well we like excitement—plenty of it. Well, we almost wound up in the midst of a free-for-all one morning about 2 o'clock. Here people are just getting to bed as we people are cutting off our alarm clocks and taking that last stretch. We have formed a habit of going out for something to eat at 2 o'clock in the morning. This particular morning one of the culinary workers and myself were sitting in a popular restaurant on the main street when in walked a man from both Knoxville and Chattanooga. He was smoking a non-union cigarette. We told him as how we did not know of anything any worse than smoking non-union cigarettes unless it was being a "scab" cab driver. There was in this restaurant one of the strikebreakers from the Knoxville Cab company. When I made that statement this acquaintance of ours made one leap and bounded after this cabby. You should have seen him taking-off. Lindbergh never did a more beautiful act. The last we saw of this strikebreaker he was doing a marvelous disappearing act down Gay street.

We've a conference in a very few minutes with the president of the restaurant association, so, friends, we'll be seeing you.

Street Railway Union Wins Pay Boost Pact

Agreement Negotiated in Minneapolis and St. Paul Adds Over $300,000 to Pay Envelopes of Union Members.

Minneapolis, Minn.—A third of a million dollars, consisting of increases in wages ranging from 3 cents to 13 cents an hour, vacations with pay and a number of very important improvements in working conditions have been awarded by a board of arbitration to trainmen, bus operators and miscellaneous street railway employes in Minneapolis and St. Paul.

The arbitration was between Division 1005 of the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railaway and Motor Coach Employes of America and the Twin City Rapid Transit company. The chairman of the board was Federal Judge Matthew M. Joyce. Howard Y. Williams represented the union and B. G. Noah represented the company on the board.

This Amalgamated union came into being in 1934. During the short period of its existence, it has increased the wages of one-man operators from 53 cents to 71 cents an hour, has obtained a week's vacation with pay for the men, and has gained provisions in its contract with the company calling for pay for time on duty, such as travel time, reporting time, and checking-in time, as well as a guarantee of at least 1½ hours for any piecework that is done. The arbitration award grants increases ranging up to 13 cents an hour to the men in the miscellaneous departments, such as the garage, power house and shops.

The hearings before the board extended over a period of several months and were concluded on June 11. The award, handed down on July 19, was made retroactive, so that the men get back pay to Nov. 1, 1937.

O. David Zimring, of the labor bureau of Middle West, Chicago, presented the union's case.

Big Business Prepares "Drive" To Sell "New System" to People

New Version of "American System" Believed Ready to Pull White Rabbit From Hat to Discredit Recent Industrial Laws.

Washington. — Big industry is launching another of its "drives" to sell the American people on the "American system of business." The last "drive" of this nature was conducted by the National Association of Manufacturers and ended abruptly in an investigation by the senate civil liberties committee.

The new "drive," it is explained, is felt to be necessary because "politicians" have been selling some other system to the American people, and "slowly washing away the solid foundations of the American system."

Announcement of the "drive" comes at a moment when the senate civil liberties committee is again delving into the dark places of big industry; this time, the affairs and activities of the Republic Steel company in fighting collective bargaining by its employes and engaging in good old-time civil warfare in its steel making communities.

Details Are Withheld.

No one in the national capital seems to know exactly what the "American system" that is to be sold to the people consists of; if the evidence brought out before the civil liberties committee is a criterion, it consists of about everything that labor unions from the first day of their start have denounced and fought.

Certain "high spots" in the proposed "drive" are made manifest, however. For one thing there is "too much government supervision" over the way and manner of doing business to please the magnates at the top. There's the Wagner labor relations act, for instance, which all of big business believes should be repealed without delay, with a return possibly to the law of the jungle in industrial relations.

There is opposition also to certain features of the new system which have been brought in lately through new federal legislation. It is no longer so easy for big industry to unite in trade combinations, associations, cartels and similar set-ups to fix prices and limit competition. Another discarded gadget is the device to generate vast combines of capital and plant equipment through the use of certain corporate and financial devices, including holding companies.

Company Police on Skids.

Another condition not so prevalent in industrial communities, or at least on the way out, is that of the armed company guard and private police which in former days ruthlessly waged civil war in factory communities when workers engaged in strike or asked for the rights of collective bargaining and improved working conditions.

In the good old days, it is pointed out, big business did not exert much effort to inform the American people of what its system consisted of, except such as was made manifest through practices that have lately come under the direct ban of new federal laws. The popular conception of the system ran to the outlines of rugged individualism, ruthless suppression of unions, low wages, long hours and child labor.

Some people saw a striking resemblance between that system and the system prevailing in Japan today.

It may be that big industry is getting ready to pull a white rabbit in the form of a new system out of the hat. That's what people in Washington are wondering about. It may be that the men at the top are getting ready to try to out-do the new deal in altruism toward workers, consumers and the public. But as yet there is no real sign of such intent.

"Sick Chicken" Case.

Several times lately it has been pointed out that all of those things which were provided for in Section 7-a of the national recovery act, and were believed to be lost when that act was knocked out by a decision of the supreme court in a suit brought by high priced corporation lawyers in the name of the little Schechters, have since been rewritten into the federal statute books, and more too. There's the Wagner labor relations act, the Walsh-Healy act, and other provisions that nail down the tenets of Section 7-a more firmly than would ever have be n possible under the loose terms of the national recovery act.

However, big industry as yet gives no intimation that its prospective "drive" of selling is aimed to try to undermine the new laws that cover the intents of Section 7-a.

Maybe the men at the top are going to fall in line with the new laws and their aims and go the lawmakers and the new deal one better. That's what everybody is interested in and waiting to see.

WASHINGTON BUILDING TRADES CALL STRIKE

Washnigton.—A number of Washington building trades unions called strikes on two construction jobs of the Woodward and Lothrop department store in an effort to secure the unionization of maintenance men employed by the store. John Locher, secretary of the Buildinf Trades council and president of the Central Labor union, said the store had been on organized labor's "unfair list" for many years. The strikes virtually tied up construction work on both jobs. It was stated that the walkouts were not directed at the contractors.

At a luncheon of newspaper men the following toast was offered: "The Ladies! Second only to the press in the dissemination of news."

ILGWU WINS HARD STRIKE IN SAN ANTONIO FACTORY

Injunctions Marked Four Months' Struggle — Pres. Wm. Green Cancels Federal Charter to Aid ILGWU Strikers.

A four-month-old strike was settled on June 24 in San Antonio, Tex., at the Texas Infants' Wear company after a turbulent and colorful struggle.

The strike was terminated with a two-year agreement, signed on behalf of the union by Meyer Perlstein, southwestern regional director of the ILGWU. The contract provides for a union shop and other union labor conditions. While the strike was on it was the constant sensation of that dreamy town of southern Texas.

According to the Lady Garment Workers officials:

"For several years our union has been steadily hammering to unionize the hundreds of Mexican workers employed in the infants' and children's dress industry in San Antonio. Many prejudices and obstacles had to be removed before any progress could be made. Jail sentences and other difficulties frequently were the early result of our efforts.

"The Texas Infants' Wear, although not one of the largest, still is one of the most important firms in the city. The firm organized a company union on the premises in order to keep the union out of the shop.

"After the union had succeeded in settling two smaller shops in the city it decided to unionize the Texas Infants' Wear. A strike followed unsuccessful conferences with the firm. In the early days of the strike, the firm took the position that there was no strike, but when it saw that dresses were not being produced, it applied to state as well as federal courts for injunction and secured the co-operation and the actual financial backing of the chamber of commerce and other anti-union firms in the city.

"Production was completely demoralized, and the firm, to save itself, was finally moved to make use of the factional fight in the labor movement. One morning a statement appeared in the local newspapers that two AFL representatives in that city had signed up those workers who worked in the shop during the strike for a federal AFL local.

"We immediately got in touch with President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, and after President Green realized the peculiar position in which these local men had placed the AFL, he instructed these local people not to install the federal local, and to send back the charter."

Q.—Why does a person with a cold lose his tastte?

A.—The sense of taste is very closely related to the sense of smell. In fact, enjoyment of some foods rests wholly in the stimulation of the sense of smell. When one has a cold, the nerve ending of the sense of smell in the upper part of the nose is made ineffective by covering of the mucus.

A.—Of the 1,315 white teachers, 13 per cent are college graduates. Of the 1,513 Negro teachers, 12 per cent are graduates.

MANAGEMENT UNDERSTANDING OF LABOR PSYCHOLOGY URGED.

Columbus, O.—A symposium of views of rival labor leaders and an employer on relationships between management and employers wss presented to a conference on industrial economics at the international convention on Christian Education.

Speakers were Francis J. Dillon, of the A. F. of L.; Ted F. Silvey, secretary-treasurer of the C. I. O. in Ohio, and Bernard C. Waring, of the Pennsylvania Yarnall-Waring company, Philadelphia.

Contending that "ownership has been divorced from management," Dillon said the greatest need in improving employer-employe relations was for employment of "personnel directors who understand the psychology of employes and our labor movement."

Silvey said the objective of the C. I. O. was "industrial democracy" and that it was the "religious duty of a worker to join a labor union." He accused opponents of misrepresenting the aims and methods of the C. I. O. to the public.

Stereotypers and Electrotypers Vote For Mandatory Five-Day Week

Memphis.—Establishment of a mandatory five-day, 40-hour week was voted by delegates at the 37th annual convention here of the International Stereotypers' and Electrotypers' Union of North America.

Action of the convention is subject to approval of all members by referendum vote. It would not affect present contracts. Under old regulations members were permitted to spread the 40 hours over six days.

The convention adopted a proposal which would require six years of apprenticeship before acceptance of apprentices as journeymen.

The convention went on record as opposed to stressing peace measures between the CIO and the A. F. of L.

A resolution, introduced by the Cincinnati local, condemned the A. F. of L. for failing to organize labor in mass production industries, and stated that the CIO had accomplished a "commendable task" in that field. It suggested that the two rival groups "either unite or remain separated but under one authority."

The proposal was overwhelmingly voted down.

CEMENT MANUFACTURERS BOOST PRICES IN EAST

New York, N. Y.—Despite the fact that cement is a very necessary commodity in all branches of the construction industry, including housing, and that material increases in its price may set back recovery, the groups here controlling the manufacture of Portland cement increased prices from 17 to 50 cents a barrel in the large consuming areas of New York and Boston. In New York and Long Island the mark-up amounts to 27 cents a barrel. In Boston the boost totals 50 cents a barrel.

PENNSYLVANIA IDLE PAID $37,000,000 IN 5 MONTHS

Harrisburg, Pa.—Eight hundred and fifty-nine thousand persons in Pennsylvania's unemployed army received $37,262,000 from the state's unemployment compensation fund during the five months since the unemployment insurance law became effective last Feb. 1, Ralph M. Bashore, secretary of labor and industry, announced. It required 3,250,000 checks to make the payments.

Labor Board Checks On Rand Compliance

Spokesmen for Strikers Charge Re-employment Order Has Been Flouted.

Investigators for the national labor relations board began checking up this week on whether Remington-Rand, Inc., is complying with the board's orders.

In a decision which the supreme court refused to disturb, the company was ordered by the NLRB to bargain exclusively with a council of A. F. of L. unions, reinstate 27 employes with back wages from May, 1936, and re-employ several thousand workers who went on strike that same month.

The U. S. circuit court of appeals in New York gave Rand until July 15 to comply with the NLRB order, and conflicting reports as to the company's compliance caused the board to order an investigation this week.

The Rand company claims it is meeting the NLRB's requirements, but spokesmen for the former strikers say that "only a few hundred" men have been re-employed.

Q.—What is the meaning of "amen?"

A.—"So be it" or "it is trustworthy," taken from a Hebrew word meaning truth.

HOUSING ACT UPHELD IN COURTS

Washington.—In two far sweeping decisions, the supreme courts of Louisiana and Pennsylvania have upheld the basic principles of local participation in the benefits of the United States housing act of 1937 providing for an $800,000,000 slum-clearance and low-rent housing program now going forward under the guidance of Nathan Strauss, administrator of the United States Housing Authority.

These decisions of the supreme courts of Louisiana and Pennsylvania bring to four the number of courts to consider and to pass favorably on the validity of various provisions of public housing legislation since the passage of the United States housing act, the courts of Alabama and North Carolina having recently passed upon similar statutes.

Q.—What use does a cat make of his whiskers?

A.—They are the cat's "feelers." Extending out the width of the animal's body, the whiskers enable the cat to avoid paths through which his body will not pass.

A. F. L. MINERS' UNION CHARTERS KANSAS LOCAL

Pittsburg, Kan.—The Progressive Mine Workers of America, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, was selected by an overwhelming majority of the employes of the Alston Coal company here as the national union with which they desired to affiliate.

President Joe Ozanic and Organizer Herman Eccher, of the Progressive Mine Workers, announced that the employes of the company, who were members of a local union under the jurisdiction of the United Mine Workers of America, one of the CIO unions expelled by the American Federation of Labor, formally severed connections with the Lewis-dominated union and affiliated with the progressive organization. The announcement stated that out of fifty-nine members of the local fifty-three voted for the P. M. W. of A. at a meeting held in the labor temple here.

BRUERE IS NAMED CHAIRMAN OF NEW SHIP LABOR BOARD

Other Members Are Claude Seehorn, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, and Louis Bloch.

Washington. — President Roosevelt announced the appointment of Robert W. Bruere, of New York City, as chairman of the new maritime labor board, and Claude E. Seehorn, a member of the board of directors of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Denver, Colo., and Louis Bloch, of California, as the other two members of the three-man board provided for by the last session of congress in amendments to the merchant marine act.

Under the new law the board is authorized to offer its services in attempting to bring about agreements between seamen and ship operators in maritime disputes, but does not have power to intervene without the consent of both sides to such disputes. In addition, the board is directed to make a study of the maritime labor situation and report to congress recommendations for further legislation.

Mr. Bruere is known as an author and has had considerable experience in industrial relations work. In 1915 he was a member of the board of arbitration for the ladies' garment industry and from 1917 to 1923 he was director of industrial research in New York. Under the NRA he was chairman of the cotton textile national industrial relations board.

Mr. Seehorn has been an official of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen for a number of years. He has had much experience in adjusting differences between employes and employers in the Rocky mountain field. As the one representative of born fide organized labor on the board, he is expected to stand for basic principles of American trade unionism for seamen on American ships.

Mr. Bloch was made labor adviser in the maritime commission in July, 1937, and was made chief of the occupational research project of the commission's division of research on June 7 this year. Previously he was an examiner in the United States employment service, secretary of the national longshoremen's board of San Francisco in 1934, secretary of the oil tankers' arbitration board at San Francisco in 1935, and research worker in the field of economics for the Russell Sage Foundation in New York City.

TEXTILE STRIKE IS ENDED.

Reidsville, N. C.—A strike at the Edna Textile mill which began in October, 1937, has been ended under an agreement "satisfactory to all concerned," it was announced by John A. Peel, regional director of the Textile Workers' organizing committee, and W. B. Pipkin, treasurer of the Edna mills.

Larger Lumber Exports Is Urged by Green

A. F. of L. President Says Loss of Foreign Markets, Accentuated by Japan's Recent Restrictions on Imports, Has Taken $12,000,000 Annually from West Coast Lumber Workers' Wages.

Washington. — William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a statement issued here, called attention to the tremendous loss of employment to workers in the American lumber industry caused by drastic curtailment of exports and urged definite action to restore foreign markets through negotiations of trade agreements with nations on friendly terms with the United States.

"By a decree issued on June 23," Mr. Green said, "Japan restricted the use of various imports, including lumber.

"This action will result in further curtailment of west coast lumber exports that have dropped 63 per cent in the past ten years, resulting in reduced payrolls and increased unemployment.

"Compared to 1929, the west industry alone, which has been called 'fundamentally an export industry,' has been losing one billion feet in export trade. This means an annual loss to the region of more than twelve million dollars in lumber wages.

"In the west coast industry, production breaks down to an average of 500 feet per man per eight hours. The average wage in the industry at present is 77 cents per hour. One billion feet of lumber represents 2,000,000 days, or 16,000,000 hours of work, or $12,320,000 in wages to lumber workers, and this huge sum includes only wages lost in one section of the country-wide lumber industry.

"The Japanese plan, while it means more pressure to buy logs from both British Columbia and our west coast for the manufacture of such products as export plywood and rayon, likewise means a drop in the buying of lumber as such.

"One purpose of the trade greement act is overcoming domestic unemployment. One way to do this, as far as it affects the logger and other lumber workers, is by restoration of other export markets by trade agreements with nations on friendly terms with the United States."

Steel's Dollars Poured Into Publicity Mill

Washington.—John W. Hill, a Cleveland publicity man, testified before the senate civil liberties committee that between July, 1933, and December, 1937, he and his partners receved a total of $248,654.26 from three clients, the Republic Steel company, the American Iron and Steel institute and the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company.

Hill testified that in June, 1937, after the bloody "little steel" strike finally died down, his firm entered into arrangements with six steel companies to render "special services" at a fee of $75,000.

These services, Hill testified, included a study of "the CIO, its leadership, its methods, its philosophy, and the nature of its support by communists," surveys of national labor relations procedure, the British labor laws, and general labor history, as well as a weekly news letter, and general public relations counsel.

The six firms, each of which paid Hill and Don Knowlton $1,500 per month, were Republic Steel, Youngstown Sheet and Tube, American Rolling mills and Inland, Bethlehem and national Steel.

He said that no printed matter had yet been distributed to the six clients as a result of the studies made of labor history and British labor laws.

About two months ago, Hill said, Youngstown Sheet and Tube and American Rolling mills discontinued the firm's services on the plea that "we're not making much money," while the fees for the other four firms were reduced approximately in half.

Hill said his firm had been employed by Republic for several years, as well as by the American Iron and Steel institute.

Take It or Leave It

Points of View Picked Up From Various Sources
CY KOLOGY, EDITOR

It's a great thing, that conference out in Chicago, with railroad management and railroad labor, without a handfull of brickbats on both sides, locked in dispute. Serious business it is, for managers say they will cut wages, and labor says it will take no less. Neither side has yielded an inch. Yet the trains are all running. Folks are going about their business as usual. Nobody is stocking up food and other things in fear of a tie-up. There's no talk about strike-breakers; nothing heard of company spies in the ranks of workers, no "citizens' committees" being formed, and nobody is calling somebody else bad names. Instead, they are sitting quietly and cooly in a council room, debating their differences. So calmly and politely one might think it was a White House conference.

Business is going right ahead and the country is making manful efforts to get out of its "depression," and get men back to work.

'Twas not always thus, even as the memory of man runneth. There was a time when barbarism and the law of the jungle ruled in railway relations with labor. There were strikes, and troops were called out, box cars burned and equipment wrecked.

The railroads learned their lesson and out of that chaos has come orderly procedure across the council table—conference, conciliation, mediation and fact finding.

Labor hears what management has to say and management listens to labor. There's mutual understanding of the problems of each side, and in the long run, one side will yield or both will compromise.

If they don't, the national mediation board will step in and seek an agreement. If that fails, the board will ask both sides to accept arbitration. If that fails, too, the president will ask both sides to accept a fact-finding body, to report within 30 days. Only if that final effort fails, is the possibility of a strike brought into the situation.

Under the dome of the national capital a different story is being heard. The La Follette civil liberties committee is delving into labor methods of the Republic Steel company.

Here is a story of brutal beatings, of terrorism and tear gas, of faked and false propaganda spread to the public, and of hundreds of thousands of dollars spent to break up unions and form company puppets.

Editors have been intimidated into printing accounts of strikes and labor troubles in Republic communities probably at variance with facts.

Editorial writers and reporters have been picked by steel magnates for dismissal from their newspaper jobs because they were believed to be "out of sympathy" with the methods of such magnates.

Families of workers have been terrorized; the children of workers beaten; their homes invaded; the streets thronged with armed guards.

And yet, we're making progress. What we see in railroad industrial relations today envisions the dawn of another day in the realm of private industry.

With the scene in Chicago, industry cannot continue to abide the law of the jungle and live by the sword.

SIDEWALKS ALONG HIGHWAYS

(From Dallas Morning News.)

Of the vast number killed in rural highway accidents every year, about 35 per cent are pedestrians. Obviously, this total could be greatly reduced by providing sidewalks along country roads, especially on heavily traveled roads near large cities.

The cost of sidewalks is small compared with the safety they offer.

Nassau county, on Long Island, is building 200 miles of concrete safety walks on its highways—probably a larger mileage than has any other county in the whole country. Massachusetts is building 400 miles of rural sidewalks. The Texas roadside development program has included construction of pedestrian bridges and foot paths on the outskirts of Beaumont, Nacogdoches and other cities. But only a beginning has been made in this field.

Despite the large number of rural automobiles in use, members of farm families have frequent occasion to walk to neighbors' homes or to school, church or trading center. No highway without sidewalk facilities would be a sound policy in a nation that needs stimulation to avoid atrophy of the leg muscles.

When Japan and Russia fought before, American sympathy was mainly with Japan—partly because of the mistaken notion that Japan was a "little nation." Now, at least four out of five Americans hope devoutly for Japan's defeat, because of her utter barbarity in China.

LUMBERJACKS SWINGING TO A. F. OF L. UNION

Duluth, Minn.—Reports received here indicate that a large percentage of the lumberjacks in the Rainy river district along the border are turning to the American Federation of Labor after disastrous experiences with the CIO. At a meeting at Lommen attended by representatives from as far west as Birchdale and Baudette a group of timber and sawmill workers organized in an A. F. of L. union and voted to merge with the reorganized Timber and Sawmill Workers' Union No. 2776, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

A. F. of L. organizers reported that among fifty lumberjacks contacted in International Falls only one favored the CIO. This area is the one most recently invaded by the CIO.

FOR ROOSEVELT THIRD TERM.

Daytona Beach, Fla.—Daytona organized labor is on record with unqualified indorsement of President Roosevelt for a third term. In a resolution unanimously adopted, the central labor union urged labor organizations throughout the nation to take similar action. Copies were mailed to all central labor unions listed in the United States with a request for "immediate action."

HOTEL WORERS GAIN 8-HOUR DAY CONTRACT

South Bend, Ind.—Locals 204 and 608, Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America, have negotiated an agreement with the Club Lido here calling for a preferential shop, 8-hour day, 48-hour week, minimum wage scale and paid vacations. A conciliator of the Indiana state division of labor aided the locls ain finalizing the agreement, which affects twenty-one employes.

Question Box

Q.—How many different makes or names of automobiles have been placed on the market since the first motor buggies were made?

A.—Definite figures are not available. L. H. Seltzer, writing in the "Financial History of the American Automobile Industry," says that nearly one thousand distinct enterprises are on record as having been organized at one time or another for entrance into the field. Between 1902 and the beginning of 1927, some 181 enterprises reached the stage of production in commercial volume; of these only 44 were still in existence in the latter year.

* * *

Q.—Is postal service an operation of the government in other countries?

A.—Postal service is a government undertaking in all countries. Two of the major reasons why it first became a government enterprise were to inform the outlying sections of new laws and to enable the government to keep posted on events of these sections.

* * *

Q.—Does the state have a tax on real estate?

A.—Yes, eight cents on each $100 assessed value. This is included in the county tax rate.

* * *

Q.—What are the chances of getting 13 cards of the same suit in playing bridge?

A.—One chance out of 153,000,000,000 hands.

* * *

Q.—What causes rain?

A.— Moist air rises or is forced up to colder altitudes, raising the relative humidity above 100 per cent and resulting in condensation and rain.

* * *

Q.—How many countries in the world are ruled by women?

A.—Two: Luxemburg ruled by the Grand Duchess Charlotte; and the Netherlands ruled by Queen Wilhelmina.

Optical Workers Win Pittsburgh Contract

A. F. of L. Agreement With Triangle Optical Company Includes 40-Hour Week, Vacations With Pay, Mediation of Disputes, and Limitation of Strikes and Lockouts.

Pittsburgh, Pa. — The Optical Workers' Union No. 18820, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, has negotiated an agreement with the Triangle Optical company of Pittsburgh, covering the shop employes of the company, which contains many advantages for the members of the union.

The company agrees to employ only union members in good standing, with the modification that in case the union cannot supply enough card-carrying workers the company may employ non-members.

When it is necessary to reduce forces it is provided that employes who have been employed less than one year shall be laid off in the reverse order in which they have been hired, the last hired to be the first laid off. If it becomes necessary to reduce the working time of their remaining employes it is stipulated that there shall be an equal division of time down to 33 hours per week.

The regular hours of labor are seven per day from Monday through Friday and five hours on Saturday. Overtime is paid for at the rate of time and one-half for week days and double time on Sundays.

New Year's day, decoration day, Fourth of July, Labor day, Armistice day, Thanksgiving day and Christmas day are recognized as holidays without any deductions in weekly pay.

Waiting time is paid for at the normal rate.

Provision is made for shop or factory committees to adjust, in conjunction with representatives of the union, grievances arising under the agreement. In case the grievances cannot be settled with supervisory company officials, union representatives are authorized to confer with higher officials of the company, and in case of failure to secure an adjustment the matter may be referred to "any governmental agency having jurisdiction in the mediation of such disputes."

The agreement also provides that "no strike shall be caused or sanctioned by the union, and no lockout shall be entered upon by the employer, until every peaceable method of settlement of difficulties shall have been tried."

Annual vacations of one week with full pay are provided for every employe who has been in the employ of the company for a period of from one to three years and two weeks vacation for those in the employ of the company three years or more.

Newest AFofL Broadcast Dramatizes Labor Day History and Spirit In Stirring Re-enactment Program

Washington.—A new and inspiring feature to the celebration of Labor day this year is given by the second of the "Labor Parade" broadcast programs of the American Federation of Labor. The broadcast presents in dramatic fashion the first Labor day parade and follows the progress of labor through more than fifty years that have passed since. Part, a significant part, is marked off by the successive Labor days.

The program, one of thirteen in the "Labor Parade" programs of the A. F. of L., has gone out for release Aug. 10 on over sixty stations throughout the country. The first program, released in July, met with an enthusiastic reception from both labor and the general public.

It is impossible, of course, to give the full sweep of tone and music and words together in printed words alone. But it is the best thing that can be done; and the broadcast is so fine that much of it will get over, even under that handicap. Here are some samples:

First Announcer: The Parade of Labor, through the years, can be marked by the recurring celebrations of Labor day. On, on, on, the feet of the workers of America have tramped in a march toward better lives, better homes, better citizenship, greater buying power, sturdier health, and an increased span of life. And on Monday, Sept. 5, across the length and breadth of the nation, another Labor day will be celebrated.

Onward March Traced.

That is why, in this transcribed production of the Labor Parade, the American Federation of Labor traces this majestic onward march . . . a march which fostered labor's great contribution to the development and stability of the nation. . .

Second Announcer: The first Labor day celebration was in New York in 1882. P. J. McGuire, one of the great pioneer figures of American organized labor, was among those who induced the New York Central labor union to inaugurate the custom that was to grow into law and become nationwide.

(Then follows the parade itself. Only parts of it can be given. You hear McGuire marching by with the carpenters. Then—

Narrator: Here comes the printers. The printers, calling themselves the Typographical Union of North America, organized their first union before the Revolutionary war.

Other Unions Follow.

Clanging an anvil as they come, the Machinists and Blacksmiths! . . .

With banners that carry the ancient emblem of their craft march the Bricklayers. . . .

It's the Bakers. . . . The figures on their banners and their union label trace back to the guilds of the Middle Ages. . . .

And the rest of the line goes by —Shoemakers, Lithographers, and the Cigarmakers, the union in which young Samuel Gompers holds membership as a worker at the bench. It's the young Samuel Gompers who within a few months is to take the leadership of the American Federation of Labor. . . . There go the Tailors and the Textile workers and the Wood Carvers! There they march, marching on, on into history.

Ludlow Massacre Painted.

Announcer: 1914 and a turning point in American history. The United Mine Workers struck against the Colorado Fuel & Iron company, then dominated by one of the greatest of America's sixty families. At Ludlow, Colo., the miners ejected from company-owned houses formed a colony in tents.

(And on the parade goes. The work of organized labor in the World war gets one of the few fair statements ever given it. The yellow dog contract sanctified by the supreme court, to start a fight that lasted 20 years until the NRA guaranteed the right of labor to organize. The shopmen's strike of 1922—an epic. The crash and the depression. The dull, hopeless years; and then the beginning of recovery.)

Announcer: The Labor Parade moves on—and the parade of Labor days moves on, marking each year something new in the development of our industrial life toward order, toward negotiation and agreement as a way of doing things.

Job Upswing Forecast.

Only part of the events dramatized in the broadcast are mentioned in the foregoing account. The program touches many other big events of labor history since Labor day was first celebrated in 1882. It forecasts a happier Labor day this year than last, with an upswing in employment and celebrations—"real celebrations"—planned in thousands of American cities," in the words of the announcer, who adds:

"The barometer begins its climb, as America again smiles with the happiness of work to do and wages to be earned and spent."

The programs are being prepared and produced for the A. F. of L. by Chester M. Wright and Associates, Washington, D. C.

Wisdom

The most important job our ancesotrs had to tackle in this country was building. First they built log cabins, then houses and roads and blacksmith shops. They spread themselves across the continent, building farther and faster as time went on—railroads and coal mines, waterworks and skyscrapers, oil wells and factories. That was a big job.

In order to build, our ancesotrs had to save money. Savings were invested, the money was paid to workmen who had no time to produce food and clothes, because they were busy driving spikes or mixing concrete. By saving and investing, the American people set aside part of their labor power to be used for building instead of using all of it to make goods and services for their own enjoyment. That was thrift. Benjamin Franklin taught the Americans that thrift was a virtue. He was right. Thrift built America. Thrift also built our ancestors' personal security and that of their wives and children. We cannot give up thrift until we can see some other way of making ourselves reasonably safe against the vicissitudes of life. —David Cushman Coyle.

It is only through labor and prayerful effort, by grim energy and resolute courage, that we move on to better things.—Theodore Roosevelt.

What Next?

Sawdust from the redwood lumber mills of California is now being pressed into logs to make fuel wood, which is three times as dense as wood and is said to give greater heat.

Q.—How often does the moon go around the earth?

A.—Every 27 days, 7 hours and 43 minutes.

TFL PRESIDENT GERALD FOLEY VISITED CENTRAL LABOR UNION AT LAST MONDAY'S MEETING

Compliments Chattanooga Movement--Asks Support Knoxville Taxi Strikers--Miss Louise Tinker Reports for Culinary Workers

Last Monday's session of Central Body saw President Gerald Foley, of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, as the guest of honor. President Foley was on his way home to Nashville, coming from a visit to Knoxville, where he had several conferences with the management of the Jolly Cab company.

Mr. Foley reported to Central Body that the taxi men of that city were holding firm in their strike to fight the onslaught of the Knoxville management to destroy the local there. They have been on strike for several weeks, and despite injunctions, eviction from their homes and other strike-breaking methods, they were determined to stick it out.

He asked the Chattanooga movement to send in cash contributions to the Knoxville strikers so that their families will not go hungry. All contributions should be sent care of T. R. Cuthbert, secretary of the federation.

Mr. Foley told the Chattanooga delegates that they had reason to be proud of their labor movement and commended them for the manner in which the American Federation had been supported. President Foley has just been nominated by the democratic party in Davidson county as a member of the legislature. Nomination is equivalent to election.

Miss Louise Tinker, Chattanooga, returned from a two-weeks' stay in Knoxville, where she has been most active in assisting the Knoxville Cooks and Waiters. She reports that several shop cards have been installed, and that the local is growing stronger. She will return to Knoxville for four more weeks.

NLRB RESCINDS COPPERHILL ORDER

Atlanta, Ga.—The national labor board has rescinded its order issued last week for another election at Copperhill, Tenn., and has set Aug. 15 as the date for oral argument of the question. It will be recalled that the board held an election at Copperhill on March 18, in which the A. F. of L. won. On July 23, the board issued an order declaring the election null and void, and ordered another election to be held within twenty days from that date. The American Federation of Labor "raised the roof" about the decision, entering suit against the board, and otherwise displaying its resentment against the board for the manifestly unfair decision. The board's later action in rescinding the order, thus postponing indefinitely the new election, has been received with keen delight by members of the American Federation of Labor.

When you get into a tight place and everything goes against you, till it seems as though you could not hold on a minute longer, never give up then, for that is just the place and time that the tide will turn.—Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Carpenters Local To Have Picnic Tuesday, Aug. 30

It seems that picnicking is the rage nowadays. Local 74, Carpenters and Joiners, are busily engaged in whipping up plans for a swell picnic to be held Tuesday, Aug. 30, at Graysville, Ga.

Arrangements so far include barbecue, lemonade, swimming, boating and games, and will last all day long.

Everything will be free and will be limited to members and families of Local 74 and invited guests.

There will be free bus service every two hours to and from the grounds.

'Old-Timer' Bottler Is Fatally Injured

Gottfried Daniker, for many years a member of Brewery Workers, Local 79, died in a local hospital last Sunday night as a result of injuries sustained when he was struck by an automobile just after he stepped off a bus and started to run across the street to get out of a shower of rain.

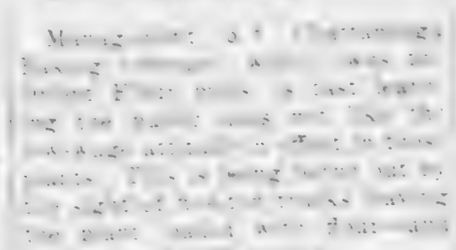
Brother Daniker was an active member of Local 79 from the time he joined, back in 1906, until he took out a withdrawal card last year because he was not able to work any more.

Members of Local 79 say that he was an ardent union man and always participated in union interests. Friends of the family say that he always looked forward each week to the day The Labor World came to him.

Brother Daniker was a native of Switzerland and had lived in Hamilton county for 35 years. He was 76 years old when he died. He is survived by his wife and five children.

Grocers Send Back Orient Flour Daily By Truckload Lots

Chattanooga Bakery Finds Public Displeased With Low Wage Policy



After all, it's the working man's family that buys flour to the greatest extent, and until they make decent living wages they cannot buy much flour.

The trouble arose when employes of the Chattanooga Bakery, making cakes and crackers, asked their boss for more money and a closed shop so they could protect the raise they might secure.

Management flatly refused to concede a point. As a result the employes walked out of the cracker plant and closed it down.

Employes of the flour mill are rapidly organizing into an American Federation of Labor union, the Bakery Workers, and it is believed ere long there will be some more talk.

One enormous chain of groceries in Chattanooga has already told the Chattanooga Bakery and Orient mill that they do not want any more of their products until they get right. The loss of this business amounts to many carloads. However, someone else will get the business, and it might be hard to get them back when a settlement is made.

There has been no disorder and the morale of the strikers is firm and happy.

Until further notice, Bakery and Confectionery Workers, Local 25, is asking all unionists, here and over the state, to check up with their grocerymen and tell them about Orient flour and Chattanooga Bakery crackers and cakes.

GERLACH STRICKEN IN CLERK'S OFFICE

Matt Gerlach, veteran unionist member of the Cigarmakers, was the victim of a paralytic stroke in the criminal court clerk's office Tuesday. Brother Gerlach has been chief clerk since 1918, and he is well respected in the labor movement.

As the paper went to press Brother Gerlach's condition was reported as improving.

TWO AFFILIATIONS TO CENTRAL BODY

Last session of Chattanooga Central Labor union saw two more local unions affiliated with the parent AFL body here.

Local 156, Glassblowers, and Local 1126, Building Laborers Foremen, sent their delegates for the first time.

AFL ENDORSED M'REYNOLDS GOES "OVER THE TOP" AGAINST MILLER AFTER MOST EXCITING CAMPAIGN

Coleman, Old-Time Labor Friend, Leads Way to House--George L. Berry Goes to Defeat Labor Helps Remove Gov. Gordon Browning

In one of the most exciting campaigns waged in a long time in Hamilton county, Congressman Sam D. McReynolds defeated Judge L. D. Miller last Thursday for congress by a large majority. Both candidates had good labor records, but Mr. McReynolds was indorsed by President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor.

Senator George L. Berry, president of the Pressmen's union, and indorsed by William Green, was defeated in a three-way race with Congressman J. Ridley Mitchell and Mr. Tom Stewart. Mr. Stewart, backed by Shelby county, was an overwhelming winner.

Gov. Gordon Browning, condemned by organized labor, was roundly licked by Mr. Prentice Cooper.

In the legislative races, Mr D. M. Coleman, for his eighth time, will serve in the lower house of the legislature. Mr. Coleman led the entire field of candidates. Going with Mr. Coleman will be Mr. French Grubb and Mr. J. B. Ragon. Mr. Coleman was enthusiastically backed by organized labor.

Mr. Joe Bean barely nosed out Mr. Estes Kefauver in the race for the state senate.

All the incumbents for county offices were re-elected.

Southern Dairies Co. Declared Non-Union By Central Body

This act was taken after futile attempts to interest the company in becoming a union plant. For several years the dairy workers have kept a strong union of ice cream workers, being able today to present to the public several brands of union made ice cream.

The Southern Dairies is part of a national chain system, and it is reported that in St. Louis its plant there has recognized organized labor.

The local manager of the plant, Mr. L. J. Wilhoite, is quite active in public affairs, being a member of he public power board.

Members of organized labor and friends are urged to buy union-made ice cream and to use influence with the Southern Dairies to become union.

AUDITORIUM GETS COAT OF PAINT

The Memorial auditorium is finally being painted. Eight members of Local 226, Painters and Decorators, are busily engaged in doing a job that has been needed for a long time. The job is one hundred per cent union.

Housing Program Boosts Employment

Washington. — The $800,000,000 slum-clearance and low-rent re-housing program of the United States Housing Authority will provide nearly 700,000,000 "man hours" of labor in addition to constructing decent homes for approximately 160,000 low-income families, says a report made public here by Administrator Straus.

Union Label Dress Gloves Announced

Kewanee, Ill. — For the first time the union label of the International Glove Workers Union of America will appear on fine dress gloves as a result of a closed shop union label agreement with the Heller Leather company, 827 Locust street, Milwaukee, Wis., according to an announcement by Thomas Durian, president of the Glove Workers' Union.

The company's normal force of eighty employes will be included under this agreement.

Mr. Durian said "the union label has appeared on many brands of work gloves for many years," adding: "The Heller Leather company's lines include fine dress gloves for both men and women."

WALKER IMPROVES

O. A. Walker, representative of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, who suffered a broken ankle last week when his car left the road, is doing very well.

Last Monday he was taken to Erlanger hospital to have the broken bone reset, and latest report says he is resting well.

Mrs. Walker is in the city caring for Mr. Walker. His many friends in Chattanooga are much concerned over his misfortune and are watching his progress with high hopes.

Increase Reported In Plans for Vacations With Pay

Washington. Holding her first press conference since her return from Europe, Secretary of Labor Perkins made public a survey by the bureau of labor statistics which disclosed a 40 per cent increase in industrial paid vacations plans during 1937.

She said that 9.5 per cent of the 750,000 salaried employes for which information was obtained now have annual vacations with pay, but said there were few vacation plans among actual factory workers.

Culinary Workers Meet in August At San Francisco

San Francisco.—The 29th general convention of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America will meet here beginning Monday, Aug. [illegible] and is expected to be in session five days.

The union, long affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, now has a membership of more than 400,000, comprising waiters, waitresses, cooks, bartenders and miscellaneous restaurant and hotel employes.

[illegible] vice-president, who recently attended a meeting of the general executive board in Chicago, said that among the proposals to come before the convention are an increase in the per capita tax, now 25 cents, to take care of increased cost of organizational work in unorganized or partly organized sections; increase in the organization force in larger communities, with officers in charge to carry out orders of the general executive board and relieve general headquarters of much routine detail, and increase of authority now granted the eight vice-presidents, who represent eight districts of the United States and Canada.

The largest gathering in the history of the organization is expected, with 150 delegates from New York alone.

AIR CONDITION WORK PLACES

(From Minneapolis Labor Review)

There is no longer any reason why workers should swelter at their work.

Summer in many lines of industry has been a time of torture for those employed in its activities. In laundries and factories women workers have suffered terribly and the hot weather has annually been punctuated with the deaths of workers who succumbed to the intense heat under which they were compelled to work.

Men engaged in the iron and steel and other industries and those employed in kitchens were among those to fare painfully from the hot spells.

Even in many offices there was heat of such intensity as to be morelike the headquarters of his Satanic majesty than any other headquarters.

Now air conditioning has made it possible to change all this. Unfortunately instead of air conditioning being used to relieve those who suffer most from the heat it has been employed to bring comfort to those who for the most part are never uncomfortable.

Labor's Support Proving Powerful Factor in Big Campaign to Beat Taxes Increasing Living Costs

Washington.—Rallying to protect the purchasing value of wages and to defend the welfare of its members as the largest organized group of consumers, organized labor is given an important weight in the growing campaign against special taxes increasing living costs.

Opposition of other consumer groups and of farmers is also gaining momentum in the public reaction against the 'drastic Patman bill to eliminate chain stores."

This mounting volume of public resentment at pressure-group efforts to destroy a part of the national distributing system seems to leave "little chance" of passage of the Patman bill at the next session of congress.

These are the conclusions reached in the latest survey of popular sentiment toward punitive chain store legislation made by Standard Statistics, Inc., authoritative analysts of working conditions, business and industry in the United States. Results appear in a recent issue of "Standard Trade and Securities."

Union Progress Cited.

The Standard Statistics survey refers to the Patman bill which would provide for a graduated tax on each chain store, reaching a maximum of $1,000 a store, multiplied by the number of states in which the chain has stores.

"Labor unions have been able to make progress in organizing workers in the chains, whereas they have had little success with the independents and have encountered violent opposition from that source," states a summary of the survey.

Legislation adverse to chain stores, which reached its peak in 1933, is rapidly becoming unpopular with a greater number of organizations and individuals, the survey states.

Consumers' Groups in Line.

Several powerful consumers groups, whose membership consists mainly of the wives of wage-earners, have made rapid strides in a nationwide attack on the high cost of living which is caused by excessive taxation.

With organized labor protecting the wage-earner and united consumer groups protecting the housewife, farmers also have joined in protest against anti-chain store legislation, the survey reveals.

Anti-Chain Taxes Seen Doomed.

"The farmer knows that the chains perform a highly useful function in taking surpluses of agricultural products off the market. Unlike the independents, who always try to carry a complete and well-rounded line of merchandise, the chains seek products that can be featured from a price standpoint. Thus, they are always on the alert for surplus offerings."

By 1939, the report states, opponents of anti-chain taxes will have grown so strong that levies of this nature, both state and federal, will have little chance of passing.

UNION LABEL DEPARTMENT ISSUES UNION LABEL CATALOG-DIRECTORY

Washington.—An attractive publication entitled "1938 Union Label Catalog-Directory" has been issued by the American Federation of Labor Union Label Trades Department. It contains facsimilies of all union labels, shop cards and service buttons, accompanied by a list of the respective industries that have the right to display these these official emblems of union labor. Supplemental listings will be issued periodically.

Among the interesting features of the new directory is a letter from President Roosevelt, who indorses the principle of the union label. William Green, president of the A. F. of L., contributes an article on the first A. F. of L. union label and industrial exhibition.

Matthew Woll, president, and I. M. Ornburn, secretary-treasurer of the Union Label Trades Department, make appeals to members of labor unions, their families and friends to buy only union label—union-made products and to use only union services.

The catalog-directory was published in conjunction with the recent A. F. of L. Union Label and Industrial Exhibition at Cincinnati. Many pages are devoted to illustrated advertisements which were limited to firms that exhibited at union labor's first national "show."

Copies will be furnished without charge to national and international labor unions, state federations of labor, central labor unions, union label leagues, women's auxiliaries, editors of the labor press, full time representatives of the A. F. of L. and other authorized agents. The demand for the catalog-directory has been so great that it is necessary to make a nominal charge for additional copies.

Non-Union Phone Directory Ban Worries "Information"

Toledo, O.—"Woe is me!" is the unanimous exclamation coming these days from the information girls employed in the Toledo office of the Ohio Bell Telephone company. Their trouble is caused by the increased work resulting from the action of the Toledo Central Labor council placing a ban on the publications printed by the anti-union firm of R. H. Donnelley & Sons, Chicago, Ill. The publications include the Toledo telephone directory.

In accentuating the spirit of the resolution adopted by the council, A. F. of L. members, instead of using the telephone directory, ask "information" for any numbers they wish to call, informing the information girls at the same time that they are not using the directory because it was printed by a non-union company. Each request for a number is accompanied by a suggestion that the telephone company find a new printer for its 1939 directory.

Cooks' and Waiters' Scraps

Louise Tinker, Correspondent

As we contribute our column this week we are on the train—we are going back to Knoxville. We hate to leave our fair city—home, but our thoughts are turned to those people in Knoxville who are depending on us to obtain those working conditions and wages they have deserved lo these many years.

* * *

My, my, but we were glad to be at Central Body again.

* * *

* * *

Roy Lee, secretary of the Brewery Workers, was in Knoxville this week. He came by to see us.

* * *

* * *

Didn't we feel at home when we went down to walk with the picket at the Busy Bee. We felt lonesome without that banner, but time prevented our putting it on and being a full-fledged picket. From reliable sources reports came that the management of this non-union restaurant is having more than one headache.

* * *

Maynard Baird, our working cohort here, has gone over to Memphis to visit his parents. Two of the little Bairds, Bobby and Wesley, went along with their father.

* * *

We were indeed very sorry to learn this week of the death of Mr. Victor A. Ellis, who operated the State cafe. We have worked for Mr. Ellis and we can truthfully say that we have never worked for anyone who was nicer than this restaurant operator. Mr. Ellis always offered every cooperation to our organization. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family.

We write and then we read. The time hangs heavy on our hands. We've been reading "America's Medieval Women" by Pearl S. Buck. It is in the August number of Harper's. Don't tell me that Harper's is on the we-do-not-patronize list. We have read it for years. How about it, Brownie? If it isn't o. k. we don't buy it any more.

Steel Companies Spent Millions In Fighting Strike Last Year, Senate Committee Reveals

The La Follette civil liberties committee has broken its own superb record in the hearings of the last few days. Never before has such a mass of propaganda, perjury, spying, bullying, high pressure lying and all-round brutality on the part of reactionary employers and their agents been brought to light and certified in so short a time.

These hearings were concentrated on "Little Steel," on the Republic and Youngstown steel companies. Some of the things established are:

That the Little Steel strikes of 1937 in these two companies cost $4,144,000, of which the companies paid $3,543,000 and sawed off the rest on the taxpayers.

That these two companies spent $141,000 on munitions during 1937 alone.

That Little Steel, in its campaign to get the community on its side, browbeat clergymen and boycotted merchants.

That the files of the Republic Steel corporation have been stripped of records of expenditures for munitions, spying, publicity, and that the committee has gained these items chiefly because of the "share the dope" program prevailing among steel corporations.

Invoices showed that Republic Steel bought 552 pistols, 64 rifles, 245 shotguns, 143 gas guns, 58 gas billies, 2,707 gas grenades and 4,033 other gas projectiles. No one imagines the list is complete.

Informer Paid $1,500.

An inventory of the Youngstown arsenal Feb. 27, 1938, showed 453 revolvers, 314 rifles, 4 Colt machine guns and 4 Lewis machine guns.

The high pressure prevarication is perhaps best shown in the case of James Torbic, chief of the Republic guards at the plant in Monroe, Mich. He admitted such trifles as buying, with Republic Steel's money, $1,500 for tear gas and guns for the Monroe police department; but there was another item of $1,000 on which he hedged and dodged until La Follette had fairly backed him into a corner. Then he grew "frank," and said he had paid it to an informer.

'What he did was to blackmail me," said Torbic. "He told me he wanted $1,500 for information he had given me and threatened to sue if I didn't pay it. To be frank with you, I knew this committee was investigating, and I didn't want any information about stool pigeons to get out. So I paid him $1,000 to keep him quiet."

Victim of Mob Testifies.

The worst single case of brutality brought out was told by a negro organizer, Leonidas McDonald, who was seized by a mob in Monroe, horribly beaten, and driven out of town. Police were there, but did nothing to prevent the outrage, one policeman hit McDonald in the face with a blackjack. He was beaten unconscious; when he revived he got into his auto and tried to get away, but a man reached in and turned off the ignition and the mob beat him again.

He pointed out Charles Strohm in the committee room as the man who turned off his ignition. Strohm made a furious denial, but McDonald stuck to his testimony, saying:

'You could kill me up there, but you can't do it now!"

Pastor "Run Out of Town.

Rev. Orville C. Jones, pastor of a Congregational church in Youngstown, told the committee that he was run out of town in a genteel way for expressing sympathy with the strikers. Frank Purnell, president of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube company, admitted that he had resigned from Jones' church, but said that he did so because Jones permitted "known reds" to use the church. He also said that the men didn't need any organization; that he could manage things.

There is not much to a man who is not wiser today than yesterday. —Lincoln.

Points of View Picked Up From Various Sources
CY KOLOGY, EDITOR

Central labor unions all over the nation are buying new homes. They are putting up new buildings or buying or renovating old ones. In either case, they are contributing to increase of employment and business activity.

Duluth, Minn., is the latest city to report a move by labor to own an up-to-date headquarters building. Duluth is only one of many planning similar action. There is a long list of city central bodies which, in the last twelve months, have either moved into new homes or taken steps to acquire new quarters.

The labor movement has come of age and demands headquarters buildings in keeping with its high status in the national life. Action of the central bodies is an indication of the strength and vitality of the American Federation of Labor, of its striving for progress and better things.

* * *

Colorado State Federation of Labor knows the value of the labor press. The federation's last convention said something about the labor press that, if taken to heart by every trade union in America, would boost the labor movement immeasurably.

"The function of the labor press is one of the most important activities of the movement," said the convention, which went on to point out that the labor press was the "only medium through which the people of the state of Colorado may be informed of the true activities of the labor movement."

Then the convention placed the federation on record as vigorously encouraging affiliated units to "give more support, morally, physically and financially to the labor press of the state."

The convention was speaking of the Colorado labor press, but its words are equally applicable to the labor press everywhere.

Speaker Heck, of the lower house of the New York legislature, wants a "curb" on the barbarous and lawless "third degree."

Speaking to the State Police Chiefs' association, Heck said:

"No public official wants a law placed upon the statute books that might hamper the efficiency of law enforcement officials.

"You and your men can make such action unnecessary. Every effort should be made by you to curb the use of the third degree in your jurisdiction."

But why only a "curb," Speaker Heck? Why not abolition of the "third degree?"

* * *

The "third degree" method of extorting confessions from suspected criminals by physical or mental torture, or both, is not only brutal and illegal; it is a confession of police incompetency. Competent police work convicts the criminal without the use of the "third degree," which was fittingly pilloried by the Wickersham commission in 1931.

Calling emphatically for end of the "third degree," the commission used such terms as "unprintable barbarity," and "naked, ugly facts" in discussing it.

* * *

At the New York meeting, some of the police officials made what seemed to be an implied defense of the "third degree." This is typical of a certain school of police thinking.

Whenever the "third degree" is under fire, police officials join in a chorus of denials or make feeble attempts to defend its use. They talk about "coddling" criminals and complain of attempts to work up public sympathy for vicious killers and other desperate lawbreakers.

They should be sharply reminded that there is no demand for coddling or humoring criminals; the demand is that their constitutional rights be respected.

That is all.

4 Los Angeles Unions Quit Bridges' Council

Ladies' Garment, Auto, Rubber and Shoe Workers Groups Charge Pacific Coast C. I. O. Leader With Being a Communist.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Following a 48 hour conference, leaders in Los Angeles of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union, the United Automobile Workers, the United Rubber Workers and the United Shoe Workers voted to withdraw from Harry Bridges' C. I. O. Industrial Union council, and charged simultaneously that both Bridges and his council have worked hand in glove with the communist party to the detriment of labor.

In addition, the officials of the four unions charged that Bridges is a dictator, that he maintained control of the Los Angeles C. I. O. Industrial Union council by "fraud and the votes of 'paper' locals," and that he has subordinated 'the interests of the C. I. O. and trade unionism to communism."

The four unions decided to set up a C. I. O. council of their own independent of the Bridges outfit.

Railroads and Unions End Negotiations On Proposed Wage Cut

Chicago.—Efforts to negotiate a settlement of the proposed 15 per cent cut in railroad wages ended here when representatives of the nation's railroads and eighteen railroad unions abandoned further negotiation. The workers flatly refused to accept the pay cut demanded by the railroads. The next step is recourse to federal mediation.

George M. Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives' association, representing the eighteen unions, released the following formal statement with which he ended labor's presentation of its case to the carriers:

"And now, gentlemen, we have come to the end of our argument. We have, in our minds, completely answered and fully refuted every argument you gentlemen presented as to why there should be a wage cut.

"That there may not be the slightest doubt in anyone's mind and that there may be no room for equivocation through words or evasions of mind, the chief executive of the railway labor organizations, representing the men in the groups on whom the wage reduction notice was served, solemnly and unanimously have directed me as chairman to advise the carriers' joint conference committee at the conclusion of our defense against their proposal for a 15 per cent reduction in wages that the organizations most respectfully, definitely and finally decline the carriers' request for any reduction in compensation."

Previous to failure of negotiations between the eighteen unions and the railroads, the roads and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen announced jointly that they had failed to reach an agreement and were laying the matter before a federal mediator. The trainmen conducted negotiations separate from that of the other unions.

Error to Permit CIO to "Intrude" On Established Printing Unions, Olander Tells NLRB Hearings

By JOSEPH A. WISE

Chicago.—Besides paying high compliment to the fairness of Trial Examiner George Bokat in the NLRB hearings held in Chicago recently, and expressing sympathy for the difficulties being encountered by the national labor relations board in handling the multiplicity of problems confronting it, Victor A. Olander, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, testified that it would be an error for the board to rule that the American Newspaper Guild, an "untrained" and "frankly antagonistic" organization, has a legal right to "intrude" in the daily newspaper industry with a view of introducing a form of labor organization different from the form now prevailing.

Basic Question Involved.

"I would say, on the record, that the greatest fact of all in relation to acts of this kind is that they deal with freedom of the individual worker, his status under the law, and I am doing my best to get before this hearing and the national labor relations board that that question must not be ignored. It has not even been mentioned since I got in this chair all through the hearing that I have heard, and it is the vital, basic question of all to my people, if you please, Mr. Examiner, that I am talking about."

"Trial Examiner Bokat: I understand. I am not limiting you in any way, Mr. Olander."

"The Witness: Let me say this, now, since you have said that, for the record; that the trial examiner in this case—I have been present at almost every session—has not only compelled my respect, but won my admiration for the manner in which he has proceeded."

"Trial Examiner Bokat: Thank you."

Friendly to Board.

"The Witness: I may get a little vigorous in some of my statements, but I have a very friendly attitude toward the national labor relations board as a whole, and a great deal of sympathy with the difficulties that they are encountering. Perhaps my counsel might ask me a question on that point before I leave the chair. I am perfectly willing to be frank on it."

"Mr. Carmell: "I should like to testify myself on that point."

"The Witness: Now, the present bargaining units in the newspaper industry, and in Chicago they are similar to those which exist in most of the large cities, are of long standing and they have been of marked success. They represent the main organizations in the printing and mailing and delivering systems of the newspapers, dealing not with the individual employer, but with the publishers' association. That's been going on for a very considerable period of years.

"The general view of practically all concerned, labor organizations in their relations to employment and so on, was that prior to the passage of the national labor relations act there was a great deal of antagonism on the part of employers as relating to the formation of trade unions, an antagonism being felt by the national labor relations board now, by the way, so that there were spots where particular unions were unable to take complete membership; and that is true in this industry."

Many Difficulties Seen.

"Now, to make use of that situation, especially through new and untrained organizations to intrude a dual organization, especially one that is frankly antagonistic toward these organizations of long standing and representing a majority of the employes in the newspaper industry—for the purpose of sending into the work places and the work rooms and to mix with the members of these union men and perhaps women who not only are seeking a different method of so-called collective bargaining, but who come in under a membership that frankly states their purpose is to change the whole thing, I think leads to difficulties of all sorts, because we are not dealing with mechanical robots here who may be shifted around at will like chessmen, but with human beings, subject to doubts and fears and suspicions, all sorts of emotions, hopes and ambitions, changing views and all that sort of thing, and they talk and they argue and they express themselves; and to proceed in that way, to use these little unorganized spots as a wedge through which to introduce something new and strange into these bargaining units, I think is a very dangerous thing and, instead of effectuating the general purpose of the national labor relations act, will have the very opposite effect."

Make New Friends Among Union Members — Please Old Friends

Wisconsin Labor Makes Big Strides, Legislation for Group Medical and Health Insurance Pushed

Milwaukee, Wis.—Organized labor in Wisconsin, according to the veteran officers of the state federation, President Henry Ohl and Secretary J. J. Handley, has made remarkable strides in the past year. In some respects this has been through the penetration of new fields.

"Our membership has increased more than 20,000 from July, 1937, to the same month of this year," said Secretary Handley. "Approximately 100 charters have been issued to old and new unions for membership in the state body. Our total membership is now conservatively 200,000. One of the new and gratifying developments is that this growth has, to quite an extent, come from places into which it was formerly considered that unionism could not penetrate. I refer to small towns and hamlets so characteristic of our state.

"Among such industries as canneries, dairies, etc., many of these new members are actually rural residents.

Co-operation With Farmers.

"Reactionary papers have endeavored to spread rumors of dissension between organized labor and the farmers' cooperatives. These rumors originated with two reactionary politicians, well known to us. The element of truth in such yarns is revealed by the fact that some of the farmers belonging to the tried old Farmers' Equity union are a party to such machinations. We have joined forces with the bona fide farmers' organization for more than twenty years. During this time, we have exchanged fraternal delegates with them. We will continue to do so."

Many activities conducted by the state federation during the past year included legislation sanctioning co-operative health and medical organizations. Two bills for this purpose were introduced by Assemblyman A. Biemiller.

Bill Makes Progress.

One provided permission for the establishment of medical co-operatives. This would enable unions, for example, to insure the medical care from physicians, hospitals and dentists. The second provides for acompulsory system of health insurance under which employes and employers would each contribute 2 per hent of the payroll to be administered by a health insurance division of the state board of health. The third extends permission to form non-profit corporations for the purposes above mentioned.

Secretary Handley said that progress was made in this direction during the last session and that bills would be introduced and pushed in the next legislature.

Organized labor in general has also taken definite steps toward co-operation between business and labor.

CIO Seen Waning.

"With respect to the CIO," Secretary Handley said, "it is a fact, stated without any animosity whatever, that it is rapidly waning in Wisconsin. It is my emphatic prediction that the unfortunate cleavage in the ranks of labor will disappear. If we are to fulfil this hope of being brothers again in a united movement, all that should be said now is to express regret because of the efforts wasted in striving against each other. We have lost opportunities for advancement because of the division but will increase the speed of our onward march when it is ended."

Odd Fellows' Charity Program At Warner Park

Barbecue, bingo, bands, bathing beauties, and a "Major Blowes" amateur show are among the amusement features planned for the Odd Fellows' fun-frolic program to be held at Warner park on the afternoon and night of Saturday, Aug. 20. There will also be a sensational diving exhibition, with a 70-foot plunge into a pool that is blazing with gasoline. There will be a softball game between the girls champions of Dalton, Ga., and a selected local team. There will be a horseshoe pitching tournament for the championship of East Tennessee. Numerous other carnival features will be included in the program and the committee is now considering adding a display of fireworks that probably will be the most elaborate ever seen in Chattanooga.

A barbecue feast is to be spread for ten thousand people, for the attendance will not be confined to Chattanooga since the Odd Fellows and Rebekah lodges in more than twenty nearby towns are co-operating. Proceeds from the event are to be devoted to giving the orphans and elderly inmates of the Odd Fellows' home at Clarksville a summer vacation, also to take the Clarksville boys' and girls' band to the Atlanta convention when an effort will be made to secure next year's convention for this city.

Prizes for the bathing beauty contest include a diamond ring, wrist watch and string of genuine culture pearls. These are now on display in Edwards & LeBron's window. There will also be a popularity prize of an equally valuable diamond ring that goes to the girl who sells the most of barbecue tickets. Beautiful girls are urged to go at once to the office of Dr. Louis Prosterman, 726½ Market street, and enter this event. The beauty winner will be acclaimed "Miss Chattanooga." She will be eligible to enter the statewide beauty contest this fall when a girl will be selected to go to Atlantic City as "Miss Tennessee." Amateur talent for the "Major Blows" show may enter at the same headquarters. Cash prizes will be awarded for this event. Tickets are now on sale at Eckerd's, or may be purchased from any Odd Fellow or Rebekah.

OKLAHOMA CITY TRACTION WORKERS AWARDED WAGE INCREASES AND BETTER WORKING CONDITIONS

Washington.—Big gains by local unions of the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America were reported in a telegram from W. D. Mahon, president, to President Green, of the American Federation of Labor. The telegram said in part:

"A smashing victory establishing the highest rate of wages ever paid upon local and interurban transportation properties in the south has been won by Division 993 of the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes, Oklahoma City, whose members are employed by the Oklahoma railway.

"An arbitration award handed down Aug. 2, granted increases in wages to local car and bus operators of 14 cents per hour, bringing their wage rate to 70 cents per hour. Interurban operators were increased 18 cents per hour, bringing their rates to 75 cents. Miscellaneous employes obtained wage increases from 10 to 30 per cent. Many improvements in working conditions were obtained; system seniority was established; the operators are to be paid overtime and travel time, they are to be given one week's sick leave with pay and one week's vacation with pay. The wage increases were retroactive to Feb. 1.

"This victory follows by two weeks an arbitration conducted by O. David Zimring, head of the labor bureau of the middle west, Chicago, for the employes of the Twin Cities Rapid Transit company, members of Division 1005 of the Amalgamated Association of Minneapolis and St. Paul, as a result of which the employes obtained increases in wages totaling $325,000, plus improved working conditions and a week's vacation with pay."

Mr. Green commented: "This is a fine example of the advances made from day to day by American Federation of Labor unions by peaceful negotiations."

S. O. S.

Little Bobby came in the house at noon looking very distressed in front of his mother.

"Mummy," he said, "is it true that an apple a day keeps the doctor away?"

"Yes, my dear," replied his mother. Why?"

"Well, I've kept ten doctors away this morning, but I'm afraid one will have to come this afternoon!"

Union Shop Agreement Signed by Tampa Cigar Manufacturers

Tampa, Fla.—The Cigar Makers' International Union of America, A. F. of L., and the Cigar Manufacturers' Association of Tampa have signed an agreement. It begins with union recognition, and the next article after this is as follows:

Section 1. The employer (the association) further agrees to employ only members in good standing of the Cigar Makers' International union as cigar makers, pickers and packers, trimmers, strippers, cigar machine operators, selectors and clerks, and all other productive employes.

Which is a statement of the plain shop that a Philadelphia lawyer would find it difficult to evade. If an employer cannot find enough union men himself, he applies to the union; and only when the union fails is he at liberty to get non-union men. Shop collectors of union dues are provided for and even provided with tables near the door." Hours of labor are 44 a week, dropping to 42 after October, 1939; and in dull times employment shall be kept up by cutting hours—at first to 36 a week.

The agreement entitles the manufacturer to the use of the union label.

One of the most remarkable things about this is that the agreement on all other matters was concluded and signed before an agreement on wages was reached. R. E. Van Horn, international president, believed this the best way to go about the matter, and in this he was backed by the opinion of the labor department. Negotiations on wages are now on.

YOUNGSTOWN STEEL COS. AND COPS IN CAHOOTS TO BREAK STRIKE, SENATE COMMITTEE IS TOLD

Washington.—The senate civil liberties committee continues its work of teaching the American public the mysteries of corporation morals. Its recent sessions have brought out the enthusiastic co-operation between company police and official police, and the readiness with which corporations reward (some kinds of) service.

For instance, how it is alleged the Youngstown Sheet & Tube company gave $1,000 to Carl Olson, chief of police of Youngstown, after the strike of 1937 had been broken.

The co-operation between the Youngstown police force, the Mahoning county sheriff's force, and the police forces of Republic Steel and Youngstown Sheet & Tube was almost perfect. To be sure of breaking the strike against the companies, Mahoning county bought about $20,000 worth of munitions—gas projectiles, tear gas guns, rifles, shotguns, bullet-proof vests, and what have you.

But the Youngstown company, not to be outdone, made the county a present of $1,715 worth of tear gas, munitions, etc. Sheriff Ralph E. Elser, who told this story, said that this gift included 25 long-range automatic tear gas guns, costing $995.

Sheriff Elser also told, in detail and under Senator La Follette's persistent cross question, how he—Elser—had sworn in as deputy sheriffs 152 men selected by the companies.

Earl Butler, chief of police of Republic Steel at its Youngstown plant, admitted on the stand that a few weeks after the strike was over, he drew $1,000 cash and took it to the office of Carl Olson, chief of the city police, and turned it over either to Olson himself or one of his two assistants. Of this sum, $300 was for tickets to a police benefit.

Butler's blind vouchers to cover strike expenses covered a total of $6,849.

One of the most touching incidents of the investigation came when Sheriff Elser was telling about deputizing 152 company men for strike duty. He was asked if he made investigation as to the character of these men before giving them license to carry arms.

"No," he said, "I trusted the companies to furnish me lists of reliable men."

IN THE NEWS

THURMAN W. ARNOLD

About six feet of well nourished nervous energy—that is one of the first things you note about Thurman Wesley Arnold, the new assistant attorney-general. It is energy under control; he sits waiting to speak at a dinner with the front legs of his chair resting on his own toes as if to hold himself down; but there is no sign of fidgeting or uncertainty. On the contrary, there is every sign of confidence tested by experience; and backed by a forcefulness which any prudent opponent would pause to estimate.

He was born in Laramie, Wyo., June 2, 1891, and graduated from Princeton in 1911—two years younger than the average A. B. degree is received. He took his lawyer's course at Harvard—one more of the free-minded, aspiring youngsters whom Felix Frankfurter is so lucky to get and so successful in training. He practiced law in Laramie; was mayor of Laramie and gave lectures in the law school of the University of Wyoming. Larger schools in the east began to beckon him; he was professor at Yale for quite a period before coming to Washington.

He has grayish eyes, dark hair, regular features; with that look of nervous—and nervy—vigor on his face. His attitude toward public problems is best expressed by the phrase which a critic applied to Justice Black—"he thinks the sacred cows are just ordinary heifers." He has gone a good ways already; and he hasn't stopped yet.

Q.—Why are golf balls made with rough surfaces?

A.—It has been found that they go farther and straighten with rough surfaces, because the air gives the ball a twist as it passes along.

The rural electrification administration has announced an allotment of $15,000 for the construction of a locker type community refrigeration plant near Piqua, O. The allotment goes to the Pioneer Rural Electric Co-operative, which in turn will lend the money to a group of 300 members and customers of the organization who will operate the refrigeration project. The plant will be powered by current from the Pioneer Rural Electric Co-operative lines. The construction and operation of this plant, the first to be financed with rural electrification funds, will be closely studied by REA as an experiment which may lead to the widespread use of community refrigeration plants.

After full consideration the council adopted and forwarded to President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, resolutions which emphasized the fact that "there are approximately one-quarter million insurance agents within the confines of the United States who are ready and willing to be organized into an insurance group affiliated with the American Federation of Labor," and recommended "that the A. F. of L. create ways and means to establish a group of organizers picked from insurance agents for the purpose of organizing the tremendous number of unorganized insurance agents."

George L. Russ, secretary of the Industrial and Ordinary Insurance Agents Union No. 21354, Washington, D. C., was elected president of the council, and R. U. Boyer, also a member of the Washington lodge, was elected secretary.

A. F. of L. Charges Labor Board With Favoring CIO

Statement Declares Board's Administration of Wagner Act Aids "the Committee Which Seeks to Set Up a Dual Labor Movement," and Holds That Government Agencies Recognizing the C. I. O. Promote the Interests of the Belligerent Group.

Washington.—A strong condemnation of the administrative actions of the national labor relations board in favor of the committee for industrial organization features an editorial from the forthcoming issue of the American Federationist, monthly magazine of the American Federation of Labor, analyzing the present relationship between the board and the American labor movement.

The editorial charges that the labor board has utterly failed to maintain a judicial attitude and has departed from the purpose of the national labor relations act, which "was only to assure workers the opportunity for freedom." Instead, it adds, "the act is administered in a way to promote the committee which seeks to set up a dual labor movement despite all the social and economic waste which dualism involves."

The labor board, the editorial declares, has granted the rights of belligerency to an insurgent group, and "every agency of the government that gives status to the C. I. O. gives the same recognition."

The A. F. of L. Editorial.

"Every living thing must develop as it grows in the course of performing its functions. Sometimes these living things or institutions develop very differently from what was intended through the original plan. This may be due to changing conditions in which functions must be performed, to the personal bias of those responsible for the institution, or to the purposes which one or more persons may wish to accomplish.

"The national labor relations board is a conspicuous example of development along lines quite unforeseen at the time of the enactment of the legislation creating the board. The law was intended to free workers from those unfair practices of employers which made it impossible for them to organize in their own unions for purposes of collective bargaining.

Right to Organize Is Fundamental

"Labor has always held that if the opportunity to organize were afforded, workers would be able to take care of their own problems through collective bargaining and other union activities. Labor wants too be free. One of the most difficult problems a democracy has to solve is that of maintaining freedom for all against the designs or good intentions of some.

"The close interdependence of our economic and social life makes legislation necessary to standardize the best practices in human relations where social welfare is concerned. In deciding upon such legislation we have had to weigh possible infringement of human freedom which may in turn eventually restrict social progress.

Labor Board Aids Dual Organization.

"In the case of the national labor relations act the purpose was only to assure workers the opportunity for freedom. There are, however, connected with the administration of the law persons who have in mind results widely different from merely assuring labor the right to membership in unions of their own choosing.

"Instead of performing their function with nice discrimination between official duty and personal inclination they have interpreted their duty to further a dual union organization as against the established organization in the unfortunate union conflict into which we have been precipitated.

Judicial Attitude Lacking.

"There is no question but that the union schism makes the work of the board much more difficult. These difficulties necessitate a judicial balance of judgment of the highest order and require that trial examiners, regional directors as well as the whole fact-finding staff and all who do work preliminary to the board's findings shall also put aside personal desires to favor one or the other contestants in the union controversy and do the work which is at least of semi-judicial character.

"The board was freed from all conciliation functions so that it might administer only the right of labor to organize reely.

"It is a commentary on the failure of the board to maintain a judicial attitude that the A. F. of L.—the organization which did more than any other to further the adoption of the national labor relations act—should feel that the act is administered in a way to promote the committee which seeks to set up a dual labor movement despite all the social and economic waste which dualism involves. The result is that government and groups outside the labor movement are attempting to determine inter-union problems and destinies.

Board Gives Insurgents Belligerent Rights.

"The board has given an insurgent group the rights of belligerents—a privilege accorded in international affairs only after careful deliberation and full consideration of its grave consequences. Every agency of government that gives status to the C. I. O. gives the same recognition.

"Surely thais is not freedom for workers to choose their own unions and representatives for collective bargaining, but union development under government patronage.

"Progressive legislation and practical democracy depend upon a united labor movement. Whatever groups or agencies give aid to insurgency within our movement defeat these purposes."

Insurance Agents Sue CIO For $1,000,000 Damag

Washington.—Suit against committee for industrial organization has been filed in U. S. district court here by the National Association of Industrial Insurance agents, which asserts it is an independent national organization with a membership of approximately 10,000. The organization asks $1,000,000 damages, charging the CIO libeled it in terming it a company union.

The suit named the CIO, its chairman, John L. Lewis, and other CIO chieftains defendant. It was filed by Horace C. Young, general counsel for the association.

The action carries far-reaching implications in the possibility it will determine whether the CIO can be sued as a legal entity, although it operates as an unincorporated enterprise. The association contended that the CIO is virtually a nationwide enterprise carrying on a nationwide campaign to organize industrial workers and dealing by contract with employers, and as such is a legal entity liable to suit.

The association's petition charged that CIO representatives in public utterances have described the organization as a company union, fostered and promoted by insurance companies. The CIO charges of company unionism, the petition said, have caused the association embarrassment and financial losses.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The week-old strike of a number of hundred service employes in two downtown department stores was ended here with the negotiation of an agreement by the officials of the Building Service Workers' International union, affiliated with the A. F. of L., and representives of the Labor Standards association, acting for the employers. Philadelphia, Pa.—The legality of the company union was unearthed here in the petition for an injunction brought by Sharp & Dohme, a pharmaceutical firm, to restrain the A. F. of L. Dickinson that its business with "hospitals, doctors and drug stores throughout the nation" was handicapped by the pickets. Union officials said the dispute arose in connection with the Sharp & Dohme employes' organization, which they described as a company union.

Dillon Says C. I. O. Is In the Collapse State

A. F. of L. Spokesman Asserts That Lewis Is Imitator of Debs, but Without His Kindness and Sincerity.

... John L. Lewis, ... of the ... for industrial organization, was denounced as a "brazen intimidator" by Frank J. Dillon, personal representative of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in an address before the convention of the International Stereotypers' and Electrotypers' Union of America here.

Declaring that Lewis has attempted to imitate the late Eugene V. Debs but that he is totally lacking in that "socialist leader's kindness and sincerity," Mr. Dillon said Lewis' C. I. O. is "like the 'House that Jack built,' now in a state of collapse."

"What Is the C. I. O.?"

Turning to the committee for industrial organization, nine of whose constituent national and international unions have had their charters revoked by the American Federation of Labor, Mr. Dillon said:

"What is the thing designated as CIO? Shall we call it the Communist International Organizations or the 'Can't Improve Organization?'"

"Certain philosophers and dreamers tell us what we need is industrial unionism. No. What we need is natural, normal, growth of economic forces, built on principles of voluntarism, and that is what the AFL stands for, and has stood for since its inception over fifty years ago."

"Our labor organization is prepared to sit down with industrial leaders right now and discuss the gigantic problem presented by the 12,000,000 unemployed persons now walking the streets," Mr. Dillon said.

"We realize it is a problem which will tax the ingenuity of every public-minded citizen, but it is a problem which must be settled by peaceful methods and intelligent understanding, not strife and lawbreaking."

Mr. Dillon is in charge of the American Federation of Labor office in Toledo, O. He also acts as traveling representative of the A. F. of L. and has reorganized A. F. of L. state federations of labor in Georgia, West Virginia and Kentucky.

The United States Chamber of Commerce is going to "educate" the American people against government "meddling" with business, and the surpassing virtues of "Big Business" itself. The chamber has preached that doctrine in four national campaigns—1930, 1932, 1934 and 1936—with a more losing result each time than the last.

BARBERTON UNION NAMED SOLE BARGAININGAGENT

Barberton, O.—American Federation of Labor Union No. 20186 has been certified by the national labor relations board as the sole collective bargaining agency for all hourly-paid employes of the Babcock and Wilcox company, of Barberton, including hourly-paid supervisors. The clerical employes and supervisors paid on a salaried basis are excluded from the bargaining union.

Based upon a comparison of union membership cards against company payrolls the affidavits of a field examiner for the board disclosed that of the 1,779 employes in the appropriate union, 1,310 had signed membership cards and were members in good standing of the union.

The Babcock and Wilcox company is engaged in the manufacture and sale of boilers and auxiliary products. It has plants in Barberton; Bayonne, N. J.; Fullerton, Pa., and Augusta, Ga. The company also has two subsidiaries, the Babcock and Wilcox Tube company, Beaver Falls, Pa., and the National Drill and Manufacturing company, New York, N. Y.

Machinists Declared Winner.

Washington.—The national labor relations board has certified the Aircraft Lodge of the International Association of Machinists as exclusive bargaining agency for approximately 1,500 employes of the Consolidated Aircraft corporation at San Diego, Cal. The International Association of Machinists, an A. F. of L. affiliate, defeated the CIO's United Automobile Workers 1,098 to 487 in an NLRB supervised election July 11.

AFL Sees Signs of Upturn; Survey Says Maintenance of Pay Stopped Worse Depression

Washington.—"Signs of business improvement have multiplied in the past month," reports the A. F. of L. in its monthly survey of business. "Confidence is strengthening rapidly and production and prices are turning upward.

"It is significant that though business activity fell back to within 18 per cent of the lowest depression level, workers' income was still 53 per cent higher than its depression bottoms. For this, we may thank the wage increases of 1937 and the absence of widespread wage cutting in 1938. This reserve of buying power has been a bulwark against further decline."

The survey notes that the increase in unemployment has been checked; in fact, June, which usually shows a considerable drop, actually showed the puny but encouraging gain of 7,000. Business failures are fewer. Reports of business improvements have come from the inside, so to speak; National Association of Purchasing Agents, for instance, and Standard Statistics, which gets word that "inquiries from customers have jumped sharply."

Wage Cuts Decrease.

Quite as important as anything else, inventories have dropped. In other words, the stocks which merchants keep on hand have decreased until more goods have to be made at a very early date.

Steel mills have climbed from 21 per cent to 37 per cent of capacity in three weeks.

"In May, when the business outlook was uncertain," says the survey, "and fear for the future dominated business thinking, 78,500 wage-earners received cuts. In June, with confidence growing and the outlook brighter, only 28,600 had their wages reduced."

Pump Priming Well Timed.

Speaking of the service of the government in turning back the tide, the survey says:

"Past experience has shown us that pump priming is not effective unless well timed. In the present case, however, the pump priming seemed to come at a strategic moment. Due in important measure to the maintenance of workers' buying power, business in early June, 1938, had recovered from much of its depression ill-health, and seemed close to the time when it could resume an upward climb to prosperity. Inquiries had been worked off to a large extent, prices were stabilizing, there was no serious price on credit inflation. Because our statistics are inadequate, however, it was not possible for business men in general to know the state of business health; an atmosphere of gloom had predominated and many had advocated wage cuts.

"Funds have already been allotted which will provide 9,237,000 man-months of employment before July 1, 1939."

Union Pact Gives Higher Pay to Radio Performers

Chicago.—Between three and four thousand actors and singers on network sustaining programs are to receive salary increases of from 15 to 300 per cent as a result of a contract entered into by the American Federation of Radio Artists and the Columbia and National broadcasting systems.

The contract covers members of local unions in New York City, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco and takes effect after its ratification by the locals.

The agreement calls for an "AFRA" or union shop, shortens working periods, per show, by one to two hours, and sets pay scales at $25, $21 and $17 for 1-hour, 30-minute, and 15-minute shows.

Minimum Scales Set.

Weekly minimum for staff vocal soloists is to be $65. Minimum in Chicago is to be $45 a week, with $3.35 to be added for net broadcasts from that city. Rate for group singers is to be $45 a man in New York City, $37 in Chicago, and $33 on the west coast, and an additional charge is to be made for net shows originating in cities outside New York.

All performers' contracts are to guarantee six weeks' employment, with a two-week lring notice.

Salaries and conditions for announcers are to be taken up next.

The union expects to begin contract negotiations with the Mutual Broadcasting system and the advertising agencies in the near future.

Labor Station First to Sign.

First agreement with any radio station was signed by WCFL, owned and controlled by the Chicago Federation of Labor.

The radio artists' union is an A. F. of L. affiliate, headed by Eddie Cantor, the well known comedian. Fifteen local unions, with a combined membership of five or six thousand, have been established by this new international which, when formed, had a membership of around 200.

Vol. XXIII. CHATTANOOGA, TENNESSEE, FRIDAY, AUGUST 19, 1938 Number 16

A. F. of L. UNIONS TO STAGE RECORD-BREAKING LABOR DAY CELEBRATIONS IN CITIES THROUGHOUT NATION

Washington, D. C.—The American Federation of Labor will celebrate Labor Day this year throughout the entire nation, turning out in numbers far in excess of anything witnessed in previous years.

President William Green leads the way.

Mr. Green will be the guest of Providence, R. I., labor. He will make an address to be broadcast over Station WJAR and a national hookup, at 2.30 P. M. September 5. The address will be made at a dinner at the Narragansett Hotel. More than 1,500 are expected to attend. Indications are that there will be in excess of 30,000 in the parade here, which will be led by President Green. The Boston Central Labor Union and other big central bodies have expressed their intention of participating in the celebration. Plans are going forward to make the celebration a "New England Day." A royal welcome, both as to the participation in the parade, and as the principal guest at the banquet, will be given President Green.

Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, Jos. P. Frey, president, Metal Trades Department, Joseph A. McInerney, president, Building and Construction Trades Department, and I. M. Ornburn, secretary-treasurer, Union Label Trades Department of the A. F. of L. will be principal speakers at other Labor Day celebrations, to be announced later.

A mammoth Labor Day parade will be held at Buffalo, N. Y., on August 22. The celebration will serve to commemorate Labor Day and also to open the annual convention of the New York State Federation of Labor. More than 27,000 are expected to march. Postmaster General James Farley has been invited to sit in the reviewing stands. Other invitations have been extended to national and state officials.

Powderhorn Park Minneapolis, Minn., will be the scene of an old fashioned Labor Day picnic. Senators Shipstead and Lundeen, Governor Benson and George W. Lawson, secretary of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor, Chief Justice Gallagher, Justice Peterson, Commissioner Atwood are on the speaking program.

Los Angeles, Calif., will hold a parade in which it is estimated more than 200 A. F. of L. unions will participate. It is thought that Hollywood studio groups will present a spectacle which will please the hundreds of thousands of people expected to line the route of mrch.

The Labor Day parade and celebration, sponsored by the Denver, Colo., Trades and Labor Assembly and the Denver Building Trades and Construction Council holds every promise of surpassing the 1937 huge demonstration.

A parade which is expected to exceed the 27,000 in the line of March last year will be held at Long Beach, Cal. Dave Beck, vice-president of the Teamsters Union will speak.

The Santa Maria Central Labor Council, Santa Maria, Clif., promises a celebration that will represent the major event in the central coast district. A parade will feature the day's activities which will include every imaginable form of entertainment.

The Labor Day committee of the Central Labor Union, Terre Haute, Ind., will celebrate Labor Day with a gigantic parade and promises a turnout that will surpass anything seen here in years.

Kansas City will hold the largest Labor day parade in its history. Fifteen bands will participate in the parade. A grand picnic will be held at Fairyland Park which will climax the day's demonstration.

Francis Dillon, ace A. F. of L. Organizer, will speak at Duluth, Minn. One of the entertainment features of the Labor Day celebration there will be a beauty and talent contest. Robert A. Olson, president of the Minnesota Federation of Labor will also speak.

These and many other important cities, including New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Dallas and Houston, Texas, will stage various forms of celebration on September 5.

Dowell E. Patterson New Head of Union Printers Home

Colorado Springs, Colo.—Dowell E. Patterson of Charleston, S. C., long prominent in affairs of the International Typographical Union in the South, has assumed the duties of superintendent of the Union Printers Home here, succeeding James C. McCoy, who was removed by the board of trustees recently.

A member of the I. T. U. for 19 years, Patterson has been southern representative for the union since 1930. For the last 11 years, he has been president of the Virginia-Carolinas Typographical Conference. He was president of the South Carolina Federation of Labor for six years and has been a delegate to conventions of the I. T. U. and A. F. of L. He served two terms as a member of the South Carolina Legislature.

Workers' Compensation Fund Prospers in Ohio

Columbus, O.—The Ohio state insurance fund, which writes all workmen's compensation insurance in Ohio, in accordance with the policy established by the American Federation of Labor, has published its balance sheet as of Dec. 31, 1937. Total assets are given as $55,702,909, of which bonds amount to $48,728,277 and cash amounts to $3,313,752. The 1937 earned premium was $20,531,783.

Union Printer Loses Mother

Friends of Ona Elder, member of the Typographical Union, were grieved to learn of the death of his mother, Mrs. Mary Jane Elder, last Sunday. Mrs. Elder was 91 years old when she died and had been a resident of Chattanooga for more than fifty years. She was a member of the East Chattanooga Baptist church.

She is survived by one daughter and three sons, all of this city.

Funeral services were held at the residence of her daughter Tuesday morning at 10 a.m., with the Rev. J. N. Bull officiating.

The Labor World joins the many friends of the family in offering sympathy to the family.

Executive Board Brands "Unfair" Orient Flour

Second Week of Strike at Chattanooga Bakery Is Unchanged.

Only change in the strike at the Chattanooga Baking company's cracker plant was the action of the executive board of the Chattanooga Central Labor union in declaring the products of that company as "unfair" to organized labor.

Pickets are still about the plant, which is closed down, although last week management notified the union that it would start up operations last Monday.

Management refused to recognize the closed shop nor to increase the very low pay being received by its employes.

According to observers, products of this company are not being received very well by distributors, and truckloads are being returned. A local jobber returned a carload of crackers when they learned of the policy of the company.

Stove Mounters Name New President

St. Louis, Mo.—Edward J. Winters of Belleville, Ill., has been elected president of the Stove Mounters' International Union. He is president of Local No. 4 of the union and succeeds Edward W. Kaiser of St. Louis, who has been international president and international secretary-treasurer.

NOTICE

Chattanooga Central Labor Union will meet Monday night in regular session, Central Labor Hall, West Seventh Street, at 7:30 p.m. All delegates are requested and expected to be present.

CURTIS SIMS
President

ERSKINE MABEE,
Secretary.

7-Up Union Here

The Orange Crush-Seven-Up Bottling company is being very much embarrassed these days by rumors flying around that they are "unfair."

This company is completely union. In fact, the three owners are members of Local 79, Brewery Workers, and have been good members for many years. Here is how the rumors started:

The Seven-Up company in Memphis has been declared "unfair." It is an entirely separate management and is in no way connected with the Chattanooga franchise.

Word from Memphis has come to Chattanooga concerning the trouble in Memphis, and some people have taken it for granted that the fight automatically extends to Chattanooga.

Seven-Up in Chattanooga is all union. The Chattanooga company deserves the patronage of organized labor in Chattanooga.

Teachers' Convention Opens in Cedar Point

Union's Membership Has Doubled in Two Years—Prof. Albert Einstein Is a Member.

Latest news flash indicate that Stanton E. Smith, of Chattanooga, is being mentioned as the new president of the American Federation of Teachers.

Cedar Point, O.—More than 500 delegates, from 250 communities in all sections of the United States, were present at the opening session of the twenty-second annual convention of the American Federation of Teachers, which opened here.

The membership of the American Federation of Teachers, an affiliate of the A. F. of L., has more than doubled in the past two years. In the three cities of Cleveland, New York and Chicago there are more than 20,000 members. The organization has locals in such famed universities as Yale, Harvard, Ohio State university, Stamford, Northwestern and the University of Wisconsin.

Dr. Albert Einstein joined the group this year as a charter member of the Princeton local.

The convention will deal with problems confronting schools in all sections of the country, and will have its official theme the question, "How May the Schools Better Serve America?"

In issuing the call for the convention the Executive Council of the American Federation of Teachers declared:

"Education in America is faced with such serious problems in many places that the very existence of free public education is threatened. Internationally we are on the threshold of another world war and democracy hangs in the balance.

"Nationally we are faced with the perplexing problems of 'educating for democracy' in the throes of economic recession. In many places throughout the nation children in the schools are again asked to pay the price of our economic and social failures. In many states and local school districts attempts are being made to restrict educational opportunity and to curtail the school program."

Speakers before the convention include Dr. Floyd Reeves, chairman of President Roosevelt's advisory committee on education, scheduled to discuss the part the federal government can play in the financial support of education in districts too poor to support adequate schools, and Mrs. Elsie B. Parker, president of the National Teachers' Union of England, who is a fraternal delegate representing the 150,000 members of her group.

Busy Bee Cafe Signs Contract

The Busy Bee cafe, on East Seventh street, which has been picketed for several weeks, signed a union agreement last week, and The Labor World has been notified that members and friends of organized labor are welcome in that place of business.

B'h'm Yellow Cab Does Knox Trick

Birmingham, Ala.—The Yellow Cab company operating here, which also owns the Black and White Cab company, tried a cute stunt recently which, it is said, the Yellow Cabbers have tried in other cities. The company made a "fake" sale of its business, and started operating under "new" ownership. Union men were dropped and non-union drivers were put on the cabs. S. E. Roper, of the A. F. of L., was called in, and with a committee immediately appeared before the city officials and demanded an investigation which disclosed that the sale of the cab company was a fake.

City officials notified the company that if a deal had been made the "new" company would have to get a new permit to operate and a new bond would have to be made by the cab owners. After considerable discussion the company was forced to continue its operations under the old permit, observe its contract with the union, discharge the non-union drivers and put the old men back on the cabs.

A. F. of L. Executive Council Meets in Atlantic City Aug. 22

Washington.—Frank Morrison, secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, announced that the next regular meeting of the A. F. of L. Executive Council will be held in Atlantic City, N. J., beginning Monday, Aug. 22, 1938. The Executive Council consists of the president of the American Federation of Labor, the secretary-treasurer and fifteen vice-presidents.

Indiana Brick Workers Gain Increased Wages

THE RUSSIAN PURGE

(From Washington State Labor News, Seattle)

[illegible] Russia must be very unpleasant not only for the average Russian workman or peasant, but even for leading [illegible] of the communist party. Now comes the story of the execution of Comrade Dmitrov, chairman of the international communist organization. A communist for thirty years, Dimitrov sprang into world wide prominence in 1933, when as one of the defendants in Germany's famed reichstag fire trial, he denounced the nazi regime in a nazi court and accused Hitler's chief aid, Goering, in Goering's presence, of instigating and engineering the fire.

That tried and true communist finally finds himself a victim of Dictator Stalin's newest purge. We might reasonably believe that among the communists in Russia, holy though they may be, there may be some traitors—but it sounds somewhat fishy to find hundreds of lifelong leaders in the communist movement executed presumably on account of traitorous relations with some foreign power. We do not know, and perhaps never will know, the true story. We have a right to presume, however, that all is not well in the "golden land" of the soviets.

What Next?

Cotton cabins, developed by a Baltimore lumber firm, are the latest resort dwellings. The cabin has a wooden frame and canvas walls and roof. It is low in cost and can be put up in a few hours. The specially impregnated canvas is said to be fireproof and mildew resistant and good for years of use.

Q.—What is the difference between a certified check and a cashier's check?

A.—A certified check is written by the depositor and "certified" by the bank, making the bank responsible for payment. The cashier's check is the bank's own order to pay.

Cooks' and Waiters' Scraps

Louise Tinker, Correspondent

Our spirits are not as high at [illegible] writing as they usually stay. We can easily explain that when we say we have been sick for three days. Today we are writing from our bed.

The president of our own Central Body, Mr. Curtis R. Sims, who also represents the Bakers, freezed into Knoxville on Monday night and visited the Central Body. Jess Stewart, of the Cracker Workers, was with him.

We have a nice new modern restaurant opening here in a day or so. The management has promised to operate it as a union house.

We hear that the Busy Bee sandwich shop is back in the fold.

Arthur R. Cook, of the Pittsburgh office of the American Federation of Labor, has been here in Knoxville for several days. He is now engaged in working among the employes of the Aluminum Company of America at Maryville and Alcoa.

Wives and "girl friends" of the striking taxi drivers are helping the boys to picket.

The Bus and Street Car Operators' union is among the strongest of the organizations. The Typographical rates at the top, too.

We have been able to read quite a bit these days that we have been indisposo. We have read "Workers in American History"—a standard work on the background of labor in America. This was written by James O'Neal. A debate, "Should the American Worker Form a Political Party of Their Own?" was most interesting.

Are you patronizing our union houses as you should?

There's a certain union man working in a certain union shop on Broad street and when he leaves his work at 6 o'clock in the afternoon he walks four blocks to eat at one of the Crystals in the 600 block of Market street while there's four union houses in that particular block, thirteen in that vicinity and one in the same block where he works. We have watched this unionist for several months and we are worked up to the stage of giving him some friendly advice. We might even tell you who he is. The interesting part is that he knows we will expose him.

Our editor says to us, "Where do you get that 'we' in your writings?" We reply, "All my life I have been big I until I entered the labor movement. Now big I is we." We might add that our family appreciates the change.

MEIER'S Meat Markets in the Easy Way Stores are UNFAIR!

JOHN R. STEELMAN

He isn't in the news as much as he ought to be, considering that the service of which he is director settled in his first year over 4,000 labor difficulties, involving 1,600,000 men. But he is getting there, steadily.

Steelman was born in Thorntown, Ark., in 1900, and knows the logging camps of the South by experience. Harder, more grueling work, more absolutely under the despotic controll of the boss, it would be hard to find anywhere. Steelman, six feet, one and strongly—which doesn't mean heavily—built, had strength enough to do a little thinking over his work. It guided his education.

He went to Henderson-Brown college in Arkansas with $65; and made it. He graduated there in 1921; and went on to Vanderbilt University. He took a master's degree in sociology there in 1924 and a degree in social ethics the next year, being instructor as well as student all the time. He repeated the double role at Harvard and at the University of North Carolina, and was professor at Alabama College for five years.

Then he came to the Department of Labor, where he got the most valuable of all graduate courses in association with Ed. McGrady. Steelman has been Commissioner of Conciliation, special assistant to the Secretary of Labor, and since June, 1937, has been Director of conciliation. Whether the job keeps him busy or not, you can judge from the figures given.

He is fair of skin, blue-gray of eye, dark of hair, which is getting a bit thin on the edges. But he is still husky.

National Emergency Council Report Reveals Why President Calls South Nation's No. 1 Economic Problem—Praise for "Davey" Lewis.

By GEORGE L. KNAPP

Washington.—The south—meaning thereby the thirteen states from Virginia to Texas—has one-[illegible] of the children of the United [illegible] and three-fourths of the [illegible] child laborers of from 10 to 15 years.

In twenty important industries, wages averaged 16 cents an hour lower in the south than in the rest of the country in 1937.

In the same year, the average income per capita in the south was $314 in the rest of the coun- [illegible] $564.

These are facts taken from the report made by the National Emergency council to the presi- dent. They are enough, of them- [illegible] to make one understand [illegible] the president calls the south [illegible] No. 1 problem.

* * *

Here are some more figures from [illegible]

Teachers in the south compare favorably with teachers elsewhere; southern states spend a larger pro- [illegible] of their tax income on ed- [illegible] than do the rest of the country. But the south is so poor [illegible] the average an- nual salary of teachers in Arkan- sas was $490, compared to $2,500 in New York. The assessed value of taxable property in the south was $463 per person in 1935; in [illegible] southeastern states it was [illegible]

On health, the words of the re- port must be quoted directly:

"In the south, where family in- comes are exceptionally low, the sickness and death rates are un- usually high. Wage differentials become in fact differentials in health and life; poor health, in turn, affects wages. The low in- come belt of the south is a belt of sickness, misery and unnecessary death."

* * *

In his social security speech, President Roosevelt paid deserved tribute to Congressman David J. Lewis, of Maryland, as "one of the American pioneers in the cause of social security." He also put Lewis as first of the four men whom he publicly thanked for their untiring work for all social re- forms. But workers who know their "onions," in Maryland or out, hope that the president will come out with a direct indorsement of Lewis for the senate that will sweep all doubt out of the pri- mary. He is running against Sen- ator Millard Tydings.

No man in either house—except possibly Senator Wagner, with whom, by the way, Lewis collaborated on the social security act—has such a long and active record as Lewis in supporting labor leg- islation. Someone has said that Lewis was preaching the new deal 25 years before it was born—and it is just about true.

Comment On World Events

Labor day, 1938, brings a brighter outlook than Labor day, 1937.

Last year business was declin- ing. This year it seems definitely on the mend, with activity grow- ing in many lines. That means more jobs, more wages. The hap- pier outlook makes sweeping wage reductions unlikely. Largely as a result of labor's educational work for more than half a century, pub- lic sentiment is against low wages. Which makes for maintenance of wage scales and support of labor's stand against wage slashes.

* * *

Labor can look back with great satisfaction on its progress since the first Labor day celebration in 1882. The fight for better condi- tions has been hard and at times it seemed as if no progress was be- ing made. But any losses were only temporary and the trend was steadily upward.

Progress was greatest when there was labor solidarity and unity. Division brings danger. "In union there is strength" has been recognized since the dawn of his- tory. At this Labor day time, as always, there are compelling rea- sons for labor unity. The sooner leaders resume unity efforts with a determination to succeed, the bet- ter for labor and America.

* * *

"Getting Back to Civilization?" asks Talburt, the cartoonist, in a picture on the 22 per cent reduc- tion in automobile deaths in the first half of 1938.

Talburt's question is very much in order. Real civilization and the horrible auto death toll in the United States do not go together. As long as the nation permits the killing of 40,000 persons annually by motor vehicles, as it did last year, it can hardly call itself truly civilized. So the 22 per cent re- duction in deaths this year over the corresponding month last year is a cause for rejoicing.

The National Safety council says that should the same percent- age of decline continue through the last six months of the year the number of 1938 traffic deaths would be the lowest since 1928, with a total saving of 8,700 lives.

* * *

Speaking of highway safety, why not safety committees in central labor bodies and local unions? Their formation everywhere would tend to make America more safety- conscious. They could co-operate with other safety organizations as well as work for safer driving by union members. Unions with death benefit systems pay out substan- tial sums for auto deaths, many of which are preventable. Anything that makes for safer highways would ease the burden on union benefit systems.

Shopcrafts Advance

Atlanta, Ga.—That the shop crafts of the railroads of the south are making headway is evidenced by reports coming from the office of F. T. Cornelius, grand lodge representative of the Machinists.

At Augusta a contract was signed, effective as of July 1, by the C. & W. C. railroad and six shop crafts, giving this road a standard agreement instead of the company union agreement heretofore existing. This is the first standard agreement obtained by the crafts since 1922.

At Wilmington, N. C., a machinist's local was instituted recently, and an agreement signed with the A. C. L. railroad, covering the machinists and the boilermakers. This is the first agreement the workers have had for these units at Wilmington since 1922.

At Savannah a standard agreement has been signed by the Savannah & Atlanta railroad, supplanting the agreement under which the company and the employes have been operating. Three men who were discharged sometime ago are put back to work, under terms of the agreement, with eight months' back pay for each.

AFL Mobilized to Aid Wage Law Enforcement

Green Urges Central Labor Bodies in 792 Cities to Become Information Centers Regarding Measure Which Goes Into Effect October 24.

Washington. — The American Federation of Labor opened a drive to help enforce the new federal wage and hour law, which goes into effect Oct. 24, and to make its provisions known to the widest possible number of unorganized workers so that they can become the recipients of its benefits.

In a letter to the secretaries of all central labor unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, William Green, president of the Federation, enclosed copies of a pamphlet prepared by the A. F. of L. explaining the provisions of the law and urged these officials to appoint local wage and hour committees to disseminate information about the act, to advise affiliated unions and groups of unorganized workers regarding enforcement procedure and to make known to the unorganized workers how standards above the minimum can be attained by them through organization into unions.

"The effectiveness of the new law," Mr. Green said, "will depend on how well its enforcement is policed by organized labor. That is why it is important for the officers and members of the American Federation of Labor unions to know what the act provides and how it is enforced."

"Wage-earners of America must remember that the fair labor standards act is their act," Mr. Green declared. "They must take part in the determination of minimum wage standards and in the enforcement of all standards established by this law. This they can do through organization.

"If workers fail to take part in its development, the act can easily be turned into oppressive regulation by arbitrary government fiat. But if the workers, through nationwide union representation, will voice their needs and desires, this act will become a powerful tool of true industrial democracy with which labor will forge a higher standard of work and a better standard of living."

Compulsory Work Edict Imposed on Austrians

The United States trade commissioner at Vienna reports that a decree issued by the German minister for interior affairs provides that compulsory work service will be introduced in Austria, effective Oct. 1, 1938. The German law and all decrees concerning compulsory work will be extended on that date to all Austrian territory.

PHOTO-ENGRAVERS' OFFICERS REPORT STEADY PROGRESS BY UNION IN LAST YEAR

Houston, Tex.—Steady gains have been made since the last convention, delegates to the 34th annual convention of the International Photo-Engravers' Union of North America were told as the convention opened here.

Edward J. Volz, of New York City, president of the international union, and Secretary-Treasurer Henry F. Schmal, of St. Louis, reported that the past year has been one of exceptional progress for the organization, insofar as increasing its membership, securing contractual relations with additional employers, and in improving employment standards are concerned.

Reports of officers indicate approximately 25 per cent of the members at present are employed on a 35-hour work week standard, 45 per cent on a 37½-hour week, and the balance on a 40-hour basis. Approximately 90 per cent have secured a 5-day week.

The International Photo-Engravers' union carries on considerable welfare activities, insuring its members against unemployment, sickness and death. Approximately a million dollars per year is provided in unemployment benefits alone, the importance of which is recognized when considering that photo-engraving is a small industry, and although more than 95 per cent organized, the union is composed of but ten thousand members.

Officers of the international union are Edward J. Volz, New York City, president; Matthew Woll, Chicago and Washington, D. C.; Frank H. Glenn, Philadelphia, Pa.; William C. Colby, Toronto, Ont., vice-presidents, and Henry F. Schmal, St. Louis, Mo., secretary-treasurer.

Department Store Sues Clerks' Union

Oakland, Cal.—Whittehorne and Swan, department store, has filed suit for $50,000 damages against officials of the Retail Clerks Union and other labor leaders and asked for an injunction to restrain picketing.

The petition for an injunction, filed by Attorney J. Paul St. Sure, alleges that a union "closed shop" contract is illegal, and asserted that the state labor code makes the closed shop "against public policy."

St. Sure based his argument on the clause outlawing the "Yellow Dog" contract as opposed to public policy. The "Yellow Dog" contract was explained as one by which an employer binds his employes not to join a union. Consequently, St. Sure maintained, the provision would prohibit an employer from compeling his employes to join a union with which he had made a "closed shop" agreement.

The suit sets forth that the store refused the union shop, believing it to be unlawful, and that A. F. of L. officials unlawfully conspired to compel the store "with threats, violence and coercion" to enter such a contract.
